BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Party realignments that are taking place appear to favor the Republicans at the expense of the Democrats.

The Democrats are suffering defections on both their conservative right and radical left flanks from which the Republicans are profiting directly or indirectly. The Republicans are threatened with only minor losses to date.

The Republicans have little to lose and much to gain. They suffered their big defections in 1932 when liberal and radical Republicans and wet Republicans went over to Mr. Roosevelt by the million. Presumably most of the wet Republicans already are back in the fold. How many of the liberal Republicans may be attracted back by the Republican platform and Gov. Landon's stand on public questions is anybody's guess at this writing.

Union Party Menaces Democrats.

On the left the big menace to the Democrats is the third party, the Union party of Congressman William Lemke and the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin. Its farm mortgage refinancing scheme is calculated to appeal particularly to western farmers, some of whom voted the Republican ticket four years ago. Among such the Landon and Knox ticket may lose some votes.

But the overwhelming majority of those attracted to the third party undoubtedly is composed of working men and farmers who voted the Democratic ticket in 1932 and would vote it again this year if the choice were confined to Republicans and Democrats. In this quarter, therefore, the defection Mr. Roosevelt faces is a serious one.

To the extent that the Townsendites follow Dr. Townsend in voting for Lemke the Republicans will be injured as much as the Democrats, possibly more, for a large percentage of the $200 a month old age pension advocates unquestionably are Republicans.

Indorsement Refused.

Refusal, however, of the Townsendites' convention to indorse the third party ticket has minimized the danger from this quarter for both parties. A more important factor likely to react unfavorably to Mr. Roosevelt and indirectly in favor of Gov. Landon is the bitter hostility displayed by the Townsendites in their Cleveland convention toward the

TOWNSENDITES NEAR OPEN RIFT ON CANDIDATES

Directors May Quit Posts in Row.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., July 18.—[Special.]—The second annual Townsendite convention adjourned here this afternoon just in time to avoid a split on the question of the presidential election.

A resolution was proposed to the convention to take out of the hands of Dr. Francis E. Townsend himself the selection of directors and place it in the authority of the "citizen's maximi" or district leaders. The result showed Townsend to control the rank and file of the membership.

"If it is your will that I renounce ownership — which means control — then I will," Townsend said as a roar of "no" swept the crowded public auditorium. Amendment upon amendment entangled debate until finally the whole resolution was tabled.

Hold Ranks for New Deal.

But Gomer Smith of Oklahoma, who has a date to see James A. Farley the first of the week, gave evidence that his work in behalf of the Roosevelt campaign was effective, if not with the rank and file of the Townsendites, at least with a majority of the leaders.

At the close of an all evening secret conference eight of the leaders, including four members of the board of directors, declared themselves for the Democrats and against Congressman William Lemke of the new Union party, who is to address the delegates in an open air meeting tomorrow as the climax of the efforts of Dr. Townsend to deliver to Lemke the support of this country-wide organization.

Their action was considered an attempt to keep themselves in the good graces of Democrats in their home districts after the convention had applauded wildly every time a speaker scored the New Deal administration.

Townsend Remains at Helm.

The climax of the convention itself was interesting as showing the grip of Townsend on the body of the delegates. Apparently having reconsidered his agreement for the "democratization" of the organization by placing its affairs in the hands of a new corporation, Dr. Townsend caused the defeat of the resolution putting the reorganization into effect. The result of this was to leave him in full control of the original old age revolving pension fund.

Only a discouraging sentence or two from the 70 year old leader was necessary to sweep the democracy plan into the discard. He said he favored the resolution, but warned that serious results might follow and that the consequences of the adoption of the resolution would be on the convention. That was sufficient. A motion from the floor to table the resolution was passed with a tremendous roar from the body of the house.

Charge Breaking of Faith.

This was the windup of an exciting day. Almost all of the leaders who have followed Dr. Townsend blindly in the past turned against him last night and unanimously refused to carry out his edict to oust vice president Gomer Smith because of his attack on the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith of Louisiana, self-proclaimed successor to the late Huey Long.

That scarcely hidden schism prevailed when the convention opened this morning. It was because of it, it is believed, that Dr. Townsend backed away from the democratization plan, and it was because of this retreat that directors and others were buzzing all evening long, charging their chief with breaking his word.

The day also was marked by two periods of high excitement in the convention. An appeal was made for funds with which to oppose a court attack upon the organization filed in the Cleveland courts yesterday.

Shower Cash Upon Townsend.

The response was a shower of contributions that began with delegates and members hurrying to the platform with their gifts to be placed in Dr. Townsend's hands and wound up with a businesslike collection of currency and pledges. After the adjournment more gifts continued to come in and tonight it was said that the

Mercury Sinks Back to Par in City and State

The heat wave is broken in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, Forecaster J. R. Lloyd said last night, and normal summer temperatures will prevail through the region today and tomorrow. But relief is in sight for only scattered portions of the great plains area, where yesterday the drouth and blistering heat held sway for the seventeenth day.

For Chicago, the forecast for today and tomorrow is fair with moderate north to northeast winds. The mercury is expected to fluctuate in the 70s. Last night rain fell in southern Wisconsin and northwestern Illinois and thunderstorms were looked for in Chicago early in the morning.

Showers Cool City.

The rainfall in Chicago yesterday measured only .10 of an inch at the University of Chicago station, but there were much heavier showers in other parts of the city and the suburbs during the early morning hours. At Grays Lake in Lake county a rainfall of half an inch was reported.

The maximum temperature reading in Chicago was 81 degrees at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In the evening the mercury was in the middle 70s.

In the western suburbs the readings were higher, Maywood and Melrose Park topping the list with 98 degrees.

Among the Illinois towns which reported showers helpful to crops were Rockford, Dixon, Ottawa, and Kankakee. Heavy rains can still bring a fair corn crop to Illinois, according to J. H. Lloyd, assistant state director of agriculture.

Many States Continue Hot.

The heat and drouth also appear to be relieved in portions of Michigan and Minnesota, where cooler weather will continue today. But there is no general alleviation in sight for Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, the Dakotas, Montana, and Wyoming, where crops and livestock are suffering.

The all-time heat record for Wichita, Kas., was broken yesterday when the thermometer stood at 112 degrees. Record breaking readings of 110 degrees were reported at Dodge City, Kas., and Fort Smith, Ark.

At Washington the Agricultural Adjustment administration took steps yesterday to provide feed for livestock in the drouth stricken northwest. This was done by raising the ban on the harvesting of forage crops by farmers who are qualifying for soil conservation payments.

GAMBLING GOES ON AS USUAL IN RAIDED TAVERN

The Lincoln tavern, gambling palace on Dempster road in Morton Grove, resumed its regular business last evening after 27 hours of operating as a prosy dining and drinking establishment. The place was raided Friday afternoon by policemen led by Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney and about 50 women patrons were told to go home and wash their dishes. Eight employés were arrested.

Capt. Gilbert announced yesterday that there would be no more gambling in the famous roadhouse, and he stationed two detectives there all day to see that his edict was enforced. Last night the two detectives were not in evidence, but there were 350 patrons playing roulette, black jack, chuck-a-luck, dice, and keno. About half the customers were women.

"Things are a little slow tonight," said an attendant. "I guess people don't know we're open again. But everything is O.K. We'll have betting on the horse races again Monday."

At the Morton Grove county highway police station the desk sergeant said he didn't know anything about the Lincoln tavern and its business. Capt. Gilbert could not be reached for an explanation of what happened to his two guards.

MT. M'KINLEY IS PHOTOGRAPHED FOR FIRST TIME

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Successful photographing for the first time of the peak of Mount McKinley, highest on the North American continent, was reported today to the National Geographical society.

Bradford Washburn, leader of the society's Mount McKinley aerial expedition, telegraphed that both still and motion pictures had been made of the Alaskan summit as a specially equipped plane cleared it by a scant 700 feet. The mountain top is 20,300 feet—well above three miles—above sea level.

The society was informed that the expedition placed Mount Hunter on the map for the first time. Mount Hunter's existence had been doubted by some geographers. Washburn found reason for the doubts in the other peaks and rough glaciers which make it inaccessible.

Members of the expedition used heated oxygen and reported temperatures as low as 9 degrees below zero.

Louisville, Ky., July 18.—[U. P.]—A woman, her throat slit and brutally stitched together with white shirt buttons sewn along the wound, was found dazed in a churchyard today.

She said she was Edna Morris, 33, of Cincinnati, O. Common black thread was used to sew the wound, which stretched "from ear to ear," police said.

She Blames Auto Crash.

Described as pretty and well dressed, the woman was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of the amazing injury. She told police at a hospital that she had been injured in an automobile accident three days ago and that men in the car dressed the wound with surgical thread. Tonight, after further questioning failed to satisfy police, the woman was jailed on charges of disorderly conduct and vagrancy.

But surgeons insisted the slash was not more than thirty-six hours' old.

The wound was not deep enough to reach a vital spot. Six buttons were spaced along it as though some one had callously meant them to be used in closing the wound.

Rough Bandages Applied.

The crude stitches and buttons were removed by physicians who reclosed the wound with surgical thread.

Attention of the police was attracted to the woman by her apparently dazed condition as she stood in the church areaway. Rough bandages had been placed around her head and throat.

TRUCK PLUNGES OVER MOUNTAIN; 1 DIES, MANY HURT

Welch, W. Va., July 18.—(AP)—A truck filled with young people out on a pleasure ride overturned on a mountainside near the mining town of Gary, tonight, killing one youth and injuring an undetermined number of others.

Louis Barta, 17, was killed when the machine rolled 100 feet down the steep hill.

Three of the injured, whose names were not learned immediately, were taken to a hospital here. Others hurt were treated at a doctor's office in Gary.

Liberty Ended in Danzig by Nazi Decrees

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, July 18.—(AP)—Nazi power sought tonight to crush opposition to its control of this free city.

By administrative decree, Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Nazi controled senate, limited activities of independent groups seeking to halt the growing influence of German national socialism. He ordered:

1. Dissolution of any organization whose members, with knowledge of its executive board, spreads news "endangering the state interest."

2. Prohibition of review by the courts of police measures of a political nature, including those aimed at the right of assembly, the press, and free speech.

3. Prohibition of Jewish ritual slaughtering for food purposes.

4. Imposition of three month protective custody on persons declared to be "endangering the public peace."

Sets Aside Constitution.

By his administrative orders, the senate president, in the opinion of diplomatic observers, virtually set aside the free city's constitution, adopted 16 years ago when the territory first became a league of nations protectorate.

Greiser warned the league assembly at Geneva early this month the free city government would not tolerate any discussion of its domestic affairs. The decree, however, surprised Sean Lester, league high commissioner for Danzig, and Casimir Papee, Polish envoy to Danzig. Only 10 days ago Greiser assured Papee he would not violate the constitution. Poland contends the Danzig constitution is an integral part of its status and this status cannot be changed by unilateral action. Poland has important economic and minority interests in the free city.

Poles Indignant.

Polish indignation at Greiser's decree vented itself in unofficial demands by Polish residents that Warsaw dispatch troops, or at least police, to safeguard their constitutional rights. It was the opinion of resident Poles the Danzig senate by its decrees transferred the Nazi conflict with the league of nations into one with Poland.

Startles Polish Government.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, Poland, July 18.—The decrees promulgated today by the Danzig senate startled and shocked the Polish government. They came after popular demonstrations in Warsaw yesterday warning Germany against any change in the Danzig statutes and urging additional rights for Poland in the free city. The demonstrations will be repeated tomorrow all over the country.

France Sees Appeal to League.

PARIS, July 18.—(AP)—France, as a member of the league of nations charged with watching the Danzig situation, foresaw today a possible appeal to Geneva against the virtual suspension of constitutional guarantees in the free city. Officials said the French government would confer with Great Britain, Portugal, and other members of the league committee.

GIBRALTAR, July 19 (Sunday).—(AP)—Authorities closed the Spanish frontier early today after a clash at La Linea, on the Spanish side, in which one person was killed and at least 20 were injured. All British officers and men here were ordered not to enter Spain until further notice.

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

MADRID, July 18.—The Spanish government sent warships and airplanes tonight to crush a military revolt in Spanish Morocco and the Canary Islands.

Naval vessels were rushing assistance to loyal troops who were fighting the rebels, who were reported to have gained control of Spanish Morocco, on the north African coast.

A government radio announcement said airplanes bombarded the cities of Ceuta and Melilla, but gave no indication of the effect of the attack. The outbreak was first reported at Melilla, important garrison center.

Rebels Surround Palace.

The civil governor of the Canary Islands telegraphed that he and the chief of the civil guard forces were besieged by troops surrounding the governor's palace.

Part of the garrison at Seville, on the Spanish mainland, revolted but cavalry reinforcements were rushed to the city and the situation was quickly controlled, a government announcement said.

[From French border points came reports of fighting in various Spanish cities and at Hendaye it was rumored that all garrisons in Andalusia had risen. From Tangier it was reported that a rebel force of 20,000 men, including the famed Foreign Legion, was victorious in battles in Morocco.]

Socialists and communists threw their entire support to the leftist government of Premier Santiago Casares Quiroga, announcing they were ready to go into the streets and fight. Syndicalists came to the support of the government, making a solid labor front against the insurgents.

The Socialist headquarters broadcast an order to all workers in the party not to leave Madrid Sunday but to be ready to fight the "enemy."

Socialists and communists ordered general strikes wherever any declarations of martial law have been issued contrary to the orders of the government. The administration had disclosed earlier today martial law was operating in Seville province.

Strike Against Rebels.

The government had claimed earlier in the day the revolt was "broken."

Three Spanish generals were relieved of their commands—Virgilio Cabalellas, head of the first division at Madrid; Francisco Franco, military governor of the Canary Islands, and

The administration announced all soldiers implicated in the revolt would be granted immediate and indefinite home leave. The move was seen as an attempt to weaken the rebel forces.

Now General Named.

An official notice said the public forces, aided by the populace, had kept rebellious elements in check.

Indalecio Prieto, leader of the semi-moderate Socialist group, and Francisco Largo Caballero, a prominent Socialist leader, attended the cabinet session, although they are not members of the government.

"The Spanish provinces," said a bulletin issued late tonight, "continue in absolute obedience to the government. Some centers where there has been a certain uneasiness have definitly placed themselves on the side of the government, which is confident the uprising will remain localized in the small forces that actually have not surrendered.

"In Seville, where Gen. Queipo de Llano rebelliously declared a state of war, there were rebellious acts on the part of the armed forces. The forces of the government put this down. A regiment of cavalry entered Seville with shouts of 'Viva Republica.' The rest of Spain continues faithful to the government, which absolutely dominates the situation."

Rebels Headed by Governor.

TANGIER, July 18.—(AP)—A rebel force numbering 20,000 men held complete control of Spanish Morocco tonight after seizing the chief military posts throughout the area, refugees reaching here reported.

The rebels were headed by Gen. Francisco Franco, military commander of the Spanish-owned Canary Islands, 300 miles west of Morocco.

Detachments of Spanish and Moorish regulars surprised the guards at military posts and compelled them to surrender. A young officer who refused to turn over his command to the rebels was killed on the spot, refugees related.

Imprison Loyal Officers.

All loyal officers and their families were at first imprisoned, persons fleeing from the region stated, but later they were sent in trucks to the frontier of the Tangier international zone. None of the refugees was hurt.

All telephonic communication with Spanish Morocco was cut off from here, although the British consul at Tangier was permitted to telephone his colleagues in towns in the affected area. Ship sailings from Algeria and from Malaga, Spain, to Spanish Morocco were suspended.

Leader Reported Arrested.

ORAN, Algeria, July 19.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—An unconfirmed report reaching here today said Gen. Francisco Franco, reputed leader of the revolting forces in Spanish Morocco, had been arrested.

This account stated Gen. Franco was seized near Tetuan, capital of Spanish Morocco.

Loyal soldiers were said to have made a successful counter attack against the rebels when the naval and aviation forces refused to join in the revolt.

Two generals were reported to have been killed and thirty officers arrested at Tetuan.

Nine Slain in Fighting.

CASABLANCA, French Morocco, July 18.—(AP)—Nine persons were reported killed in fighting between rebellious troops and loyal military forces in Spanish Morocco today.

A general strike at Larache added to the unsettled situation travelers arriving in French Morocco from the Spanish area said.

The rebellion was characterized as a "Fascist movement" inspired by the kidnap-murder early this week in Madrid of José Calvo Sotelo, monarchist critic of the Spanish leftist government and asserted Fascist leader.

Frontier Is Closed.

Fleeing from the disorders, residents of Melilla and other towns crowded into buses en route for the French territory. Later in the day the frontier was closed and buses from the scene of the rebellion were turned back with their passengers.

Residents of Melilla, Larache, Tetuan, and Elksar, opposing the rebellion, joined loyal government troops in fighting the insurgents. Some of the residents of Melilla fled to Oudjda on the border of French Morocco. Other refugees from Arzila and Elksar hurried to Tangier.

An attempt by Gen. Gomez Morato to eliminate monarchist and Fascist officers from the Spanish troops in Morocco was reported a contributing factor in the revolt after the men rebelled at the military shakeup.

Report Revolt in North Spain.

PARIS, July 18.—(AP)—The correspondent of the newspaper Petit Parisien at Behobie, France, on the Spanish border, reported tonight that the Italian ambassador to Madrid arrived there with a report "from official sources" of "movements" which had broken out in northern Spain, Pamplona, Vallodolid, and Saragossa. The ambassador, en route to St. Jean de Luz, said workers had turned out into the street of Madrid, the correspondent added.

Among alarming reports reaching Paris was a Perpignan dispatch to the Petit Parisien saying that sailors at the Ferrol and Cartagena naval bases had mutinied.

Air travelers from Madrid said the "position of troops at Saragossa and Valencia was doubtful."

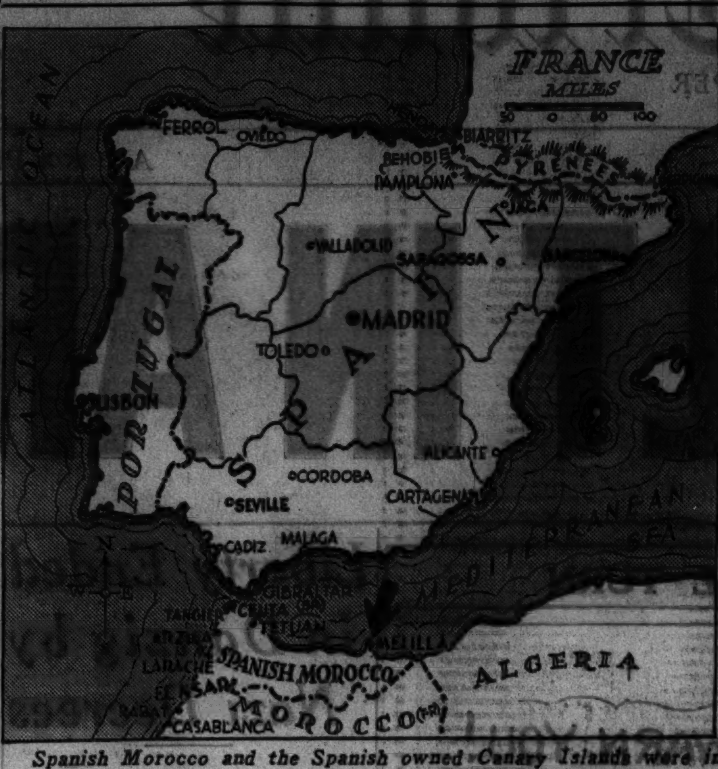
Gil Robles Flees to France.

HENDYE, France, July 18.—(AP)—José Mària Gil Robles, Spanish Catholic leader, arrived at Biarritz, France, twenty miles from the Spanish line today. He was believed to have fled for his life following receipt of numerous death threats.

Lerroux Reaches Portugal.

LISBON, Portugal, July 18.—(AP)—Alejandro Lerroux, former premier of Spain, today crossed the frontier by automobile to Curia, Portugal, where he said he would take a health cure. Lerroux, whose car knocked down a child on the road, denied he was fleeing from Spain. He said he left Madrid July 16.

SPAIN FIGHTS TO CRUSH REVOLT



Spanish Morocco and the Spanish owned Canary Islands were in the grip of a military revolt early today. Some reports said the insurgents, including the famed Foreign legion, were in complete control of Spanish Morocco. Government airplanes bombed Ceuta and Melilla. Arrow on map points to Melilla where the revolt began. Warships were ordered to Spanish Morocco and the Canary Islands to crush the uprising. In Spain itself the government smashed a military uprising in Seville. Revolt "movements" also were reported in northern Spain.

Pact Followed Agadir Incident in 1911.

Spanish Morocco is the smaller of the two main zones, French and Spanish, into which the sultanate of Morocco in North Africa is divided. It covers 18,300 square miles, with a population of 750,000, whereas French Morocco has an area of 200,000 square miles and a population of more than 5,000,000.

The population consists mostly of native Mohammedans, with 38,000 Europeans and 11,000 natives of Jewish descent, according to the latest census figures. The capital of the Spanish zone is Tetuan, a city of about 45,000. It is the headquarters of the Spanish high commissioner and of the khalifa under the Spanish protectorate.

Other principal cities are Melilla, which has a population of 37,000, and Ceuta, with 35,000 inhabitants. Ceuta, which is on the Mediterranean coast opposite Gibraltar, has belonged to Spain since the 16th century.

Sahara to South.

The Spanish zone includes a narrow strip of land, 160 miles long, in northern Morocco, stretching from the Atlantic nearly to the border of Algeria. A second Spanish zone which merges into Spanish Rio de Oro is at the extreme southern end of Morocco, and the third is a narrow strip of land [Ifni] on the Atlantic coast.

Most of the natives belong to Berber tribes, whose ancestors conquered Spain in three wars centuries ago. These aboriginal natives inhabit the mountains and are fierce and warlike, with a history and tradition of independence and a hatred of foreign invaders. Arabs and Moors live in the lowlands. The Jewish inhabitants belong to two groups, one settled in Morocco from time immemorial, and the other driven to Africa by persecution in European countries in modern times.

Little Development.

Spain has done little to develop its Moroccan protectorate, especially in comparison with the late Marshal Lyautey's administration in French Morocco, which was noted for its building of highways and railroads, and its development of public works. The Spanish zone has only one narrow-gauge railroad from Ceuta to Tetuan and Rio Martin.

At the time of the Agadir incident in 1911, when Germany challenged the extension of French influence in Morocco and a European war was narrowly averted, Spain expressed resentment over the occupation of the town of Fez by the French, following a general uprising of the Moroccan tribes. This incident brought about a treaty between France and Spain in 1912, adjusting the limits of their respective spheres of influence.

The sultan and most of the tribal leaders accepted the protectorates, but rebellious tribesmen continued to make trouble. Finally, in 1926, the rebellion of the Riff chieftain, Abd-El-Krim, was put down by French and Spanish expeditions after much hard fighting in mountain territory. Pacification of the country was regarded as complete in 1933, when Sidi Ali Hociene, last of the rebel leaders, surrendered.

Besides the French and Spanish zones, Morocco also includes the internationalized city of Tangier, a seaport of 60,000 population on the Atlantic coast, which is well known to tourists.

'SCARLET' SINNER KILLS TWO SONS AND 'CLEAN' WIFE

Sunday School Head Beats Family to Death.

Erie, Pa., July 18.—[Special.]—A Sunday school superintendent beat his wife and two children to death with a hammer today to "send them to heaven because they were white and clean" while he had committed "a scarlet sin."

Samuel C. Weed, the religious worker, was quoted by Prosecuting Attorney Mortimer E. Graham and Police Chief George J. Christoph as having said that a long prayer meeting was held in the Weed home last night, several hours before he brutally killed his family.

Weed's wife, Irene, 32, and his son, David, 5, died almost instantly. Another son, Charles, 3, lived only a few hours.

Dives in Front of Auto.

The Sunday school leader apparently tried to commit suicide after killing the others. He was arrested upon the complaint of Glenn Hall, who said Weed dived in front of his automobile. Weed received severe cuts and bruises.

Questioned by police concerning the automobile incident, Weed admitted having attacked his family. Patrolman Carl Malinowski said Weed asked: "Have they gone to heaven yet? That's where I wanted to send them."

"Some time ago I committed a sin against God," the prosecutor and police chief said Weed told them. "I didn't want my wife and children to live because they were white and clean. I had committed a scarlet sin."

Refuses to Tell Sin.

The officers said Weed refused to discuss what he termed his "scarlet sin." Police advanced the theory that another woman in the Sunday school man's life was involved in the "sin."

They asserted that Weed told them the family went to bed as usual last night following the long prayer meeting but that when he awakened this morning he decided to send his family and himself "to heaven."

"The Whole Family."

"Killed who?" she screamed.

"The whole family," the man replied, then ran to the Buffalo road where he was arrested after making an attempt to throw himself under a passing automobile.

Neighbors said Weed was superintendent of the Sunday school at a Nazarene mission church in suburban Wesleyville and had been acting as minister of the church during the pastor's vacation. He was a clerk in the Erie works of the General Electric company.

SHERIF WANTS TROOPS READY FOR STERLING

Strike Violence Causes Appeal.

Sterling, Ill., July 18.—(AP)—A request that Illinois National guardsmen be kept in readiness to subdue possible violence in a strike at the Northwestern Barbed Wire company plant was sent to Gov. Henry Horner tonight by Sherif A. E. Hamilton of Whiteside county.

The sherif said he communicated with the governor by telegram after eleven men had been sent to jail on charges of rioting and warants had been issued for arrest of eight more.

The sherif said the governor had not yet replied.

Thirty Deputies Sworn.

Thirty deputies had been sworn in and were guarding the plant, where clashes between workers and picketing strikers on Thursday and last night led to the arrests.

The barbed wire plant was involved in the nation-wide campaign to unionize the steel industry, although the Amalgamated Steel Plate and Tin Workers union did not enter the picture until some time after the strike was called.

Van Bittner, western regional director of the union movement, said the Northwestern company workers had joined the amalgamated, and leaders of the latter had expected to end the strike peacefully soon.

To Retain Open Shop.

The company, in a paid advertisement, announced its willingness to meet representatives of employés for collective bargaining, but declared its intention to remain an open shop.

First violence occurred Thursday night. Eight men were slugged, and several were arrested. Last night Nels Anderson, who came here recently from Iowa, was reported severely beaten by strikers. He was sought for questioning. The sherif said he lacked funds to add the 100 deputies authorized.

Today 625 of the company's 1,400 workers were on the job, guarded by the deputies and special police of the Chicago and North Western railroad. The head of the company said he does not know just what the strikers want.

U. S. SEDITION CASE AGAINST EIGHT PORTO RICANS GOES TO JURY

SAN JUAN, P. R., July 18.—(AP)—The case of Pedro Albizu Campos and seven other Nationalists charged with conspiring to overthrow the United States government in Porto Rico was being deliberated tonight by an island jury.

Col. Amos W. Woodcock, former United States prohibition director, who assisted the prosecution, told the jury the Nationalist party recruited an army of 10,000 "with manual arms and with instructions in the use of the machete, the dagger, and the rifle."

He declared the Nationalists, headed by the Harvard-educated Albizu Campos, believed "compulsory universal service was necessary for national defense—which could mean only armed opposition to the United States." Albizu Campos reiterated his belief that the Nationalists, aiming for independence, held the true solution of the relation between Porto Rico and the United States.

CALLANDER, Ont., July 18.—[U. P.]—Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, parents of the quintuplets, said today they had decided to name their 11 day old son Oliva Jr., instead of Joseph Robert Telesphore as previously announced. They said the five elder children wanted the baby named after his father.

WIDOWS OF SULU SULTAN CLING TO PALACE IN ROW

MANILA, P. I., July 18.—(AP)—The political demands of a powerful Moro princess confronted the new sultan of Sulu tonight while the widows of his predecessor occupied the royal palace. Princess Dayang Dayang was said to have demanded that either her husband or her father-in-law be proclaimed crown prince of Sulu as the price of her recognition of the newly selected ruler.

She also was reported to have demanded that monthly payments alleged to be due from the British government for a lease on North Borneo be paid to her.

Hadji Muwallil Wassit, the new sultan, and the influential princess remained in their private residences at Maibun Jolo. Dayang Dayang, niece and adopted daughter of the old sultan, postponed a trip to Manila pending negotiations with the new ruler.

Although the traditional fortieth day since the old sultan's death passed yesterday and the new ruler was named and crowned then, the palace remained under the former régime.

Just how many wives were left by the old sultan, Jamalul 'L Kiram, never has been officially learned, although there were reports that he retained three during his declining years.

BLAZE DAMAGES WATERFRONT.

San Francisco, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—A spectacular waterfront blaze was brought under control tonight after causing damage estimated by fire officials at $50,000 to $100,000.

TIMBER GROUP FAVORS LEWIS' TYPE OF UNION

Objects to Affiliation with Carpenters.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[U.P.]—The rift in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor widened tonight as 60,000 northwest timber workers indicated a desire to desert one of the nation's oldest unions to join with John L. Lewis' "rebel" group.

The development came as Lewis and his eleven aides debated whether they would obey a summons of the federation's executive council to face trial Aug. 3 on charges of fomenting "insurrection" among the workers by seeking independently to impose "one big union" in each of the mass production industries.

Object to Carpenters.

The new dissatisfaction in the ranks of the craft unionists became known when the Sawmill and Timber Workers' union put out a "feeler" note, expressing their dissatisfaction with the present allegiance to the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, which has headquarters at Indianapolis.

It was learned discontented leaders of the sawmill workers, who claim to be paying taxes to the carpenters without receiving representation, have written to John Brophy, director of the committee on industrial organization, saying:

"We are interested in effecting an industrial organization here on the coast, similar or identical to the United Mine Workers of America, for the lumber industry of the northwest."

Unable to Issue Charters.

Brophy explained that the C. I. O., does not issue actual charters. Its policy was expressed in a letter sent from its headquarters pointing out that:

"Our policy, to date, is educational and advisory. We do not issue charters, but seek to have the A. F. of L. adapt its policies so as to grant industrial union charters to workers in mass production industries."

It was said today the American Federation of Teachers is considering petitioning the C. I. O. to be included.

The case of the striking United Electrical and Radio Workers union at Camden, N. J., probably will be taken before the United States senate La Follette committee that is investigating anti-labor practices.

May Affect Glass Union.

At the same time, it was reported that the Glass Bottle Blowers Association of the United States and Canada was claiming allegiance to the C. I. O. That union usually is affiliated with the A. F. of L. but the C. I. O.'s Federation of Flat Glass Workers is asserting jurisdiction over the related industry.

Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and principle "trouble shooter" for the Roosevelt administration in labor relations will attempt to see as many of the leaders of the twelve unions as possible before the meeting of the executive council. McGrady is a miner.

WIFE KIDNAPED BY HER SUITOR, HUSBAND SAYS

George L. Clark, 37 years old, 3702 Georgia avenue, Washington, D. C., complained to the Chicago Heights police last night that his wife, May, 32 years old, had been kidnaped by George Hill, 27 years old, a corporal in the army medical corps, formerly attached to a Washington hospital. The kidnaping took place, Clark said, as he and his wife were about to drive away from the Thomas hotel in Chicago Heights, where the copule had been stopping since Wednesday.

Clark and his wife formerly ran a dancing school in Silver Springs, Md., and there Mrs. Clark met Hill, according to her husband's story. A romance followed, Clark said, and in order to break it up he agreed to take Hill to St. Louis. The soldier deserted from the army, the aggrieved husband said, and went with the Clarks to St. Louis, where they left him and drove to Chicago Heights.

Clark said his wife sent a telegram to Hill in St. Louis that she would never see him again, but last night Hill appeared. The two men fought, and Clark was knocked down, he said. Thereupon Hill drove away in the Clark automobile with Mrs. Clark.

SUICIDE LAID TO INSANITY.

A verdict of suicide while temporarily insane was returned by a coroner's jury yesterday in the death of Richard Williams, 27 years old, 3452 Walnut street, who shot and killed himself in his home Friday night after threatening his father and two policemen.

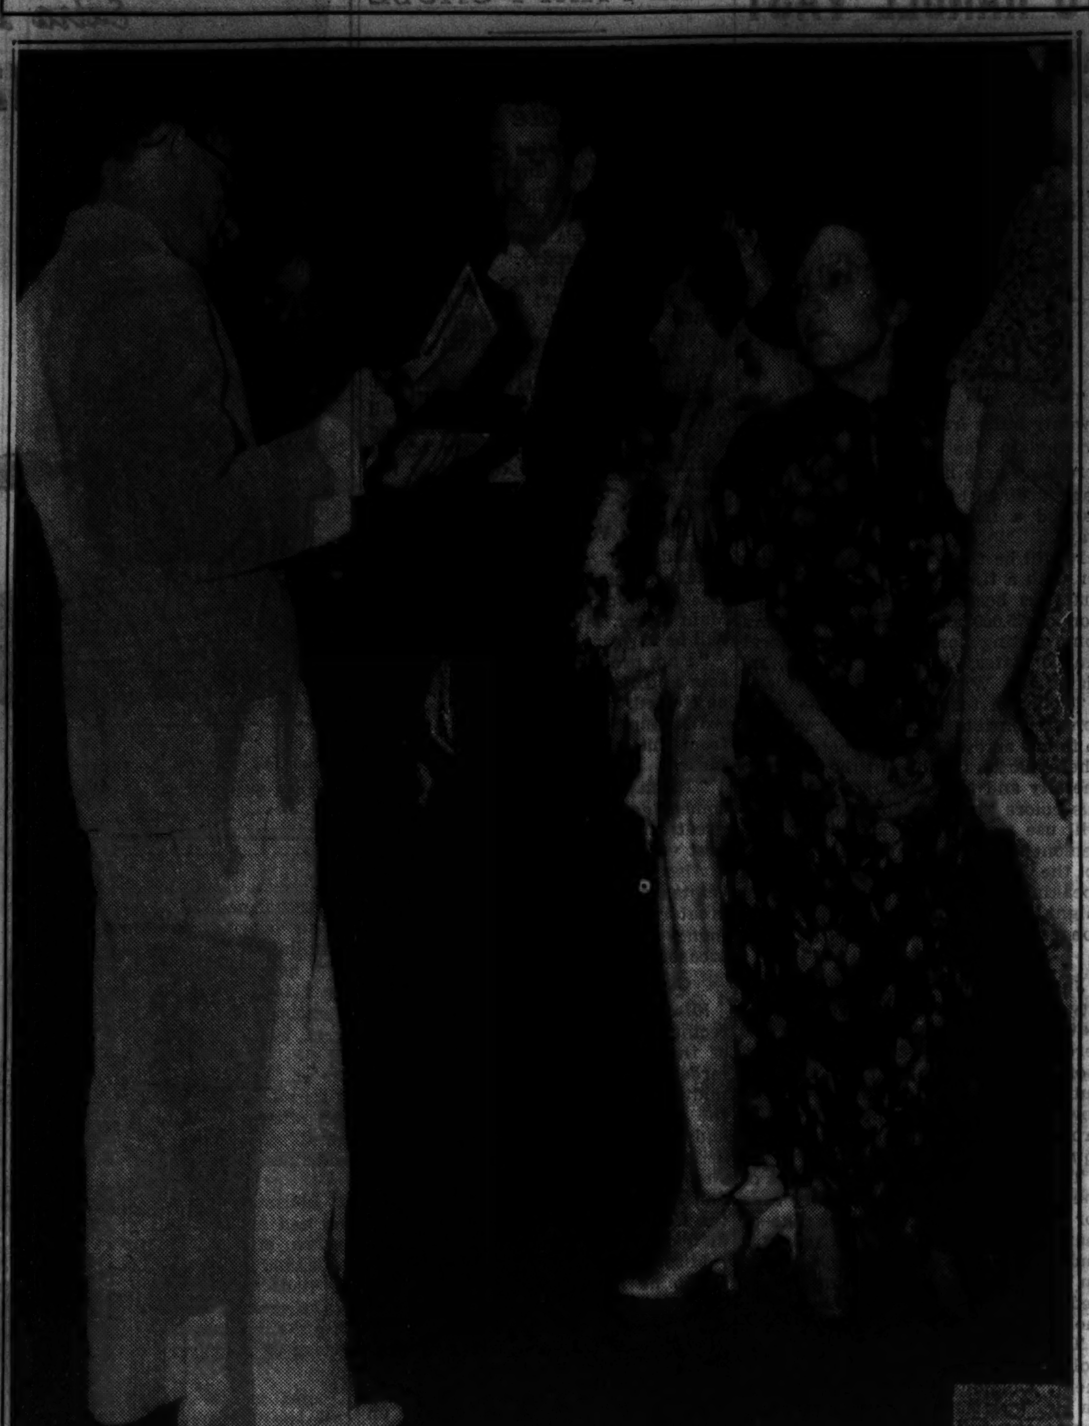
WOMAN JOINED TO SISTER BECOMES BRIDE



Violet Hilton weds James Moore while her Siamese twin sister, Daisy, stands very close by. The ceremony was performed at the Texas Centennial exposition in Dallas, Tex., culminating a two year romance, according to the bride. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

SIAMESE TWIN SISTER WED TO OHIOAN AT FAIR

Other Says Marriage Will Cause No Rift.

Dallas, Tex., July 18.—(AP)—A brunette Siamese twin sister was married here tonight to a tall, dark dancer and musician with the other twin assuring:

"She has never resented my presence when on dates with gentlemen friends and I know this marriage will cause no rift between us."

In Love Two Years.

"Sure, I know every one has tagged it a publicity gag," smiled Violet. "After all, you know, we're show people.

"But I've been in love with Jimmy since I met him two years ago at San Antonio. You know we tried in several eastern states to arrange a wedding, but strict state laws calling for the establishment of a residence stopped us."

Daisy Has Boy Friend, Too.

"I have a boy friend, too, and I wanted to make this a double wedding but it was impossible. We would have been separated at least a year after the wedding because of our jobs and I just can't stand separations."

Moore, a member of the Hilton Sisters' night club troupe, will continue as Violet's professional, as well as domestic partner.

"I love children," Violet said, but Daisy doesn't care for them like I do.

Swimmers Cry for Help as Joke; One Man Drowns

Several swimmers in Sauk Trail lake, in the forest preserve near Chicago Heights, cried out for help last evening and when others went to their rescue they laughingly explained that they were only joking. Soon afterward another swimmer, Emmet Porte, 19 years old, colored, 2851 Fulton street, shouted for aid. Onlookers thought he, too, was joking and when a life guard went out to help him Porte had disappeared. His body was recovered 15 minutes later.

BOY, 3, TRIMS HEDGE, THEN TESTS MUSCLES BY MOWING THE LAWN

Binghamton, N. Y., July 18.—(AP)—Three-year-old Stephen Zapatosky, whose feats of strength long since have ceased to surprise his family, caused scarcely a stir today when he strode up to the lawnmower and tackled the job of cutting the front lawn.

Stephen, who understands English but can't speak it, made known his intention in the Russian of his father. Grass cutting seemed a natural next step to him, because he had just finished trimming a hedge surrounding the Zapatosky home.

Three feet tall and weighing 70 pounds, Stephen sometimes amazes the neighbors with his accomplishments, which range from using a man-sized wheelbarrow as a toy to pulling his 150-pound older brother about in a cart.

Stephen is both larger and stronger and looks older than a seven-year-old boy next door with whom he sometimes plays. While his arm and leg muscles are remarkably developed, his parents insist that there is nothing abnormal in his growth.

Federal District Courts Begin Summer Schedule

The United States District courts went on summer schedule yesterday with the closing of four of the five courts until the September term. The five federal judges will alternate during the summer in hearing emergency cases. Judge William H. Holly will sit in the first emergency court from beginning tomorrow and continuing to Aug. 1. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals will remain open the entire summer.

Union Official Convicted on Manslaughter Charge

Indianapolis, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Harry P. Peats, business agent of the teamsters and chauffeurs' union local here, was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter, and Emmett J. Williams, union secretary, was acquitted of murder charges by a jury in Criminal court today. Both had been charged with first degree murder in the fatal stoning of John Marshall Penny, truck driver, during union labor troubles in March, 1935.

17 KANSAS MULES GET ALL TANGLED UP WITH FARLEY

Haverstraw, N. Y., July 18.—[Special.] — Seventeen alleged Kansas mules toppled out of a 24-foot trailer here today in a mishap fraught with tangled political symbolism.

First, James A. Farley, Democratic national committee chairman, who was born at Grassy Point, three miles away, usually lists Haverstraw as his home town. Second, the mule is the unofficial state animal in Gov. Alf M. Landon's Kansas. Finally, there is a close relationship between the mule and donkey, Democratic emblem.

The mules were on their way to a bareback baseball game at Peekskill, when the big truck pulling the trailer overturned on a curve.

Even more politics figured in the incident. Police questioned W. L. Lerimor, driver of the truck, and learned he lives at Topeka, Kas. Besides he knows Gov. Landon and John D. M. Hamilton, national Republican committee chairman. Regarding them he pronounced terse complimentary judgments.

He said Landon was "reg'lar as hell."

He said Hamilton "'s got plenty brains."

It was suggested that Lieut. Gov. M. William Bray, be summoned for the ultimate determination of whether the beasts really were mules or just plain donkeys.

11 FIREMEN SUE CITY OVER FOUR YEARS' PAY CUTS

Action May Cost Millions if Successful.

A suit seeking to compel the city to pay approximately $50,000 to eleven members of the fire department for 247 payless workdays in the years 1932, 1933, 1934 and 1935 was filed in circuit court yesterday by the law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin & Ellis.

While only eleven firemen were represented in the action, the suit, if successful, will apply to all civil service employes and will mean the expenditure of several million dollars. Thus far more than $2,500,000 deleted from a series of budgets passed in the name of economy either has been restored or restoration has been asked in the courts.

In 1931 the city councilmen ordered the deduction of two weeks pay during the remainder of the year, from the salaries of all city employes and later imposed a similar reduction upon themselves. The pay of municipal court judges, clerks and bailifs was also cut.

City Repays Judges.

Last year as the result of a mandamus action by the municipal court judges, the city repaid $703,000 to 52 judges and former judges and 1,084 municipal court employes.

Faced by the mandamus orders issued in behalf of civil service employés, the city council early this year ordered the restoration of $1,500,000, which had been deducted in 1931, to all city employés. The payment of this sum was completed by the city controler several weeks ago.

A number of aldermen then joined the movement and sued for back pay which they had volunteered to give up as an economy measure. Subsequent developments in this litigation resulted in the legal anomaly of numerous aldermen suing themselves for pay which they readily could restore to themselves by council action. This suit is now pending in Circuit court.

Sees Strong Defense for City.

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes said yesterday he believed the city has a strong defense against the firemen's suit filed yesterday, because the mandamus orders issued in regard to the 1931 deductions were based upon the fact that the salaries had been appropriated and that the moneys were unexpended.

He said he thought the courts would draw a distinction between this situation and that of subsequent years when full salaries were not appropriated.

600 MEN KEPT BUSY ON SHIPS AT MANITOWOC

Manitowoc, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—Work was begun today at the shipyards on a 1,000 yard steel dump scow for the Fitzimmons and Connell company, Chicago marine contractors. It will be completed in early autumn.

Twenty-eight additional staterooms being built on the Pere Marquette car ferry 21 are nearing completion and the ferry will return to service next week. Similar work was completed a few weeks ago on the No. 22. Those two jobs, together with building a section of floating drydock for the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, are keeping about 600 men employed at the yards.

Efforts were continued tonight to raise a derrick scow owned by the C. W. Falcon company, Chicago, which sank in Lake Michigan 15 miles north of here earlier in the week while being towed by the tug Commoner from Green Bay to Sheboygan. The scow sank during a squall in 7 feet of water, 200 feet from shore.

VOTE DOWN TAX INCREASE.

Residents in school district No. 218, which includes Blue Island, Worth township, Chicago Heights, and Robbins yesterday voted 757 to 371 against increasing taxes on school property from 1% to 2 per cent.

Miss America Weds

MRS. JOHNNY MUSTACCHIO.

McKeesport, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—Henrietta Leaver, "Miss America" of 1935 who objected strenuously when a sculptor produced a nude statue of her last winter, has married her girlhood playmate and gone to Oklahoma to live. Mrs. Cecelia Leaver, mother of the slim beauty, disclosed the romance today, saying her daughter was married May 23 to her "first and only beau," Johnny Mustacchio, at Wheeling, W. Va.

LAWYERS GET THEIR SHARE OF REYNOLDS CASH

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Judge J. H. Clement said today in Superior court he would sign an order next Thursday awarding 10 per cent of the net amount Anne Cannon Reynolds receives from the estate of her father, Zachary Smith Reynolds, to three law firms representing Mrs. Anne L. Cannon of Concord, co-guardian of Anne Cannon Reynolds II., for services in the litigation over the distribution of the $33,000,000 estate.

The attorneys, Cansler & Cansler of Charlotte, John M. Robinson of Charlotte, and W. H. Beckeridge of Concord, said the net value of the amount Anne Cannon Reynolds II. receives is about $10,500,000. Their fee will be about $1,050,000, which will be paid in three annual instalments and will be divided among the three firms.

Immediately after Judge Clement signs the order, the fee judgment will be appealed to the state Supreme court.

On June 17, Judge Clayton Moore awarded 5 per cent of the net amount Anne Cannon Reynolds II. receives from her father's estate or "not less than $500,000," to Brooks, McLendon Holderness, counsel for Mrs. Anne L. Cannon, co-guardian of her grandchild. This judgment was appealed to the Supreme court.

William Graves and Benet Polikoff were awarded 15 per cent of the net amount Christopher Smith Reynolds receives from the estate of his father, which will be about $6,000,000. Their fee amounted to about $900,000.

DEMOCRATS ARE BIGGEST LOSERS TO THIRD PARTY

Democrats for instituting the investigation of Dr. Townsend and for citing him for contempt of the house.

The administration sought to placate the Huey Long insurgents by dropping the criminal prosecution of Long lieutenants for income tax dodging and Mr. Roosevelt on his recent journey to the southwest held a love feast with Long's brother and other adherents.

But the "share-our-wealth" clubs, now shepherded by the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, are away off the Democratic reservation. To the extent that the "share-our-wealth" contingent support the third party ticket Mr. Roosevelt will be the chief loser.

Turn Backs on Roosevelt.

But the quarter from which the greatest menace to Mr. Roosevelt's cause emanates is the conservative right. Conservative Democrats in prodigious numbers are turning their backs upon the President and preparing to vote the Republican ticket outright or not to vote at all. They feel that they are not deserting their party but taking the only means available to rescue their party from the grip of a man who has prostituted its principles and is leading the country into socialism, if not a dictatorship.

There are many points of resemblance between 1896 and 1936, and one of them is the defection of conservative Democrats from Bryan and of silver Republicans from McKinley. But profiting by the experience of their predecessors of 1896 the conservative Democrats of 1936 are wasting no time on the organization of a third party.

Only a small fraction of the gold Democrats of 1896 voted for Palmer and Buckner. Most of them voted directly for McKinley. So, this year the conservative Democrats are coming out directly for Gov. Landon.

Al Smith Quits First.

The procession of conservative Democrats going over to Landon has already made its appearance. From now till election day it will continue to pass in review before the electorate. The van appeared on the eve of the Philadelphia convention when Al Smith, Democratic candidate for president in 1928, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby, and former Judge Daniel F. Cohalan of New York addressed their famous open letters to the Democratic delegates protesting against the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt. They made it plain that they would support Gov. Landon.

Next came former Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland, who went to Topeka and, after a talk with Gov. Landon, announced that he would vote the Republican ticket. He was followed by Col. Henry Breckinridge of New York, who was assistant secretary of war in the Wilson administration. He excoriated the New Deal in announcing he would support Gov. Landon.

Many Join Revolt.

Scores of other prominent Democrats have indicated that they will not support Mr. Roosevelt and many of them are expected to join the procession to Topeka. Among them is another Democratic nominee for president, John W. Davis. The only other living Democratic nominee is James M. Cox of Ohio, who is known to be lukewarm to the New Deal.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the Wilson administration, and Lewis Douglas, Mr. Roosevelt's director of the budget until he resigned, are also in a state of revolt against the New Deal. They will not support Mr. Roosevelt but in a recent letter in which they joined they indicated that they were no less opposed to Republican doctrine.

Others who will bolt the Democratic ticket include John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee; Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York; Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic executive committee; John Henry Kirby of Texas; several of the du Ponts of Delaware who were alienated from the Democratic party by the New Deal; and Dean Acheson, Mr. Roosevelt's former undersecretary of the treasury. Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia has been in a state of revolt but has not made his future intentions clear.

Garner Dislikes Deal.

Scores of others prominent in the party are "going along" with the President from motives other than enthusiasm for the New Deal. The Vice President is notoriously out of sympathy with the New Deal, or important parts of it, though ironically enough Mr. Garner was the only speaker at the Democratic notification ceremony who lauded the New Deal or even uttered the term "New Deal."

The latest evidence of Mr. Garner's lack of sympathy with Roosevelt policies was contributed by an exchange of letters between the Vice President and his friend, John Henry Kirby, of Texas, noted anti-Roosevelt leader in the south. The letters were brought to light unintentionally by the Black committee. On July 5, 1935, Mr. Kirby wrote to Mr. Garner:

"My dear John:

"How long are you going to tolerate the apostasy of the Roosevelt administration to the cardinal principles of the Democratic party and the notorious contempt for the plain terms of the constitution?

"Your friend,

"JOHN HENRY KIRBY."

To this the Vice President replied July 9:

"Dear John Henry:

"Your favor is just called to my attention.

"You can't do everything you want to and I can't do half what I would like to do. You don't control everybody you would like to and I am in a similar fix. I think that answers your question.

"With regards, and wishing you health and happiness,

"Sincerely,

"JOHN N. GARNER."

Law Firm Aided.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate, is a conservative Democrat whose law firm represents two of three dozen public utility corporations such as Mr. Roosevelt is warring upon. He has about as much use for the New Deal as has Mr. Garner. But, like Mr. Garner, he regards it his chore to put through the legislation Mr. Roosevelt directs whether he approves it or not. Senator Robinson was picked to answer Al Smith's Liberty league speech because he was Smith's running mate in 1928. He read the speech over the radio and proved so unfamiliar with it that he stumbled several times, once spoiling the author's big point of calling Smith the "unhappy warrior." Robinson read it "happy warrior" and then quickly corrected it, with ludicrous effect.

The President has signally rewarded Senator Robinson for his devotion. He made a speech in Arkansas recently, praising Robinson, who is up against a hard fight for renomination. The real reward the senator is supposed to have his eye upon is a place in the Supreme court.

Does Chores, but Lacks Heart.

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi is another who does his chores for the President without his heart in the New Deal. He refused to serve on the resolutions committee at Philadelphia, but he grasped at the chance to read the speech notifying Garner which Temporary Chairman Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky wrote but did not deliver because he had sailed for Europe that day. Harrison also is up against a hard fight to keep his senate seat. He may be rewarded with selection for the 15 year job of controller general.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia is notoriously out of sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's philosophy but he is scrupulously maintaining his party regularity, which he insists he would do even if he were not a candidate for reelection. To do so without stultifying himself has taxed his ingenuity.

Glass Cites Platform.

Senator Glass has from the first been an implacable foe of the New Deal. He once said that the "New Deal, taken all in all, is not only a mistake, it is a disgrace to the nation." The senator has admitted he made this statement but asserted it was not intended for publication. His newspapers at Lynchburg were the only dailies that did not fly the Blue Eagle during the reign of the NRA. In rather sulphurous language he defied the New Deal.

When asked how he has managed to reconcile his hatred of the New Deal with his party regularity Senator Glass points to the Virginia state platform which he wrote.

"We commend," says this platform," the humanitarian purposes of the President in his earnest and persistent efforts to rescue the country from an unprecedented depression and wish for him the largest measure of success in every sound measure which he may hereafter project."

The senator points out two words that he was careful to use in this passage. One is "sound." The other is "hereafter."

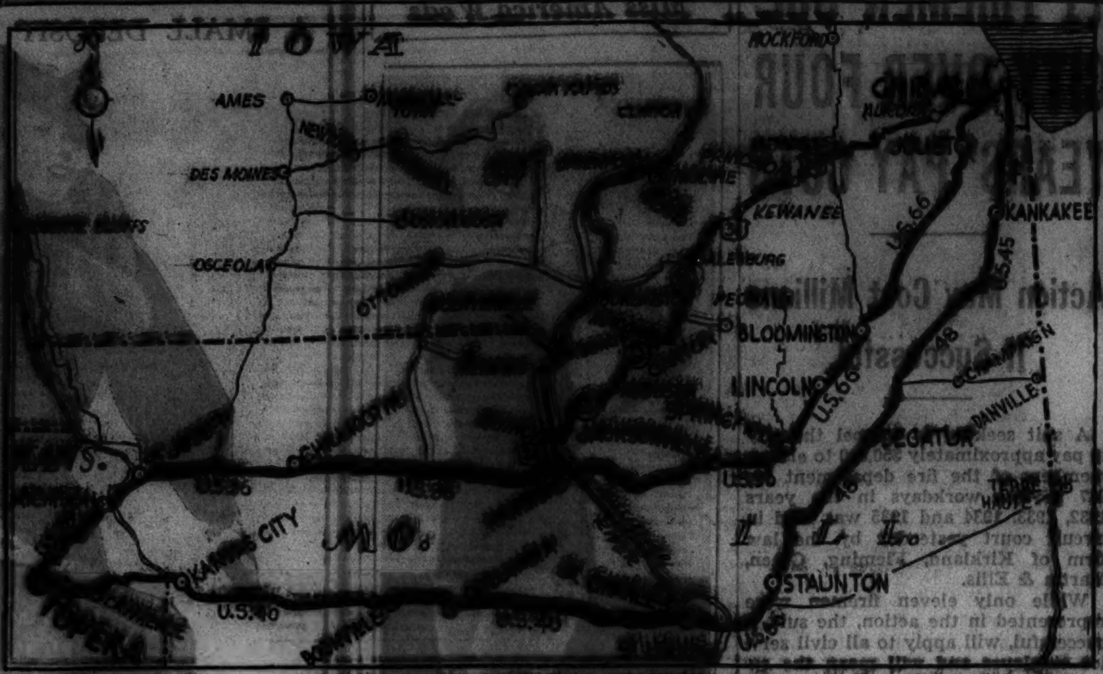
Declines Committee Job.

Senator Glass declined to serve on the resolutions committee at Philadelphia and went home before the convention assembled. He was subjected to great pressure to second the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt on behalf of Virginia, but refused.

Careful choice of language again distinguished Senator Glass' introduction of President Roosevelt at Monticello July 4. The President, said Senator Glass, "professes the same love of humanity and the plain people as manifested by Thomas Jefferson." The contrast between "professes" and "manifested" was not lost upon the discerning.

Maintaining similar regularity are other New Deal foes, notably Senator Millard F. Tydings of Maryland, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, who said that the New Deal would reduce our farmers to the status of "peasants in soviet Russia," and Senator Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina who said: "I believe we have come to the crucial hour of decision; it is going to be a free republic or it is going to be socialistic, regimented communism."

Best Routes for Motorists Going to Kansas Capital



Chicagoans driving automobiles to the notification ceremonies of Gov. Alf M. Landon next Thursday in Topeka are advised to take one of the routes indicated on this map by the heaviest lines. Lighter lines show acceptable roads to the Sunflower capital from other cities of the region.

MOTORCADE TO START FROM SPRINGFIELD ON TUESDAY FOR TOPEKA

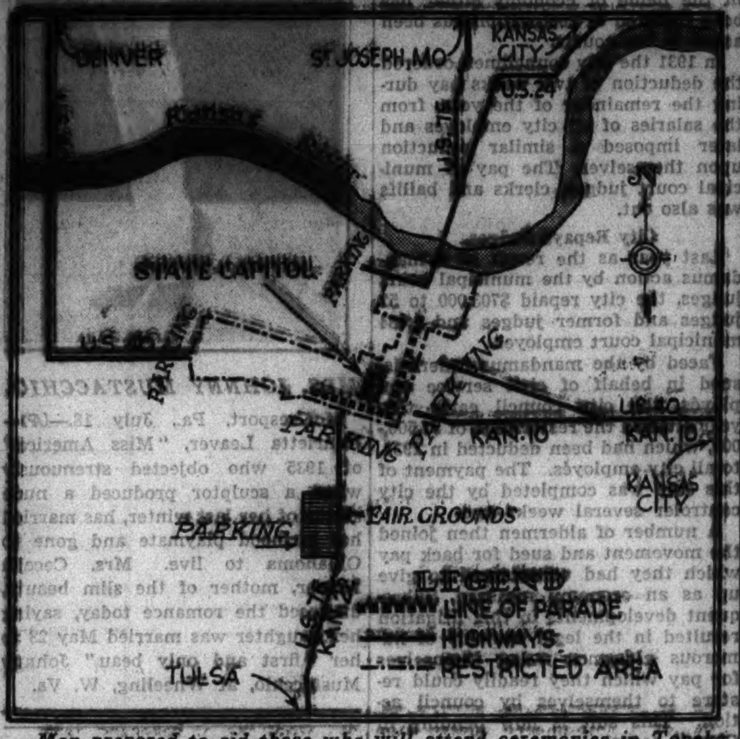
Chicago and Illinois motorists who are driving to Topeka, Kas., for the ceremonies Thursday that will officially notify Gov. Alf M. Landon that he is the Republican nominee for President, will assemble in Springfield Tuesday morning and leave from there as a caravan to the Kansas capital.

More than 1,000 automobiles are expected to be in the first unit of the Illinois division. These cars will proceed to Excelsior Springs, Mo., for the first stop. They will be met there by an official road car from Topeka, and then escorted into Kansas City and Topeka.

The latest inquiries made by Republican national headquarters here indicated that the number of cars would exceed earlier estimates. More than 5,000 cars are scheduled to be present from southern Wisconsin, northern Illinois, Indiana, and Chicago.

The railroads have announced twenty-two special trains from points throughout the middle west.

Because heavy travel to the notification ceremony is indicated, United Air Lines and connecting carriers announced an all-air service to Topeka via Kansas City for eastern passengers and via Omaha and Kansas City for travelers from the west. Flying time from Kansas City to Topeka is 25 minutes.



Map prepared to aid those who will attend ceremonies in Topeka, Kas., next Thursday when Gov. Alf M. Landon is formally notified of his nomination as the Republican candidate for President. Highways leading into the city, route of the parade, restricted area in the heart of the city, and the state fairgrounds all are shown.

Republicans Speak Today on Homecoming Program

The fourth annual joint homecoming celebration of Mundelein and Diamond Lake will end today with a Republican program. Congressman Ralph E. Church [10th] of Evanston will be principal speaker at the meeting in Diamond Lake. Others include Charles W. Hadley, Republican candidate for attorney general, Representative Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville, and Attorney Benjamin H. Miller, chairman of the Lake county Republican central committee. Representative Nicholas J. Hubbard of Mt. Pulaski spoke during Democratic day at the celebration yesterday.

Vendor of Old Newspapers Fined Again; This Time $200

Isaac Hirsch, 63 years old, who peddles used newspapers in the loop, was fined $200 yesterday by Judge Francis Borrelli in South State Street court on a charge of disorderly conduct. It was his second court appearance within a week. Last Tuesday he was fined $100 by Judge Borrelli on a similar charge. At that time Hirsch disclosed he had $28,000 on deposit in Nashville, Tenn., banks. Police say he carries a few old newspapers and that his "selling" is merely a cover for begging.

LEMKE EXPECTS TOWNSENDITES TO SUPPORT HIM

Congressman William Lemke of North Dakota, president nominee of the Union party, said yesterday in Chicago that the action of the Townsend convention in Cleveland in voting against an organized indorsement of presidential candidates "doesn't hurt my chances a bit." He hinted at a belief that many Townsendites would support him as individuals.

Mr. Lemke left last night to address the Townsend convention this afternoon. He said his speech would be an exposition of his views on old age security, on regaining and reestablishing representative government, and on the money issue.

John Nystul, Union party campaign manager, said Mr. Lemke will speak in every state before the Nov. 3 election.

Plan Diplomatic Party for Lindberghs in Berlin

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 18.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are scheduled to take part in a round of official and diplomatic festivities after they arrive in Berlin the middle of next week. Mrs. William E. Dodd, wife of the American ambassador to Berlin, has issued invitations to the diplomatic corps to meet the Lindberghs Friday. [Ambassador Dodd is teaching this summer at the University of Chicago.]

Los Angeles 97 at Noon After 74 at Sunrise

Los Angeles, Cal., July 18.—[Special.]—With the mercury soaring to 97 degrees, this city at noon today experienced its hottest day of this year. The thermometer registered 74 degrees at sunrise, four degrees higher than the same hour Friday, and had climbed to 85 degrees at 9 a. m., with no relief in sight.

TOPEKA PREPARED TO HANDLE VAST CROWD THURSDAY

Visitors to Receive Maps as They Near City.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Topeka, Kas., July 18.—[Special.]—Twenty miles from Topeka motorists driving to the Landon notification ceremony here next Thursday will be flagged down by Kansas state police, handed a map and waved on their way.

It will be the visitors' first encounter with a traffic and parking scheme that has been designed in anticipation of 75,000 automobile passengers congregating here from the "typical prairie states," including Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin.

The main instruction on the map, comprehensible at a glance, will be to follow arrows of a designated color. These markers will point the way into the city and to a parking area. Various colors are used so that a driver will use the parking area most convenient to his highway, to the parade, to the business district and to the speaking platform. Otherwise he might drive about town, increasing congestion.

City to Be Zoned.

Just about the entire area of this city of 75,000 population will be dedicated to the special use of the ceremonies, the festivities and the storage and movement of visitor's automobiles on Thursday. In the downtown district barricades will prohibit traffic and parking in 105 square blocks.

This huge preserve in the heart of the town includes an assembly area for an afternoon parade, the line of march for the bands and pageantry and a dispersal area. A block or two on each side of the line of march, pedestrian spectators will be neither molested nor annoyed by automobiles.

This downtown regulation will have police and national guard enforcement. Outside of this district, Topeka residents have been asked to keep their automobiles off the streets voluntarily so that all pavements will be available to visitors.

Parking Space Provided.

Entire neighborhoods are to be converted into parking lots. Cars will be stored on vacant property and at the curbs on streets. A fair grounds seven-tenths of a mile from the speaking platform will hold 3,500 automobiles. There are a few other large parking zones.

Visitors who are not spending a night here—and this will include a large part of the motorists—will find advisable to leave their automobiles at the place where they stopped when entering the city. They will then be on a side of the city convenient for departure. The day's activities are all within walking distance.

For driving here from Chicago, there are two routes recommended by the Chicago Motor club. It is 576 miles over U. S. highway 66 to Springfield, Ill., thence west in U. S. highway 36 through Hannibal to St. Joseph, Mo., and southwest in U. S. highway 59 through Atchison, Kas., to pick up Kansas highway 4 and then U. S. highway 75 into Topeka. By way of St. Louis, crossing Missouri to Kansas City on U. S. highway 40, it is 630 miles. There is a detour in highway 40 that might make U. S. highway 50 the preferred route between Kansas City and St. Louis, adding twelve miles to the trip.

The Tribune roadster in Kansas City found the intercity viaduct, the main connection between Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kas., closed for reconstruction. Traffic was congested on the detour. Therefore, unless motorists are planning to spend a night in Kansas City due to the lack of hotel space in Topeka, the route by way of St. Joseph seems to be preferable.

Albuquerque, N. M., July 18.—[U.P.]—The new $350,000 Diesel engine of the Santa Fe Super Chief, crack transcontinental train, "threw" a journal box 52 miles east of Albuquerque late today, Santa Fe officials here announced. The Diesel engine was shunted to a side track and the train resumed its eastward trip as soon as another engine arrived from Albuquerque. First reports were that a steam locomotive pulling the train had been derailed.

Thousands Join New Certificate Plan.

Contributions to the Republican national committee through its dollar participation certificate plan have passed the $100,000 mark, C. B. Goodspeed, the party's national treasurer, announced yesterday. Contributors of a dollar or more are given certificates certifying that they are participants "in the work of bringing about a return to the fundamental principles of our government."

"This money," said Goodspeed, "comes from thousands of persons all over the land who are expressing with cash the determination of the people as a whole to overthrow the New Deal and elect Landon and Knox."

Lincoln Voter Wants Landon.

Goodspeed made public several notes accompanying contributions. One from John J. Hubbard, 207 East Main street, Middletown, Conn., who will be 98 years old in August, read:

"I am proud to have voted for Lincoln and now hope that Landon will be elected."

William S. Stone sent in a dollar from the Masonic home at Charlton, Mass.

"It may mean my going without something," wrote Stone, "but I take great pleasure in sending it. My first vote was for Grover Cleveland."

Also included in yesterday's receipts was a check from Harold Gray, creator of "Orphan Annie," the money to be used "in any way the treasurer sees fit."

Claims Vote of Farm Women.

Miss Daisy Williams, executive director of the farm women's division of the national committee, said yesterday before leaving on a tour of midwestern states that one reason the corn belt will vote for Landon and Knox is that farm women have little money to "maintain the barest standard of living without being burdened by the appalling taxes that the Roosevelt administration has saddled on the people."

Miss Williams was the first woman to be named secretary-treasurer of the state farm bureau of Iowa, an office she held for 10 years.

George F. Harding, national committeeman for Illinois, had returned to Chicago yesterday from his conference with Landon in Topeka on Friday. Harding described the Republican nominee for President as a "very remarkable man." Wayland Brooks, Republican nominee for governor, who also was at the conference, went to Peoria for a meeting of Republican candidates for congress from Illinois.

Brooks to Speak Wednesday.

Brooks will speak on the issues of the gubernatorial campaign at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the Lake Forest High school. Other state and county candidates will be introduced.

The meeting is being held under auspices of the Young People's Progressive Republican club of Lake Forest and the Women's National Republican Finance committee of Illinois. Lake county members of the latter organization are Mrs. William H. Mitchell, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. Austin Niblack, Mrs. James Cathcart, and Mrs. Robert S. Pirie. There will be no solicitation of funds, according to the finance committee.

Blame Hot Sun for Fire in German Streamline Train

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 18.—A 95 degree heat wave was held responsible today for a fire in the streamlined Diesel engined train, the Cologne Flyer, as it sped toward Berlin. The fire started under the diner, but was quickly extinguished.

LANDON LENDS ATTENTIVE EAR TO HUMAN NEEDS

A Liberal—Except in Use of People's Money.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Topeka, Kas., July 18.—[Special.]—Gov. Alf M. Landon's record during his two terms in office has been that of a liberal in all things except the spending of the people's money.

"Wherever there has been a conflict between property and human rights he always has been on the side of the human," said a legislative correspondent who has watched Landon and many governors.

"You can't get a $10 raise in this state without going to the governor about it," said a state employé.

Genius Lies in Common Sense.

Landon's genius is in a common sense approach to all problems and in an ability to get men to work together and go ahead. The recent special session of the legislature illustrated that. He had one amendment in mind, but made no fuss about two when it came to a question of delay and expense and debate.

Members of the house wanted an exemption from taxation of real property in any social security scheme. The lawyers in the senate said it was not necessary. Landon got them together and got the lawyers to back down and accept the house point of view. The farmers were satisfied. The whole program went through.

Saves 2 Millions on Utilities.

"A test of liberalism" and of the governor's administration may be found in his handling of the great public utilities. He called in his corporation commission when he first went into office and told them that people were complaining about rates; that the costs of light and gas should come down, and asked them to see what they could do about it.

In three and one-half years these costs have been reduced 2 million dollars. All this was done by negotiation and agreement, with the exception of gas rates. After a three year fight the gas company and the commission compromised and gas rates were reduced $700,000 a year, with no hard feelings on either side.

"Let's accept the premise of fact," the governor told the people in his first inaugural, "then by discussion, both in public and in private, we shall arrive at the common sense solution."

Demands Relief for Sufferers.

In a special session of the legislature in October, 1933, Gov. Landon asked the law makers to provide greater relief by the issuance of county bonds.

"The state," he said, "has a responsibility to discharge to those unfortunately situated through no fault of their own. Women and children must not suffer."

He recommended amendments to the banking laws to meet the new national bank act.

"Some banks," he said, "desire authority to make use of this new federal legislation; others at this time see little need of being allowed this privilege. It seems to me the safe and constructive policy is to provide a reasonable plan for coöperation of state and national banking systems in which the regulatory departments of the state and federal governments shall participate."

Guilty Suffer—Even His Friends.

There was a great bond scandal during the period. Gov. Landon dealt with it swiftly, vigorously. Two of his friends went to prison as a result.

He asked the legislature to ratify the child labor amendment, although Kansas has no problem of this sort.

In the regular 1933 session of the legislature, the state income tax was put through in conformity with a vote by the people in the preceding election. There was strong opposition and the governor had a hard fight on his hands. It was in this session that the famous budget law was enlarged and put into effect. On public utilities he said:

"We should give consideration to proposals that will strengthen the public service commission for aggressive action to insure just treatment alike for the public utilities operators and the citizens of Kansas who pay for the services provided."

Demands Cut in Taxes.

The most emphatic recommendation was made on taxes.

"Taxes on property must be reduced," he said. "The largest percentage of relief must be given where relief is most needed—that is to real estate. The total tax bill should be measured by our ability to pay. The answer to our legislative program must be reduced taxes, positively reduced, and they must be reduced this year."

In another message to this legislature, he said: "Let us cut out the red tape, disregard all pork barrel propositions, provide what help is actually needed at reasonable salaries only, and see that the state receives honest values for every dollar spent."

Statesmanship vs. Partisanship.

"There are many things that might be done to improve our society," he said, "but the resources of the citizenry must be a basic consideration when appropriations are made. The most careful thought should be given to the spending of public money. My conception of the duties of your chief executive is to use that high office so that the functions of government be carried on properly and with as little expense as possible.

"The framing of a constructive legislative program in these times of grave emergencies calls for statesmanship and not partisanship. There must be no politics in relief and no politics in saving the state from suffering and loss. We are confronted with a two-fold obligation, which, fundamentally, is conflicting in nature. On the one side we must strive to relieve excessive taxation. On the other hand it is imperative to provide public funds to meet emergencies and certain social responsibilities."

In his inaugural that year he discussed government in a philosophical vein, and humbly asked "the assistance of God's Spirit that I may have the strength and wisdom to meet my responsibilities and to be faithful to my duties."

"The two years just past," he continued, "have seen mighty forces at work in our country. For the first time in history those who guide our destinies are intent on establishing a planned economy.

"This has thrust innovations in government to the fore. It has provided a school of theorists with a laboratory ready at their hands for the purpose of trying out their experiment. Never in the history of our country have we attempted so many great political experiments in such a short time.

Looks to Fuller, Richer Life.

"America bids fair to join the procession of nations of the world in their march toward a new social and economic philosophy. Some say this will lead to socialism; some say communism, others fascism. For myself I am convinced that the ultimate goal will be a modified form of individual rights and ownership of property out of which will come a wider spread of prosperity and opportunity for a fuller, richer life for man.

"The phases of the present social and economic experiments which will survive will be determined eventually when they have been threshed through the mill of time, circumstances and experience.

"This is not a new condition. As Keller says in 'Man's Rough Road,' democracy evolves in essentially the same way as do horse's hoofs—through the operation of variation, selection and transmission. From the day when men first struck fire off a flint point, evolutionary factors entered the social arena; and there has been such continuity between the process in nature and that in society that the law of adjustment, which begins where life begins, continues to operate irresistibly, if silently, behind the most elaborate civilization.

Cannot Legislate a Solution.

"The problems before us cannot be settled by congress or the legislature. They cannot be solved by the so-called leaders of industry, finance, or business. They cannot be shifted to any group or class. They are an obligation for all. We must not engage in fanciful and self-indulgent dreams. From the chaos of our present economic confusion we must center our efforts toward solution of the basic problem.

". . . We should remember that assistance to the unemployed is not a privilege or a vested right. Neither is it a charity. It is a common obligation created by the rapidity and complexity of our economic growth . . . We should, however, attempt to attain, as nearly as possible, a pay-as-you-go basis. Certainly an increasing public debt will lessen the ability of our succeeding generations to meet their emergencies as they arise.

Would Emulate Pioneers.

"The worst calamity that might follow as a result of the present economic situation would be the loss or impairment of those spiritual qualities which have distinguished the citizens of our state since its founding. Their trust in God, their courage, self-reliance, and interest in government have marked every year of the state's existence and constitute a heritage which should be guarded zealously.

"The nation would do well to emulate the courage and resourcefulness of the Kansas farmer—to catch some of the inward fire of a spirit that moves him to face dire calamities of nature with hopefulness for the future and a determination to make the best of any situation.

"I have a profound conviction that our greatest wealth is spiritual wealth and that in the example of the people of a generation ago, who trod these paths and worked these fields, lies the inspiration to restore us to a happy and prosperous people."

SECOND DIVISION DEDICATES MEMORIAL

Veterans of the Second division, American Expeditionary Forces, dedicated in Washington, D. C., yesterday this impressive stone monument to their dead comrades. The ceremony was an event of the division's reunion.

Monument to 4,200

Washington, D. C., July 18—[Special]—Veterans of the Second Division association today dedicated to the memory of more than 4,200 of their world war dead an impressive memorial.

Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, a war time commander of the division, made the principal address.

The memorial, designed by James E. Frazer, well known sculptor, shows a great open doorway, flanked by inscribed wings of stone, before which stands an 18 foot high bronze sword, symbolic of the Second division's stand at Château Thierry and Belleau Wood, where it barred the way to Paris against the enemy. During that historic battle Harbord was in command.

At a business session this morning the association elected Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Matthews, Marine corps headquarters, president. Arthur J. Murphy, Chicago, was elected second vice president, and George V. Gordon, Chicago, was elected treasurer.

Cap Pistol Bandit Changes His Name, Also Address

The young man arrested Friday night when he attempted to rob Dr. James E. Lebensohn, 20 East Delaware place, an eye specialist, told Town Hall police yesterday he was Nicholas Sereno, 22 years old, 2003 West Huron street, one of eight children. At the time of his arrest Sereno gave his name as Rollins and claimed falsely that he lived in the Y. M. C. A. at Lincoln and Belmont avenues. Armed with a cap pistol, Sereno halted Dr. Lebensohn at Junior terrace and Clarendon avenue and got into his car. At Lake Shore drive and Grace street Dr. Lebensohn called Park Policeman Samuel Blake, who arrested Sereno.

Whistle Sticks; Zephyr Slows Up for Crossings

The Burlington railroad's Denver-Chicago Zephyr was 20 minutes late yesterday at the Union Station—the first time the streamliner has been tardy in 47 days of its career. "The whistle got stuck near Galesburg," said an official of the railroad, "and as a result the crew had to slow up for all crossings. That put the train behind time."

BERLE PICKED BY LA GUARDIA TO HEAD ALDERMEN

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Politicians of both major parties didn't have to wait long today.

Arriving at the summer city hall, Mayor F. H. La Guardia answered the Republican nomination of Ald. Newbold Morris to head the board of aldermen by naming City Chamberlain A. A. Berle Jr., as the man best fitted for that job.

Mr. Berle is the city's representative in the transit unification negotiations. A New Dealer, he was and is a member of the Roosevelt brain trust.

Republican haste in naming Morris, alderman from the Fifteenth district, was believed to have been caused by the fear the mayor would act as he did.

In taking action, the mayor said: "I submit for the consideration of independent groups, Republicans and all interested in good municipal government, the name of Adolph A. Berle Jr. for the office of president of the board of aldermen."

Mr. Morris long has been a regular Republican. The presidency of the board of aldermen became vacant with the death of Bernard S. Deutsch last winter. Ald. Timothy J. Sullivan held that office temporarily.

FIVE MEN BATTLE ESCAPED PYTHON TO SAVE MONKEY

Thurmont, Md., July 18.—(AP)—Five men struggled with a 14 foot rock python before they could return the escaped reptile to its cage at Gordon P. Gaver's snake farm here.

The snake arrived from India yesterday and its cage was put in the snakehouse. Last night Gaver stepped into the darkened snakehouse before going to bed. He heard a monkey crying and turned on a light. The python's cage was empty. The reptile had climbed to a perch back of the monkey's cage in an attempt to reach the animal.

Gaver called help and Franklin H. Rice, Lloyd Seipler, Thomas McPherson, and John McPherson came in. The snake is not poisonous, but kills its victims by enfolding and crushing them.

The coiled snake hissed at the men and struck at them, but they managed to push it partly into the cage with long sticks. Finally they grabbed the remaining coils and pushed them into the cage barehanded.

Gaver said the greatest danger of the recapture was to the snake. If the reptile had been bruised, he said, it would have died.

Cunningham to Receive Legion of Honor Award

Carleton B. Cunningham, commander in chief of the Allied World War Veterans' council, has been named a chevalier of the Legion of Honor, it was announced yesterday by Acting French Consul Jean Strauss. Presentation of the honor will be made in August with the return of Consul Rene Weiller from France.

HOOVER TO TOUR MAINE IN BEHALF OF GOV. LANDON

State Viewed as Key Point in New Deal Test.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—[Special.]—Former President Herbert Hoover has assured officials of the Republican national committee that he will participate just as vigorously in the presidential campaign as he did in the preconventional struggle, these officials say. He is scheduled to make his opening drive for the election of Gov. Alf Landon by joining with the host of Republicans who will descend on Maine after Labor day.

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican national committee has notified his friends here that Maine offers the best opportunity in years of testing the political barometer. He claimed that the voters there are strongly against the New Deal, but attached to Gov. Louis J. Brann, the Democratic candidate for the senate. The struggle there this year, he added, will not be on personalities, but on policies.

First Test of New Deal.

"Here will be the first test of the New Deal and the program of the Republican party to restore representative government," Mr. Hamilton said in a letter to associates here. "We plan to conduct a thorough campaign of education in Maine, believing that if we win in the September election, the phychological effect will be good throughout the country. Reports of workers are that Maine is safely Republican and the same condition appears to exist in all of New England."

If possible Gov. Landon will make his New England tour in time to speak in Maine a few days before the September election.

Borah to Lend a Hand.

The Republican leaders, however, are depending greatly upon the efforts of Former President Hoover to aid them in Maine.

Mr. Hamilton also is counting upon Senator William E. Borah to make at least two speeches, one over the radio and the other in Illinois. According to friends of the senator, he will follow his decision not to bolt the party by making speeches in behalf of the national ticket, but will not be able to do much speaking outside his own state because his campaign for reëlection to the senate will absorb most of his time.

HITS RELIEF CORRUPTION

Hershey, Pa., July 18.—[Special.]—A charge of "political perversion of unemployment relief" in Pennsylvania as part of a "desperate effort" by the Democrats to capture the state in November was made by John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, in an address today before a state-wide assemblage of party workers.

Hamilton declared that every resource of the Roosevelt administration would be thrown into Pennsylvania in the fall campaign in the Democratic attempt to win the state's thirty-six electoral votes. He added, however, that "without question" this commonwealth and also all of the New England states will return Republican majorities.

Guest of State Committee.

Early in the evening he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the state committee. Later he delivered an address by radio to the state at large.

"Mr. Roosevelt's party," he asserted, "intends to make a desperate effort to win the thirty-six electoral votes from your state, and that is as evident as the character of the campaign they intend to conduct.

"It is unnecessary for me to recall to you the political perversion of unemployment relief that has taken place in Pennsylvania at the hands of a ruthless party machine. In instance after instance, the corruption you have long suspected has been proven by incontrovertible evidence."

Issues Explained Easily.

Mr. Hamilton declared the facts of the campaign are "simple" and the issues "fundamental."

"They rest," he went on, "upon a question of whether common sense is still common sense; whether integrity in public life is somewhat different from integrity in private life; whether arithmetic ceases to be arithmetic merely because figures run into the billions; whether scarcity makes abundance; whether too much debt is cured by more debt; whether thrift and prudence have suddenly become a sin against society, and waste a virtue."

AWAIT ADDITION TO FAMILY

Little Prince Edward, shown here with his parents, the duke and duchess of Kent, is to have a new and very close kinsman as a playmate in the not distant future, according to dispatches from London.

Son Born Last Year

LONDON, July 18.—(AP)—The duchess of Kent is expecting the birth of a second child, a unusually reliable source said today. The duke and duchess of Kent have a son, Prince Edward, born Oct. 9, 1935. The duke is the youngest brother of King Edward VIII. of England and the duchess is the fromer Princess Marina of Greece. They were married Nov. 29, 1934.

WOMAN SHOT BY SPURNED SUITOR DIES OF WOUNDS

Evansville, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Cora Gross Mercer, 30, of Mount Vernon, died in a hospital here last night after being shot a few hours earlier by her spurned suiter, Webb Carey, 34.

The shooting occurred on the New Harmony rodeo grounds. Carey had been going about with Mrs. Mercer for some time, but they had a misunderstanding about a month ago. When he sought reconciliation yesterday afternoon she turned a deaf ear. He appeared on the rodeo grounds in the evening, ordered some thirty people in her vicinity to stand aside and fired at Mrs. Mercer as she sat in a truck. She was struck three times. Carey had been drinking, the officers said.

Huntington Mayor's Veto Kills 3d Move to Oust Him

Huntington, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Mayor C. W. H. Bangs has vetoed for a third time an ordinance passed by the city council in its effort to oust him. Expecting a veto, the councilmen already had called a special session for Monday night, when another attempt will be made to get sufficient votes to override the veto.

WATCH FARM BARNS BURN.

Mishawaka, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Hundreds of persons watched a fire that wrecked two barns early this morning on the farms owned by Mrs. Droege. The damage was $6,000.

ADMITS SLAYING OF SHERIF'S AID AT TERRE HAUTE

Terre Haute, Ind., July 18.—[U. P.]—Confronted with his alleged confession to the slaying of Chief Deputy Sherif Paul Mankin, Willis Fuller, 28, Paris, Ill., today was submitted to further questioning by authorities.

According to police, Fuller's only statement was:

"Yes, I fired the shot that killed Mankin."

Shepherd Blakemore, 35, colored, from Gibson, Tenn., was seized for questioning.

Mankin was killed by two men he attempted to question in connection with the robbery of a couple near the Pennsylvania railroad bridge over the Wabash river. Blakemore, seized near the scene of the crime, named Fuller as the slayer.

CANDY CLERK ROBBED.

Miss Ellen Morrison, 28 years old, 1144 North Kedvale avenue, a clerk in a candy shop at 3232 Madison street, was robbed of $40 yesterday by a man who bound her with adhesive tape.

$4,000 Blaze Destroys Tavern Near Wheaton

The Jewel road tavern, northwest of the Wheaton city limits, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin early yesterday. When Ralph Attig, the owner, learned of the blaze he expressed fear for two employes who were there when he left. As deputy sheriffs searched the ruins the men appeared. Damage from the fire was placed at $4,000.

AUTO KILLS OHIOAN, 80.

Newark, O., July 18.—[Special.]—Benjamin Hammer, 80, was struck and killed today by an automobile driven by Gus Heitman of Fairfield, Ill., at Sago, O., south of here.

TOWNSENDITES NEAR OPEN RIFT ON CANDIDATES

Directors May Resign Posts in Row.

cash in the defense fund totaled about $5,000 and the pledge about $25,000. The official figures were not ready.

From the standpoint of the general public, the appearance on the platform this afternoon of Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, was the high spot of the day. But in view of the internal situation, that brief but stanch appeal for socialism was but an incident to the 11,000 who have sat almost constantly in this convention hall for the last four days.

A moderate amount of booing greeted Thomas when he frankly told the thousands of Townsend enthusiasts listening to him that he did not and could not indorse the Townsend plan.

Means End of Capitalism.

The first boos came when he said: "You can't keep the capitalistic system and pay persons over 60 years of age $200 a month."

The protests were renewed later when he gave some of the reasons for his position.

"I can't indorse the plan," he said, "first, because I don't think the money can be raised; second, that it can't be raised without inflation, which would make $200 worth about $20, and third, because I believe you are misusing your enthusiasm—that you could use it much more profitably."

The boos were not widespread, but at one time Dr. Townsend intervened to urge courtesy for the man speaking upon the invitation of the guests.

One tangible declaration of principles adopted without opposition was a promise to work for congressmen and senators pledged to the Townsend plan; a plank criticizing the Bell committee of the house of representatives which investigated Townsend; an expansion of the program among young people; an authorization to the board of directors to withdraw the Townsend indorsement from any congressional candidate who turns out to be unsatisfactory.

Rebels Meet in Hotel.

The pro-Roosevelt rebellion was held in the Hotel Cleveland suite of Gomer Smith, who still is in the bad books of Dr. Townsend to such an extent that the effort to oust him may be renewed tomorrow or Monday. Others who joined in the Democratic declaration were Otto A. Case, treasurer of the state of Washington; Dempster O. Potts of Wichita, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator from Kansas; Nathan J. Roberts of Florida, southern regional director, and Dr. Clinton Wunder of New York City, all four of whom are members of the board of directors.

The others were Willis E. Mahoney, mayor of Klamath Falls, Ore., Democratic nominee for United States senator and chairman of the convention committee on resolutions; Sheridan Downey of Los Angeles, attorney for the organization and Dr. Townsend's personal counsel, and Congressman Martin F. Smith of Washington. In addition to these a number of the newly created citizens maximi, members of the national advisory board, also were declaring for Roosevelt.

FARLEY CALLS GOMER SMITH TO A PARLEY

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 18.—[U. P.]—Gomer Smith, defeated Townsendite candidate for Oklahoma's Democratic United States senatorial post, was projected into the national political scene tonight when National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley called him to New York for a conference.

Smith, who stampeded the Townsend pension convention in Cleveland away from indorsement of the Lemke third party, appeared to be the man upon whom Farley will depend to squelch the third party appeal to leftist Democrats who might forsake President Roosevelt.

In a telephone conversation with a friend here, Smith confirmed the report that Farley had summoned him for a conference.

Smith will carry to Washington the pledges of Townsend leaders in 17 southern states that they will follow him and the Democratic party instead of Dr. Francis E. Townsend.

British Use Armored Cars, Planes in Fight with Arabs

JERUSALEM, July 18.—(AP)—Armored cars and airplanes were used by British soldiers yesterday in a battle with Arab terrorists in which at least six were killed it was learned today. The encounter, which lasted for several hours, occurred between Anebta and Tulkarem. All the casualties were understood to have been suffered by the Arabs.

KENOSHA TO HAVE CIVIC HOLIDAY TO HONOR C. W. NASH

Kenosha, Wis., July 18.—[Special.]—The 20th anniversary of the arrival in Kenosha of Charles W. Nash will be celebrated on Wednesday, July 29, as a civic holiday here.

All Kenosha will join in paying tribute to the man and the institution which has contributed so much to the progress of the community in the last 20 years.

On July 29, 1916, Mr. Nash had purchased the plant of the Thomas B. Jeffery company after resigning from the presidency of the General Motors company, and had come to Kenosha with a million dollars to build a car bearing his own name.

When that first automobile came off the assembly lines a year later Mr. Nash had established himself as a civic leader as well as an industrial magnate in Kenosha.

In those 20 years Nash has built 1,100,000 automobiles, sold more than a billion dollars worth of its product, paid out $54,000,000 in taxes, $110,000,000 in dividends, and more than $100,000,000 in pay rolls in the Kenosha plant alone.

Spreading to Racine and Milwaukee in later years the Nash Motors company has become one of Wisconsin's largest industries, and all three cities will join here July 29 in paying tribute to the founder of the company.

Invitations have been sent out by Ralph S. Kingsley, general chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee, to the leading men in the nation's automobile industry for a banquet in honor of Mr. Nash on the evening of the celebration.

GERMANY SENDS 17 MONKS TO JAIL AS SMUGGLERS

CLEVE, Germany, July 18.—(AP)—Seventeen Franciscan brothers of Petrusheim, near the Dutch frontier, were given sentences today upon conviction of smuggling wheat, cattle, and benzine from Holland into Germany over a period of several years.

The terms ranged from one month in jail to six years in the penitentiary. Heavy fines were imposed. Adolf Keller, accused as the leader, had fled abroad. Two were acquitted.

Sister of Col. Knox Will Speak at Republican Tea

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Herbert L. Fairfield of Great Neck, N. Y., a sister of Col. ADMITS HE CHIDED COUGHLIN FOR HIS TOWNSEND TALK

Detroit Bishop Denies Disciplining Priest.

New York, July 18.—[U. P.]—Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit, sailing today on the Rex for a visit to the Vatican, said he had "chided" the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin for using "language that was a little too strong" in his attacks on President Roosevelt.

The 70 year old bishop said he did not plan to make any report to the Vatican concerning Father Coughlin.

Denies Disciplining Priest.

"It is not true that I have disciplined Father Coughlin for remarks about President Roosevelt at the Townsend convention," he said. "I did tell him that I thought he used language that was a little too strong or that he could have been a little more diplomatic.

"I hope to see the Holy father, but I won't discuss Father Coughlin with the Vatican unless they speak about it. I was over there two years ago and nothing was said to me then about Father Coughlin.

"All this talk about me rebuking or not rebuking Father Coughlin comes usually from those who would like to have me do it. Then there's the other group which approves of what he does and says."

Asked About Church Rules.

Bishop Gallagher was asked whether the church says that "no priest may organize or lead a political party."

"Father Coughlin is not the leader of any political party nor an organizer," the bishop replied. "There are lay leaders. He is only a member and frequently an adviser. His principles conform to the principles of the party and consequently his sympathy is with them. That is the privilege of every American citizen."

The prelate said he did not regard President Roosevelt either a communist or a Fascist.

"You know," he said, "that congress has given him extreme powers and there are many in his own party who believe he should never have such power."

MUSICAL DRAMA OF WEST IS PORTRAYED BROADWAY STYLE

Forth Worth, Tex., July 18.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, from his fishing schooner off Nova Scotia, touched off Forth Worth's frontier centennial celebration late today with an electrical impulse that cut a lariat in front of the gates.

There was a triple show put on by Billy Rose, to give musical atmosphere with a background of the old west. Curtains went up on "Casa Manana," "The Last Frontier," and "Jumbo,"—the last spectacle Rose produced on Broadway. The performers included Paul Whiteman, Sally Rand, Ann Pennington, former Follies star; Everett Marshall, Metropolitan baritone; Yolanda and Veloz, Eddie Foy, and Jumbo, the elephant.

"Only a nut like Billy Rose could conceive a show like this," said Whiteman.

Senator Norbeck Leaves Hospital for Black Hills

Rochester, Minn., July 18.—(AP)—Senator Peter Norbeck [Rep., S. D.] left today for his summer home in the Black Hills after being treated for a week in a local hospital. The senator has not regained full strength following an illness last spring, but Mayo clinic physicians gave him an encouraging report and expressed belief he will be in good condition after a rest.

THICK WEATHER HINDERS CRUISE OF ROOSEVELTS

Schooner Finally Docks at Shelburne, N. S.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

Aboard Schooner Liberty, July 18.—[Special.]—The two master schooner Sewanna, skippered by President Roosevelt, encountered its first fog in five days of cruising today off Cape Sable on a 45 mile run to Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

As the Sewanna weighed anchor in lower Wood harbor at 8:30 this morning a thin haze hung out to sea. The schooner found no wind, so auxiliary motors were tuned up for the first time in two days.

Listens to Foghorns.

The destroyer Hopkins and the presidential yacht closed in on the Sewanna as the schooner pierced the veil of fog. Mr. Roosevelt was at the helm with ears alert to catch the throaty "ah H H H me" of foghorns on the Sable lighthouse of the harbor.

The President pointed the schooner's bow out to sea, swinging in a wide circle just within earshot of whistling buoys marking the shallow water. The fog hung in a series of veils for the first ten minutes out, then deepened so the sun hung like a bright five cent piece against the sky.

Easier to Run Engines.

Absence of wind lightened the day's labor for the President's crew, his sons, James, Franklin Jr., and John. They were not called upon to bend canvas to catch fitful winds, but merely stood tricks at the wheel.

The 45 mile cruise—ten miles up the bottleneck harbor of Shelburne—was made in nine hours. The Sewanna dropped anchor at 4:30 p. m. Again the President called a motor launch from the Hopkins to tempt cod and tuna fish. During the run tuna leaped sportively alongside the schooner.

BABIES REGISTER 106 DEGREES LIKE MERCURY TUBES

Columbus, O., July 18.—(AP)—Because newborn babies—like thermometers—react speedily to surrounding temperatures, this summer's heat waves brought new problems into hospital nurseries in the "hot" zones.

While the "thermostat" or heat center in the human brain kept adult bodies near the normal 98.6 degree temperature during the sizzling weather, nurses at one hospital made charts showing body temperatures of infants under their charge kept pace with official thermometer readings as they climbed to a maximum of 106 degrees.

Dr. Andrews Rogers, head of the department of obstetrics at the Ohio State University Medical school, said: "Infants, fortunately can stand body heat of 104 or 105 degrees with no more harm than that produced by 101 degree temperatures in adults."

Dr. W. E. Inglis, another expert on obstetrics, said the body heat of infants varied with the outside temperature, because of the more sensitive heat center in babies.

CANDIDATES FOR CONGRESS PLAN VIGOROUS FIGHT

G. O. P. Cheered by Word from Landon.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., July 18.—[Special.]—Taking an early start on their New Deal opponents, 25 of the 27 Republican candidates for congressional seats from Illinois met here today and planned a long and driving campaign against Democratic "yes men."

The candidates were in perfect agreement that they have a fight on their hands, but they also were cheered by the substantial swing in sentiment noted since the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox at Cleveland last month and they cheered when Wayland Brooks, nominee for governor, told them that Gov. Landon had asked him yesterday in Topeka to carry word to them that he hoped especial emphasis would be placed behind the congressional campaign in Illinois.

Job is to Win Every Seat.

"The Republican party," Brooks said, "has turned to Kansas and Illinois for leadership, to Gov. Landon and to Col. Knox. It also named John Hamilton of Kansas national chairman and Barney Goodspeed of Illinois national treasurer. We have a special responsibility, the job of carrying every congressional district for the ticket."

"Congressmen from Illinois can impart the middle western viewpoint of life in Washington. The congress is the safety valve and the members of congress are the elected representatives closest to the people. They will decide the future course of the country."

Each candidate was called upon to report the sentiment in his or her district and to make suggestions for the conduct of the campaign. All were optimistic of success.

In private, many of those present who are familiar with sentiment in the various congressional districts said that they hoped to elect at least 16 of the 27 candidates in November, but it was not doubted that every effort would be made to carry them all to victory.

Funds to Be Supplied.

Finances were discussed after the speechmaking and Congressman Everett M. Dirksen of Pekin, host at today's luncheon, told the candidates that funds for the campaign would be distributed by the Republican national committee after collections are made by the finance committees in each state.

Dirksen also talked on the practical side of winning the election and giving the house a Republican majority for the next session of congress.

"Today we have 318 Democrats and 104 Republicans in the house," he said, "that produces a top-heavy majority of 214. Yet we need change only 114 of these and hold what we have in order to elect a Republican house. Michigan, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Kansas, New York, and other states will do their share and I trust this initial meeting will be the beginning of a drive which will fill all or a substantial majority of the 27 Illinois seats with Republicans in the next congress."

Peoria Mayor Speaks.

Other speakers included Mayor Edward I. Woodruff of Peoria, William R. Allen, secretary of the state central committee, and Harry Scranton, county chairman of Peoria county.

Seated about the luncheon table, the congressional candidates represented a diverse group, although their political interests are identical. There were farmers, bankers, lawyers, a publisher, several school teachers, a former ace state's attorney and three legislators. Five are present members of congress and several others also have served terms in Washington. Only two candidates, Chicagoans, from Chicago were absent, Frank M. Fulton [3d], and E. R. Piszatowski [8th].

From Chicago's First district there was Oscar De Priest, first of his race to win a seat in the house in half a century. He expects to defeat his successor, Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat, another colored man, in November.

Moynihan Is Experienced.

Others present were Patrick H. Moynihan, the Second district nominee, who also has had experience in Washington. Mrs. Irene A. Thomas, one of the two women candidates among the nominees, is from the Fourth district. For the same general section of Chicago came Max Price, garage owner, who will attend the defeat of A. J. Sabbath, dean of the house in point of terms served.

Frederick A. Virkus of La Grange, publisher of a genealogical magazine and of reference books, is the Sixth district nominee and from the Seventh came James C. Moreland, former Chicago alderman. Mrs. Bertha Baur, national committeewoman, came from the Ninth.

Church Is Confident.

Congressman Ralph E. Church, lawyer and ex-legislator, was renominated in the Tenth and is confident of reëlection.

Downstate candidates at the luncheon included Congressman Chauncey W. Reed, Eleventh district; State Senator Noah M. Mason, Twelfth; Congressman Leo E. Allen, Thirteenth; State Representative Clinton Searle, Fourteenth; Mayor Joe E. Anderson of Galena, Fifteenth; Congressman Dirksen, Sixteenth; Congressman L. C. Arends, Seventeenth; State Representative Hugh M. Luckey, Eighteenth; William H. Wheat, Nineteenth; Dr. Harry C. Montgomery, Twentieth; Frank M. Ramey, Twenty-first; Judge Jesse R. Brown, Twenty-second; Ben O. Sumner, Twenty-fourth; J. Lester Buford, Twenty-fifth, and Rodney H. Brandon, Batavia, at large candidate with John T. Dempsey of Chicago.

In addition to addressing the congressional candidates, Mr. Brooks talked briefly with a group of Peoria physicians at a luncheon sponsored by the Physicians' Brooks-for-Governor club of Illinois. The club is headed by three Chicagoans, Dr. Martin Lukin, chairman, Dr. D. F. Croutch, chairman of the organization committee, and Dr. Warren Johnson, secretary and treasurer. The trio has organized units in 87 of the 102 counties of the state and proposed to establish an active group in behalf of Brooks' candidacy in each county before the campaign begins in earnest.

VETERANS DELAY BOND CASHING AS DAYS PASS

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Bonus payments slowed to a trickle this week. Treasury officials expressed surprise at the large number of veterans apparently preferring interest bearing bonds to immediate cash.

Thus far, of $1,708,600,000 in bonds issued to the veterans, a total of $1,064,300,000 has been presented for cash payment. That was against an estimate, made in May, that the cash cost of the bonus would run to $2,237,000,000.

The figures, too, showed both bond and cash payments rapidly dwindling. In approximately the last fifteen days of June $1,668,700,000 in bonds were issued, of which the veterans cashed $724,200,000.

By comparison, approximately the same number of days in July saw only $39,000,000 in bonds go to the former soldiers and $340,000,000 presented for cash payment.

If, as some officials think is indicated, the payments are thus sloping away, a revision in the year's budget figures may become necessary.

Injunction Sought Against School Board's Warant Plan

The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh yesterday filed suit in the United States District court here asking that the Chicago board of education be restrained from retiring $840,000 of 1929 tax anticipation warants in numerical order. The trust company suing as a holder of the warants, asks that they be paid off on a pro rata basis. The suit is similar to one in which the Norfolk and Western Railway company was granted a restraining order in federal court here last April. An appeal is pending on the Norfolk case.

COMMON SENSE VIEWS HAILED IN WOMEN'S FORUM

Miss Stewart Scores with Unscheduled Talk.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

An extemporaneous speech by Miss Mary Stewart of Sacramento was a high point of interest yesterday at the forum sponsored by the Business and Professional Women as a climax to their 17th national board meeting in the Stevens hotel. Miss Stewart, who is a Republican and who formerly lived in Washington, proved herself able to clarify the knottiest problems with her common sense views.

"The part women have played in history never has been recognized," said Mrs. Mary R. Beard, historian, lecturer and co-author of "The Rise of American Civilization."

Believes Men Represent Women.

This brought Miss Stewart, who used to be a suffrage worker, to her feet.

"I cannot but feel that men have represented women's point of view in history," she said pleasantly. "Woman has been the power behind the throne.

"I do not believe in the assumption that there is a man welfare and a woman welfare. It is foolish to say that men want war and women want peace. We are too united as a whole.

"Women must be interested in evolving a social and economic system that will allow both men and women to live full, rounded lives. The Federation of Business and Professional Women must have its influence on the general psychology in showing that women can be wage earners and at the same time home women.

"Women haven't gone out into the world of their own desire. Their work—spinning, weaving, canning, for instance—has gone out of the home and they have had to follow.

Would Make Politics Practical.

"But the biggest thing women can do right now is to inject a practical voice into politics. You know women are more realistic than men. Men can be dreamers because their work is at longer range, but baby will not wait until next week for his bottle. There are many problems men have thought about for a long time and decided can't be solved. Women don't know they can't be solved and go ahead and solve them.

"In politics and government administration women can be of great service by injecting a realistic point of view unencumbered by precedents or traditions."

Miss Stewart is holding a position in the department of the interior through a civil service appointment under another administration. She just has been transferred from Washington to California.

Dr. Hohman Speaks.

Besides Mrs. Beard the speakers who appeared on the forum program were Dr. Helen Hohman, former professor of economics at Northwestern university and now a government employé; Dr. Gardiner C. Means, head of the industrial section of the natural resources committee in Washington, and Mrs. Carol Willis Hyatt, who is engaged in consumer work in Washington.

In sounding the keynote of the forum, Mrs. Hyatt said, "Merely shouting for our right to personal security will not solve our problem. There is no simple answer. We have been born into a highly complex technological age which presents problems never encountered before. There is no turning back."

Mrs. Beard criticized modern business women for depending too much on their eyes and their feelings. She advised them to study history if they wanted to find out what the depression had done and was doing to them. Dr. Hohman defended a governmental program for social security.

BOSTON TECH PLANS FIVE YEAR COURSE ON SHIP MANAGEMENT

Cambridge, Mass., July 17.—(AP)—Massachusetts Institute of Technology announced a five-year course in marine transportation tonight with the fourth year to be spent at sea. The fifth year will be spent in intensive study in the department of naval architecture and marine engineering. Marine transportation will be the name of the course.

"It is a course in scientific shipping management as viewed from the point of view of business, and it covers the shore administration of shipping," the announcement said.

SENATOR ROBINSON SAYS SUPREME COURT ERRS AS OTHERS DO

Pine Bluff, Ark., July 18.—(AP)—Senator Joe T. Robinson, discussing Supreme court invalidation of the agricultural adjustment act, told a farmers' massmeeting tonight "judges like other men are likely to err."

The Democratic senate leader described the act as "the most important ever passed by congress for the benefit of the farmers." He said he had no apologies for sponsoring the measure.

"Notwithstanding the adverse decision of a bare majority of the Supreme court that the act was unconstitutional," he said, "it accomplished its purpose and saved agriculture from hopeless ruin."

Robinson said the Supreme court "shocked many members of the American bar" when it held in the New York minimum wage case that the state cannot prescribe maximum hours and minimum wages.

Horner to Get Request for School Legislation

On his return from vacation this week, Gov. Horner will have before him a request from seven civic organizations that he call a special session of the legislature to consider school legislation recommended recently by the Illinois educational commission. The organizations ask that the session dealing with school legislation run concurrently with the session on relief problems which is to reconvene on Aug. 4.

HUSBAND, WIFE SEEKING SAME CONGRESS SEAT

New Bedford, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—Husband and wife were arrayed against each other here tonight for the congressional seat of Charles L. Gifford, Republican.

William J. McAuliffe announced several weeks ago he would seek the union for social justice nomination.

Today Mrs. McAuliffe, the mother of two children, made it a family affair by announcing she aspired to the Republican nomination.

"If she wins the nomination and I win my nomination, we'll celebrate," McAuliffe said. "There'll be no trip to Reno. We'll be friendly rivals."

Mrs. McAuliffe stressed that she and her husband have a common aim, support of the principles of the national union for social justice of which she has been an organizer and unit president here.

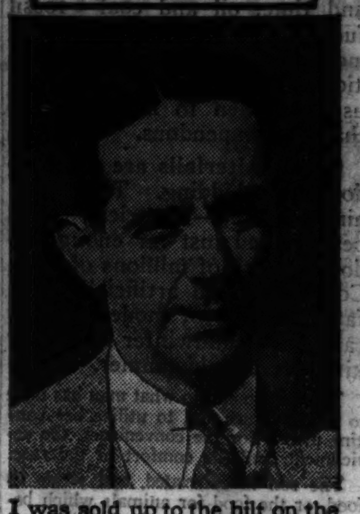
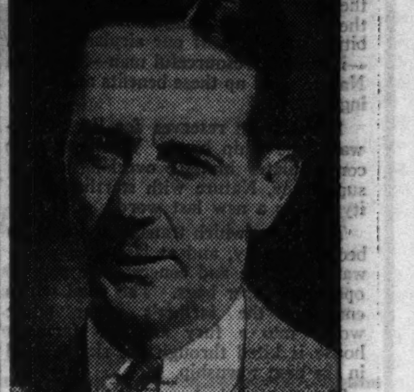
"What a Money-Saver My Dodge Is!"
says "RUSS" OAKES, nationally-known Baltimore sports writer



I was sold up to the hilt on the new 1936 Dodge long before I bought one.



Now that I have one I am just bursting with enthusiasm about it.

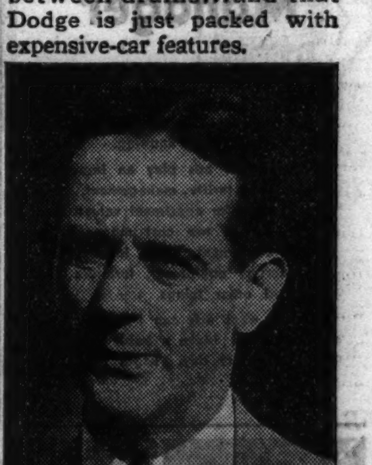
I'm getting close to 21 miles to the gallon of gas...Use no oil between drains...and that Dodge is just packed with expensive-car features.



Think of it! It sells for just a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars...At the rate it's going it will eventually cost me less than my old small car...No wonder Dodge sells more automobiles than any other make with the exception of the three lowest-priced cars.

NATURE SUPREME

by CALEB

MAN has achieved many triumphs over nature. The sun and the moon have been made to work for us. Gifts of the sun and time, oil and coal—fossil fuel—have revolutionized our industry and our economics. The tides—born of the moon—are used by men to float weights that are stupendous.

Great waterfalls are made to do men's bidding. The lightning's secret—electricity—has been solved just far enough to do the work of millions of men. Cold is created artificially, and families even of modest means can have midwinter in their kitchens in midsummer.

There is no end to what man has done to tame Nature and to utilize her routine moods for the convenience, the enrichment, and the comfort of the race.

The soil is cultivated, and yields us food, or the food for animals which become in their turn our food. Trees are felled—and we are surrounded with the things wood makes. Nature provides us the water we drink—with the warmth of the sun—and the cooling breezes which blow from the lake. She supplies the water which floats our vessels and the air to provide the resistance to the biting propellors of our airplanes. Man—ingenious, resourceful man—has made Nature yield up these benefits and blessings.

But Nature reserves for herself, always, the whip hand. Whenever man congratulates himself overlong on his supremacy, Nature with startling finality speaks a new last word.

The water which transports our ships becomes angry, and at last strong seawalls of stone and concrete are popped open like paper bags. The wind which energizes the farmer's water pump works into a fury and the farmer's house is kited through the sky to land in the next township.

The light flaked snow which covers and comforts the winter wheat falls too lavishly, and man's greatest demons of steel and iron chug into it just so far before acknowledging defeat. The inviting mountain slope, on which nestles a happy village, begins to shiver and shake. And man is as helpless as a grain of sand in a sieve.

Among men, man may be full of bravado and a sense of achievement. But before the forces of Nature, he may only be humble. We can build buildings which will resist earthquakes, ships which will offer great resistance to sinking, houses and barns which stubbornly resist the tornado, levees which resolutely stay angry waters—but we never know for certain that Nature isn't reserving for herself some last word to say.

So much the greater are men's achievements—because Nature is so finally unconquerable.

DROUTH RELIEF IS EXTENDED TO ELEVEN STATES

664,000 Farm Families in Need of Aid.

Rapid City, S. D., July 18.—(AP)—The federal drouth relief program was ordered extended into eleven southern, central, and northwest states tonight by R. G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, in addition to the present official five state drouth area.

Communicating with resettlement supervisors and regional heads of 16 states, Tugwell was informed that at least 664,000 farmers and their dependents must be taken care of immediately.

Then came a quick order by him for immediate application of the drouth relief program to eleven states in addition to North and South Dakota, western Minnesota, eastern Montana, and Wyoming.

Appeals from South.

The appeals came from Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Oklahoma, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, and western Wisconsin, victims of drouth conditions constantly becoming more serious.

"Extend immediate aid to the needy farmers, and place every agency at your command into the field at once," was Tugwell's general order to resettlement administration officials of all drouth states. "The President has ordered that no one must be permitted to go without food. The job is up to you."

In the eleven states expected to soon be officially added to the drouth area, resettlement administration estimates given Tugwell were that 122,500 farm families representing 490,000 dependents must have immediate help. In the five state drouth area, 43,500 farm families, or 174,000 inhabitants, will be placed on federal aid.

Allotments for Month.

Allotments for this month to drouth states and according to direct grants or loans were made available for the first time today as follows:

	Grants.	Live stock feed loans.
Minnesota	$ 75,000	$ 50,000
Missouri	225,000	....
Kentucky	125,000	10,000
Tennessee	125,000	10,000
Virginia	8,750	....
Alabama	75,000	....
Georgia	125,000	....
South Carolina	90,000	....
Kansas	155,000	....
Nebraska	144,500	....
North Dakota	350,000	400,000
South Dakota	375,000	400,000
Oklahoma	75,000	50,000
Montana	45,000	350,000
Wyoming	45,000	50,000

Tugwell in Drouth Area.

Traveling through drouth devastated regions suffering under temperatures of 100 and upward, with hot winds, Tugwell is obtaining a first hand picture of the situation.

At every stop he is besieged by scores of telephone calls for aid from many areas of the United States. He is issuing orders, consulting with local resettlement officials, holding constant conferences with state and federal officials. As for an itinerary, Tugwell has none. "I don't know where I'm going next," he said in reply to queries as to his destination.

Slayer of Policeman Starts 199 Year Term

William Neveraski, 31 years old, was taken to Joliet penitentiary yesterday to begin his sentence of 199 years imposed Thursday by a Criminal court jury for the murder of Policeman John Guiltanane in a robbery and gun battle six years ago. The principal witness against Neveraski was Policeman Anthony Wistort, who was shot in the spine when he and Guiltanane surprised Neveraski and another robber. Neveraski was accompanied by eight other men sentenced to prison during the last week.

Defrauds Hotel by Posing as Brother; Gets 4 Months

Maynard C. Froemke, 37 years old, said to be a member of a wealthy Fargo, N. D., family, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Francis Borrelli in South State street court to serve four months in the County jail on charges of obtaining $40 by false pretenses from the Drake hotel. Froemke, according to the complaint, obtained the money by representing himself as his brother, Gerald W. Froemke, vice president of a St. Louis furniture concern.

ROY ZEARFOSS.
[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

West Frankfort, Ill., July 18.—[U. P.]—A transient ex-convict named as the slayer of Roy Zearfoss, railroad detective, in Carbondale, Ill., yesterday, was shot and killed and two companions were wounded and captured by police near here today.

The dead man, identified as Carl Crisler, parolee from the southern Illinois penitentiary, was named by his companions as Zearfoss' killer.

The men in custody, taken to a hospital at Murphysboro, Ill., said they were Herman Press, 45 years old, Belleville, Ill., and Clifford Swearinger, 20, Peoria. Press was wounded in the right ankle and Swearinger's wrists were shattered. The wounded men, also ex-convicts, were charged with first degree murder.

The capture was made after the three had abandoned an automobile which they commandeered from the wife of Dr. Oscar House of De Soto, Ill., in their flight. When officers encountered them walking along the highway the fugitives were ordered to surrender. Instead the men, all armed, started to flee and the police opened fire.

Crisler was killed and Swearinger and Press ran a short distance into a nearby woods before they were captured.

BERING SEA ISLE FAMILY ENJOYS HOT SUN IN U. S.

Seattle, Wash., July 18.—(AP)—Sunshine days may mean only heat waves to some people, but they are a rare and enjoyable experience to a visiting family here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Troutman's children, Marvin, 13, and Miriam, 10, today were getting their first coats of sunburn and wearing their first bathing suits.

"It seldom gets under 35 below in the winter there," Troutman said, "but it doesn't warm up enough in the summer, either, to sit outdoors in shirt sleeves."

"Going back?" he was asked.

"Certainly," he replied. "We like it. The children may stay behind to go to school here. They're getting so they talk more Eskimo than English."

Uses Bonus to Violate Parole; Arrested Here

Peter McGill, 36 years old, who was paroled from the Michigan state prison at Jackson a month ago, was in custody at the detective bureau here yesterday, charged with violating his parole by leaving Michigan. McGill, a war veteran, told police he came to Chicago to spend $200 of his bonus money. Last Thursday police found him in an alley in the rear of 1528 Mohawk street with 6 cents in his pocket.

Gunmen Raid Commission House, Escape with $250

Two men armed with revolvers and a third man carrying a shotgun held up the offices of the Sonenblick and Shapiro commission house, 1100 Randolph street, yesterday and fled with $250. Basil Wagner, an employé, was cut on his face from flying glass when one of the robbers fired into a glass enclosed cashier's cage. The robbers held handkerchiefs to their faces.

DISCARD SUICIDE THEORY IN DEATH OF GIRL BRIDE, 14

St. Joseph, Mo., July 18.—[U. P.]—Officers investigating the fatal shooting of Mrs. Mildred Fay Wheeler, underdeveloped child wife of a 65 year old WPA worker, tonight discarded a suicide theory and considered the possibility that she was murdered.

The girl, who was 14, was found shot to death in a woodshed behind her home. A string attached to the trigger of the .22 calibre rifle and the statement of her husband, Thomas A. Wheeler, that she feared he would commit her to an institution because of alleged indiscretions with younger men, led officers at first to believe she killed herself.

When subsequent investigation disclosed the string was not strong enough to snap the gun's trigger, detectives reopened the case.

Wheeler and the girl were married three weeks ago.

Wheeler said today he married the girl because "I wanted her to keep house for me." He disclosed that he took out a $500 insurance policy on his wife.

The girl played with neighbor children and was fond of dolls, detectives learned.

SEARCH FLORIDA WATERS FOR SHIP 10 DAYS OVERDUE

Tampa, Fla., July 18.—(AP)—Coast guard craft searched in vain by air and sea today for a trace of the British motorship Nunoca, 10 days overdue here with twenty-one persons aboard from British West Indies.

Reports from Havana said the Cuban government was without word of the 110 foot combination passenger and freight boat which left Georgetown, Grand Cayman Island, on July 4, with nine Americans, four Britons, and a crew of eight.

Two coast guard planes from St. Petersburgh covered the Florida west coastal water from Tampa to Cape Sable. The patrol boat Nemesis cruised the southeastern Gulf of Mexico and the Florida straits.

Marine reports from Cape San Antonio, on the western tip of Cuba, said the motorship had not been sighted there. Cape San Antonio is on the normal route of the vessel.

BANDITS GET $587 PAY ROLL.

Royal W. Nordlund, 556 West Arlington street, a partner in the Advance Cabinet company, 1801 North Lincoln street, was robbed of a $587 pay roll yesterday by two men as he drove up to the company office in his automobile.

ASK QUARANTINE ON DOGS IN MOVE TO CURB RABIES

Du Page county health officials and physicians decided at a meeting in Wheaton yesterday to ask a state quarantine on dogs until all dogs suffering from rabies can be segregated. Investigators will be sent from Springfield tomorrow to determine if the quarantine is needed. The health authorities reported an alarming increase in the number of persons bitten by dogs in the county. Many cattle and horses have also died of rabies recently, physicians said.

POLICE BETRAYAL IN HAMM CASE TO BE PROBED

Kidnaper Tells of Tips Bought for $25,000.

St. Paul, Minn., July 18.—(AP)—District Attorney George F. Sullivan tonight disclosed he planned to call two police officers, who were members of the kidnap detail when William Hamm Jr., St. Paul brewer, was abducted in 1933, in an effort to show police secrets were betrayed to kidnapers by a law enforcement officer.

Sullivan said he would call Detective Inspector Charles Tierney and former Chief of Police Tom Dahill next week to corroborate the testimony of Byron Bolton, confessed Hamm kidnaper, that the Barker-Karpis gang was tipped off on police movements by Tom Brown, then a member of the kidnap detail. The testimony was given Friday before the week-end recess in the trial of John [Jack] Peifer, St. Paul night club proprietor, on conspiracy charges in the Hamm abduction.

Bolton testified $25,000 of the $100,000 Hamm ransom was "set aside" for Brown for keeping the kidnapers informed about police activities while Hamm was held captive.

Sullivan said Tierney and Dahill, who recently resigned from the police department, will be called soon after the defense completes cross-examination of Bolton.

Meantime Archie M. Cary, attorney for Peifer, promised "startling developments" to involve Bolton, the government's star witness. He declined to divulge nature of the anticipated developments, but said:

Plan No Prosecution.

"They will be very startling, I expect something to 'break' in the next few days."

Previously Cary had disclosed that he would attempt to connect Bolton, who made the sensational charge against Brown when on the witness stand yesterday, with the St. Valentine's day massacre of "Bugs" Moran gangsters in Chicago in 1929.

U. S. District Attorney Sullivan, in charge of Peifer's prosecution, said no federal prosecution of Brown based on Bolton's testimony was planned.

"All the testimony against Brown so far is hearsay," he admitted.

Time Limit Expires.

He said the statute of limitations in the Hamm kidnaping—three years—outlawed the federal case as of June 19, last. The St. Paul brewer was released by his abductors on June 18, 1933.

Brown, suspended by police department officials last night, continued to refuse any comment on Bolton's testimony.

According to Bolton's testimony, the Barker-Karpis gang of kidnapers at the ransom splitup "counted out" $10,000 for Peifer, a Twin City night club operator; Bolton, then "contact man"; $7,800 for each of the actual kidnapers, lesser sums for minor figures in the case, in addition to the $25,000 for Brown.

GOV. F. B. OLSON ASSERTS HE'LL BE WELL SOON

Rochester, Minn., July 18.—[Special.]—Gov. Floyd B. Olson continued to rest comfortably today in St. Mary's hospital, where he underwent an abdominal operation Thursday.

In a message which he sent to the Farmer-Labor party executive meeting in St. Paul, the governor pledged that he will be "physically well in ample time" and will be in the thick of the fall campaign in which he will seek election to the United States senate.

He told his party followers to "heed not the voice of gossip nor let imagination bring fear."

This statement was apparently to offset the widespread reports that his illness was of a very serious nature.

The governor was suffering from stomach polyps described as of "benign" nature.

BOY LOSES LIFE IN HOMEMADE DIVING HELMET

Santa Monica, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—A boy's attempt to explore the bottom of the yacht harbor here with a home made diver's outfit was ended in death today.

With a gasoline can for a helmet and a garden hose fastened to a bicycle pump, 16 year old Robert Fety and two young companions had been making dives for two years. Two hundred feet off shore yesterday Harry Wollin, 15 years old, and Hunt Albert Jr., 16, felt a feeble signal to hoist. They had patched a leak in the hose with tape.

Groggy when he reached the surface, Fety relaxed his hold on the anchor rope and sank. Lifeguards sought the body today.

Close "Nut House" Until Slaying Suspect Is Found

The Nut House, a tavern at 550 North Clark street, has been closed under instructions from the police, and will stay closed until Mrs. Carmella Freed, accused slayer of Audrye Vallette, blonde party girl, surrenders, it was learned last night. Mrs. Freed is the wife of Edward Freed, night manager of the Nut House, who was released from custody when he promised to help find his missing wife. Mrs. Freed has been in hiding since July 2, when Miss Vallette was shot to death in her apartment at 1211 North La Salle street. A warant charging her with murder was obtained by the police Friday.

ROB WOMAN OF BONUS BONDS.

Mrs. Mamie Morie, 44 years old, colored, owner of a rooming house at 224 East 55th street, was beaten and robbed yesterday of $300 worth of bonus bonds belonging to a roomer.

PARADE SHOWING RAIL PROGRESS ENDS FESTIVAL

20,000 Employes Take Part in March.

Sun bronzed engineers, yardmen and trainmen marched with girl stenographers and other railway office employés on Michigan avenue yesterday afternoon in a parade marking the close of the second annual Railroad week and demonstrating the man and woman power behind the modern network of high speed trains.

Twenty thousand employés of the large western railroads carried American flags and many of them were in costume symbolizing the streamliners of their companies. The procession started from Wacker drive and Michigan avenue at 3 p. m. and the last marchers dispersed at Eighth street an hour and a half later. Marching on the west side of Michigan avenue from which southbound trafic was barred, the procession did not interrupt northbound trafic on the east side of the street.

Floats Are Streamlined.

Gala streamlined floats represented the Hiawatha of the Milwaukee road, the Green Diamond of the Illinois Central, the Abraham Lincoln of the Chicago and Alton, the 400 of the Chicago and Northwestern and other modern trains which travel westward from Chicago.

Seven beauty queens representing as many railroads headed the procession on an orange and white streamlined float escorted by the Lancers. There were more than a score of bands and drum and bugle corps of the American Legion and high schools.

More than 1,000 women workers of the Milwaukee wore representations of Indian costumes in tribute to their Hiawatha. Women of the Illinois Central wore capes and hats representing the Green Diamond and the feminine forces of the Chicago and North Western wore the blue and silver of the 400.

Railroad Songs Are Sung.

The Santa Fe Chief rolled along in miniature with western figures on horseback as its escort and a feminine unit of Spanish costume. "Casey Jones" and "I've Been Working on the Railroad" were sung by the marchers. Several miniature locomotives, pioneer and modern, were in the parade. Sun burned girls in sports costumes advertised the vacationlands of the western roads.

H. G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives; railway officials and American Legion and city representatives sat in the reviewing stand at Congress street.

WARPROOF PLANT FOR MAKING GASOLINE OF COAL AIM OF BALDWIN

CARDIFF, Wales, July 18.—(AP)—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, speaking before 5,000 persons here today, envisaged a chain of great plants for making gasoline from coal safe from attack. He cited the $27,000,000 plant of Imperial Chemical industries at Billingham-on-Tees, which produces 123,000 gallons of gasoline daily from coal.

Contrasting the position of the British people now and five years ago, the prime minister said: "Taking the United Kingdom as a whole, and compared with any other country in the world, such as Russia or even the United States, life is better for all sections of the community here."

Sailboat Capsizes; Two Couples Saved from Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harrison, 2403 East 72d street, and Mr. and Mrs. George Bickford, 7100 South Shore drive, were rescued last night by swimmers and coast guardsmen after Harrison's sailboat capsized in the choppy waters of the lake, a quarter of a mile off 30th street.

RADIO VIOLINIST QUIZZED IN HOTEL SLAYING OF GIRL

Asheville Police Check Musician's Alibi.

Asheville, N. C., July 19.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—Mark Wollner, 35 year old classic German violinist, was held today for questioning in the death of pretty Helen Clevenger, New York honor student.

Wollner, who has played difficult transcriptions of Bach, Franck, and Mozart on three continents, was arrested last night shortly after officers announced a "prominent white man" was sought.

The German musician immediately produced an alibi in the person of 19 year old Mildred Ward, daughter of his landlady, who said he was at home from 9 p. m. Wednesday until 8 a. m. Thursday, when Miss Clevenger's body, ravished, shot and stabbed, was found in her room.

Found at Home of Friend.

Wollner was taken into custody by two deputies at the home of a friend, a piano salesman, at 9:30 p. m.

Sherif Laurence E. Brown quoted Wollner as saying he was with a young woman friend at 1 a. m. Thursday—the hour officers fixed as the time of the mysterious murder.

Wollner, a native of Germany, where his parents still reside, was held simply "for questioning"—a classification under which police said they could detain him for 48 hours.

The sherif said he had been informed by a witness, whose name he did not reveal, that Wollner had remarked about 10 p. m. Wednesday:

It was at that hotel that Miss Clevenger, pretty 18 year old blonde, was found shot to death and her face stabbed with some sharp instrument.

Wollner came to Asheville more than a year ago, and maintains a studio here. He speaks English with a barely distinguishable accent.

Gives Concerts in Florida.

Previously Wollner, who studied music at Berlin and Paris, lived in New York and Washington. He gave a series of concerts in Florida last winter.

A few years ago, after his American debut at the Town Hall in New York, Wollner made a number of appearances in South American cities. While here he has played on a number of national radio hookups.

Estranged from Wife.

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—Mark Wollner, being questioned by Asheville, N. C., police in connection with the murder of Helen Clevenger, is the estranged husband of Mary Bowen Wollner, 29, a language teacher at the National Cathedral School for Girls here.

They were married here in 1928, and have a daughter 4 years old. They separated more than two years ago, after which the wife took up her teaching career.

"This is terrible news," she said, "even though I can't believe he is involved. Any mention of a musician's name in such a case is damaging."

Mrs. Wollner said her husband had won renown as a concert soloist in Paris, Berlin, and other European cities, and had once played at a concert at the German embassy.

DROPS DEAD OF HEART DISEASE.

John T. Smith, 40 years old, 4226 Augusta boulevard, died apparently of a heart attack last night in the John T. Riddell shoe manufacturing plant, 1250 North Wood street, where he was employed as a night watchman.

Tells of Murder

NAVAL RESERVES SAIL TODAY FOR LAKE WAR GAMES

200 Chicagoans Board U. S. S. Wilmette.

Some 200 members of the naval reserve yesterday slung their hammocks on the U. S. S. Wilmette, gunboat and flagship of the Great Lakes fleet, preparatory to sailing at 8 p. m. today for a two weeks' cruise of Lake Michigan.

Five gunboats and four submarine chasers, carrying 750 men and 20 officers, all under the command of Capt. Edward A. Evers, will make the cruise, the second of a series of four planned for this summer. A third cruise will begin on Aug. 2, and the final one on Aug. 16.

The Wilmette will join four other gunboats, the U. S. S. Hawk of Michigan City, the Dubuque of Detroit, the Paducah of Duluth and the Wilmington of Cleveland, at South Manitou Island in northern Lake Michigan late tomorrow.

Ten Days of Maneuvers.

Here the assembled fleet will enter upon ten days of battle maneuvers. Given a battle problem to solve, they will tackle it with all the technical knowledge at their command. There will be searchlight and blinker [signaling] drills and others. Aiding them this year will be much new equipment, including a gyro-compass on each ship and fire control apparatus. The latter enables an officer to control gunfire from the bridge, while the ex-caliber attachments, rifles which fit on the top of the ship's regular firing guns, save the expense of shooting regular ammunition in target practice.

Capt. Evers, however, is not satisfied wit hthe fleet despite the new equipment. Some of the ships, he says, were built as early as 1900, while the "youngest" was built in 1907. Six new gunboats, capable of carrying 200 men apiece, are necessary if the annual training period is to prove effectual, he added.

The 9th naval district is made up of Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana, Nebraska, Missouri, and Kansas. Illinois has 1,200 men and 75 officers. The annual 15 day training period is provided by law.

Business Partners Help Each Other to Divorces

Mrs. Grace Phillips, 1400 Lake Shore drive, an interior decorator, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Rudolph Desort in Superior court from Sigmund Phillips. She charged cruelty. A witness for Mrs. Phillips was her partner in the business, Mrs. Dorothy R. Laudermilk, 5005 Drexel boulevard, who obtained a divorce on June 25 from Bert Laudermilk, former real estate dealer. At that hearing Mrs. Phillips appeared as a witness for Mrs. Laudermilk.

NINE DIE WHEN AUTO IS HIT AND HURLED TO RIVER

Members of Two Families Visiting in Michigan.

Dundee, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—Nine members of two families were killed and their bodies hurled 30 feet into a river today when their automobile was struck at a grade crossing here by an Ann Arbor passenger train.

After smashing into the automobile the locomotive dragged the bodies and wreckage 75 feet to a high trestle and hurled the victims into the shallow water of the Raisin river.

Wreckage of the automobile burst into flames and ignited ties of the bridge. The fire added to the general scene of destruction and tragedy but was extinguished quickly.

Parents, Children Die.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schuster, both 45, and their daughters, Vina, 19; Anna, 12, and Sandra Jean, 6 months old; Mrs. Schuster's sister, Mrs. Sam Pisano, 48; her husband, 50, and their daughters, Betty, 9, and Mary, 6.

The two families, both from Pennsylvania, had been visiting with Schuster's brother Carl. The Schusters lived in Farrell, Pa., and the Pisanos in Wheatland, Pa.

It was believed Schuster, who was driving, either became confused as he drove onto the crossing, which was guarded by lights, or that his view was obscured by adjacent buildings. The highway rises sharply as it reaches the railroad crossing.

Find Signal Lights O. K.

The northbound train was going about 45 miles an hour when it smashed into the car. The train operates between Toledo and Frankfort. It traveled about half a mile before it could be brought to a halt. Then it was backed up and crew members tested the signal light and reported it functioning properly.

Although the river was shallow at the point where the bodies were hurled in the water, officers were obliged to use rowboats to retrieve them. They had to row about 300 feet upstream to find a place where the bodies could be transferred to ambulances. The bodies were taken to Monroe.

'ASK $25,000,000 ON 'KNEE ACTION' PATENT CHARGE

Four of the leading automobile companies of the country and their subsidiaries were named in a 25 million dollar damage suit filed in the federal court here yesterday on charges of patent infringement. The plaintiffs' names are given as Joseph E. Wood and Walter A. Scott, but they were not identified as to residence.

According to the bill Wood is the inventor and patentee and Scott is assignee of one-half of Wood's interest in patents for a "vehicle spring construction known as a knee action" device which is being used on the automobiles manufactured by the defendants. The suit, which seeks an accounting of profits derived from use of the device, asks an injunction restraining the defendants from using it.

The defendants are the General Motors corporation and its subsidiaries, including the Buick, Chevrolet, and Pontiac companies; the Studebaker corporation, the Chrysler corporation, and the Packard Motor Car Manufacturing company.

At Detroit yesterday officials of General Motors and the Packard company declared they had never heard of Scott or Wood and added that they believe their "knee action" patent to be in order.

University Senior Dies After Writing Obituary

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 18.—(AP)—Samuel M. Davis, 25, a senior at West Virginia university, spent the first part of this week writing his own obituary. The manuscript was complete except for the date of his death. His widow, Mrs. Violet Stewart Davis, filled in the blank today, after Davis succumbed from a long illness that had necessitated numerous operations.

Snake Eats 2 Birds; Makes Itself at Home in Cage

Bobo, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—When Mr. and Mrs. George Hughes went to bed last night they left their two pet birds in a cage near a window. Some time in the night a snake about four feet long got into the house, climbed into the cage, and when found this morning was peacefully coiled in the bottom of the cage. It had devoured the birds.

Death Visits Indiana Home for Second Time in a Week

Rochester, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Death today paid its second visit within a week to the home of Mrs. William Burn. Her son, George A. Gordon, 18, died after a four day illness. Mrs. Burn's husband, former president of the Sturgis and Burn company, Chicago dairy machinery equipment manufacturers, died Tuesday.

Judson Spore, Official of Crayon Concern, Drowns

Sandusky, O., July 18.—[U. P.]—Judson Spore, 35, American Crayon company executive, drowned tonight in Sandusky bay between Big Island and Kafralus Island. Spore dived from the end of a small boat and did not come up. He is survived by his widow and two children.

BABY AND AUTO DRIVER KILLED IN HARLEM AV. CRASH

Three Others Injured in Collision.

A man and a baby were killed and three other persons seriously hurt yesterday in the collision of two automobiles at Southwest highway and Harlem avenue, near Chicago Ridge.

Walter Shillinglaw, 27 years old, 5603 South Sacramento avenue, who was driving alone in one of the cars, was killed instantly. The baby, Mary Catherine Thweatt, 8 months old, 4329 West Madison street, died en route to the Little Company of Mary hospital.

Parents Seriously Injured.

The parents of the child, Haynes Thweatt, 26 years old, and his wife, Jennie, 21 years old, and Roland Thweatt, 18 years old, were taken to the hospital in serious condition.

Both cars were overturned and Shillinglaw was pinned under the wreckage of his machine. The Thweatts were thrown out of their car onto the pavement. There were no witnesses to the accident and police were unable to question the injured persons just after the crash to learn how it occurred.

Mrs. Clausine Christenson, 52 years old, 6135 Glenwood avenue, was fatally injured yesterday when her automobile collided with a delivery truck at Touhy and Cicero avenues in Lincolnwood [Tessville]. She died while being taken to the St. Francis hospital in Evanston.

Trafic Violation Blamed.

Carl Carlson, 29 years old, of Wheeling, a farm hand, driver of the truck, told police Mrs. Christenson drove past a stop sign for Touhy avenue.

Mrs. Christenson was the wife of Oscar Christenson, office manager for the J. S. Hoffman Co., 322 West Illinois street, cheese and sausage manufacturers. She was alone in the car.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday, 526 persons were killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 408 were killed in Chicago. In the same period 9,426 were injured within the city limits.

2 WPA WORKERS KILLED, 5 HURT IN TRUCK CRASH

Crawfordsville, Ind., July 18.—[Special.]—Two Crawfordsville WPA workers were killed and five others injured, one seriously, in collision of two trucks south of here on State Road 43 today. Those killed were Orville Newlin, 23, and Warren McIntyre, 48.

Earl D. Watson, 40, of Lebanon, driver of a large beer truck, was arrested. Police said Watson's machine crashed into the light truck carrying the WPA workers.

France Reorganizes Rule of No. American Colony

ST. PIERRE, Miquelon, July 18.—(AP)—The French government in a decree published here today reorganized the governmental set-up of the Miquelon group of islands and abolished townships in France's only remaining colony in North America. An administrator, assisted by a council on which members elected by popular vote will have a majority, will govern Miquelon, St. Pierre and Mariner's Islands.

POET'S KINDRED FLIES TO RECORD AND NEEDED JOB

New York, July 18.—(AP)—20 year old Peter Dana, a great-grandson of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Richard Henry Dana, who wrote "Two Years before the Mast," tonight found that 22 hours behind the stick of his airplane had flown him into a needed job and an unofficial transcontinental junior air speed record.

The youthful aviation enthusiast set his light low-winged monoplane down at Long Beach airport on Long Island at 3:37 p. m. today to complete his flight from San Diego, Calif., in 22 hours, 5 minutes flying time.

Although believing he had established a record, young Dana tonight was happier over the acquisition of a job, which he said he "had needed like the dickens."

"In California last Wednesday," he said, "I received word that if I were in the east by Sunday, I could get this job flying a seaplane around some New Hampshire lakes. You see I have had to finance all my flying myself, and it was pretty tough so I just had to get here, but I didn't know how or on what.

"So I fixed up my little ship and took off. I had to make 11 stops in all before I got to New York."

PAL OF DEATH, DR. MUNROE, 87, EXPLAINS CAREER

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Fear of the instant death lurking in the test tubes with which he worked was credited today by Dr. Charles Edward Munroe with seeing him through more than a half century developing high explosives.

Dr. Munroe, now 87, is one of the 183 men who 60 years ago organized the American Chemical society, now the largest professional organization of its kind in the world. "I respected the materials I worked with," Dr. Munroe explained. He invented indurite, the first smokeless powder used by the United States navy for large guns. He was graduated at 32 from Harvard university in 1871. He introduced the study of chemical technology at Harvard and later he taught chemistry at the United States Naval academy. He has been consulting expert on explosives to ten governments, receiving awards from them as well as membership in numerous foreign scientific societies.

English Boston Host to 20 Boston, Mass., Pilgrims

BOSTON, Lincolnshire, England, July 18.—(AP)—The bells of the parish church pealed today in honor of the sixth annual pilgrimage here of residents of Boston, Mass. Among the 20 Americans who are guests for the week-end are Mayor Frederick Mansfield of Boston; Dr. John Bartol, representing Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts, and the Very Rev. Philemon Sturges, dean of St. Paul's cathedral at Boston, Mass.

"WHERE THE WISE ECONOMIZE"

A New Idea in Slips Has Caught On in a Big Way, and They're Exclusive With Field's Basement in Chicago

24,000 Lovely Crepe Allure "Inside Out" Slips

The First Time We Have Ever Sold These Slips at So Low a Price

90c

As an Added Feature: You May Have Your Slip Stamped (Not embroidered) Indelibly with a 1, 2 or 3 Initial Monogram. No Extra Charge.

One Bodice Top Lace Model

Adjustable Shoulder Straps

Never too long, never too short . . . even though some of your dresses may vary in length. The adjustable shoulder straps allow several inches leeway. Straps are securely fastened.

Every Slip Reinforced at Top

Giving added support, assuring longer wear . . . A feature that makes the "Inside Out" Slip so desirable from the standpoint of beautiful workmanship. Note the careful fitting.

Cut Three Inches Wider in Hips

What a blessing this is! The extra three inches give you greater freedom and remove the possibilities of ripping seams. Do not add bulk due to the fitting of the bias cut.

No Rough Edges, Wear Inside Out

An exclusive method of finishing the seams makes "Inside Out" Slips look the same on the inside as they do on the outside. There are no rough edges, no unattractive visible stitching.

Shadow-Proof; Need No Paneling

Due to the unusually close, smooth weave of this beautiful crepe Allure paneling is unnecessary. There is no added weight to the fabric, however . . . so it is still as cool as lightweight silks—and it launders beautifully.

True Bias Cut . . . Will Not Twist

"Inside Out" Slips fit the body lightly, but smoothly. The true bias cut prevents twisting and pulling. The fabric "gives" with the movements of the figure, always feels comfortable.

Made With Non-Curl Hemline

Many bias cut slips will roll up at the hemline. Not so the "Inside Out" Slip. Extra stitching keeps it firmly straight, unsagging.

Fit All Figures, Made in 3 Lengths

Sizes 32 to 36 are 47 inches long; 38 to 40 . . . 48 inches long; 42 to 44 . . . 49 inches long. Half sizes for short figures, 31½, 35½, 37½, 39½, 41½, 43½. All Tearose and White.

THE TRUE NATURE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Republican and Democratic party differences are in two classifications, as will appear more clearly with the progress of the campaign. In one are the differences of an ordinary contest between the two major parties in normal times. Usually they prove that the American people have a great deal more in common belief than they have in controversy. They might not last long in a republican form of government if they didn't have.

If Gov. Landon were running against Carter Glass or Senator Byrd of Virginia, or even against Joe Robinson or Jack Garner, if they were their own men and had not sold out, the campaign would present little that was not familiar to American voters. The questions would relate to monetary policy, relief, agriculture, debts, the public service, industrial relations, etc. The Democrats would be blamed for their mistakes, and the campaigners, as customary, would endeavor to convince the people that the party distinctions were vital, but every one would know that whatever the decision was the country could take it.

When it was Harrison vs. Cleveland there were fine partisan furies but no one expected to lose his shirt except on an election bet. Even Mr. Bryan in three tries promised only some follies, as then regarded. [What did we know of follies?] T. R. vs. Alton B. Parker involved nothing threatening. Wilson vs. Hughes seemed to carry a war into question. Harding vs. Cox, Coolidge vs. Davis, Hoover vs. Smith engaged some issues of internationalism and, with Smith, prohibition and religion, but no one feared that the country would not be recognizable after the inauguration.

Gov. Landon is not in a campaign such as these older ones. Very few knew what was up four years ago, but there is no excuse for not seeing it now. The real differences between the parties are in the second classification. Here the two candidates have nothing in common. They couldn't have. One believes in a government which the other wants to discard. Old line Democrats know this. Maybe they think they can stop it even if what passes as their party wins. They have little to show for themselves in the fourth year of it.

Gov. Landon is running against Franklin Roosevelt, Rexford Tugwell, Henry Wallace, George Norris, and social planners who apparently can't make a great many otherwise sensible Americans understand what they mean when they say that this country has been organized for the benefit of the privileged few and that they intend to take it apart and put up something else. They make speeches, they write books, they draft bills, they pass laws and they lay their cards on the table and still a great many people will not believe that they mean what they say.

Mr. Roosevelt talks about a rendezvous with destiny, the economic royalists, the privileged princes of economic dynasties, a small group with complete control over all other people's lives, hiding behind the flag and the constitution. An even more reasonable opinion of the American social and political system prevailed in Earl Browder's convention of the communist party in New York.

If Mr. Roosevelt seems to lose himself in enraptured generalizations and high admiration of his own revolution, you can understand what he means by referring to the acts and words of the men who run his government. Mr. Wallace has just put out a new campaign textbook, "Whose Constitution?" He says what has been said before and often by other Rooseveltians that means must be found to produce for need and not for profit and that people must be fitted in where they can contribute most to the general welfare and not be forced to make their own decisions which, although for their own temporary advantage, are not consistent with the general good.

That is what Mr. Roosevelt means. His rendezvous with destiny is also with Stalin. There isn't a hair line difference between the planned society of Roosevelt's trusted experts who guide his experiments and the society as planned by the soviets. His language is as violent as theirs and his objectives the same.

The New Dealers are not members of a secret society with concealed purposes. They do not keep their ideas to themselves and the public in the dark. They publish their intentions and they put them in laws. If the various texts are read everything becomes plain. The publicists are not speculative theorists but active administrators of the government going about the business they discuss.

Gov. Landon is in a campaign the like of which America never saw before. Any one who thinks it is incredible is only fooling himself.

GAS WARFARE.

If exaggerating the terrors of modern war, of which there has been far more since the great conflict of 1914-'18 than ever before in history, had moderated the belligerency of mankind it might well be condoned or even encouraged. It has not seemed to have that effect, partly perhaps because the individuals immediately responsible for war planning are not going to be on the battlefield. Whatever the value may be of advertising the horrors of war as a deterrent of war, the truth is more formidable and more useful in the long run than any exaggeration and it is our right to have it. The propaganda of exaggeration reacts against itself.

Among its favorite alarms is poison gas, which it advertises as an easy and inevitable means of destroying whole cities. Modern science is supposed to have discovered or invented chemicals or combinations capable of wiping out whole populations. The denials of scientists and military experts are given little attention. But the breeding of unjustified fears is not a contribution to peace, for fear is one of the chief factors in the precipitation of war, besides including a perhaps unnecessary expenditure upon armament. A panic psychology is the most dangerous factor in international relations.

An article on poison gas by Edward McDowell Jr. in Current History for July is commended, therefore, to the lay reader. Mr. McDowell begins by remarking that pacificist propagandism has spread much unreasonable fear and morbid misinformation. "People who never heard of Tamerlane or Genghis Khan and know only vaguely of the horrors of the American civil war think warfare is becoming progressively sterner and that the next large conflict will mean the end of the world. But as a matter of sober historic fact, warfare has grown steadily less destructive and less terrible, and it promises to continue that trend in the future." As for poison gas and the rumors of secret formulae which will transform warfare, the truth is, says Mr. McDowell, that the perfect or six-drops-will-destroy-a-city gas does not exist. Laboratory performance and operation under the controled conditions of warfare are very different things. Dr. Howe, editor of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, has said: "I think it is fair to say that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, research since the war has failed to disclose any gases for field use that are any more advantageous than those known and used during the world war."

The horror monger is not troubled with practical difficulties. His imagination is free, but, as Mr. McDowell says, "it must be remembered that the main problem in using a war gas is to get the poison to the people it is intended to affect. The laws of chemistry and physics, the whims of weather, and the protective and defensive activities of an enlightened general staf, all combine to make a large scale gassing operation on civilians an expensive gamble."

We have not space for a discussion of the difficulties in the use of gas which Mr. McDowell summarizes, but they do not encourage hysteria. It is not denied that gas warfare must be accepted as a new resource of military science. It will be used and developed. No government could afford to ignore its study and preparation, but it serves no good purpose to exaggerate its practicable possibilities.

ARE THE BRITISH AT THE DOOR?

American passengers on British ships have been interested of late when they were given pamphlets issued from the purser's office to be distributed by the stewards. The pamphlet is decorated with the picture of a strange flag, in part the Union Jack and the American stripes, with a queer, circular attachment bearing the letters BE U S A ONE. The text suggests the desirability of a reunion correcting the mistakes of 1776.

Apparently no one has been able to find out who is responsible for the publication and distribution. The British ships are part of the naval force and their officers are in the naval reserve. They are government ships when needed. It does not follow that Mr. Eden, the foreign minister, designed the flag or that Mr. Baldwin wrote the text. Nevertheless it's queer business.

The usual way of joining the American Union is to serve a probation period as a territory and then prepare a republican constitution for submission to congress. If it contains nothing repugnant to the American principles of government and the federal constitution a new state may be admitted. If a territory tries to get fresh with its ideas it may have some trouble, or so it used to be.

England, Scotland, Wales might try their hand at such a constitution. Even if they did not get in the practice would do no harm. They should reflect that titles of nobility would be dropped. The ninth earl of Blessingham might not like it. However, it is a British suggestion, not an American, and if successful the understanding should be that the flag gets no such remaking as pictured. When a new state comes in another star is added. That will be the only change.

A FISH YARN.

Old Dr. Brown, the physician in a little town, was an enthusiastic fisherman. He was summoned from one of his angling expeditions to give his services in a maternity case.

The proud father wanted to weigh the baby, but had no scales in the house. So he borrowed the steelyard with which Dr. Brown weighed his fish.

LIBERTIES OF AN AMERICAN

XVI.

"Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." [The eighth amendment to the constitution of the United States.]

It is not by accident that, while the courts of the United States receive numerous appeals to the guarantees of the eighth amendment, none of the abuses alleged are of the flagrant type easily brought to mind by its language. That is to say, the courts have never been required to save a man from being burned at the stake, or flogged to death, or subjected to the rack or the thumbscrew.

This is not wholly explained by the advance of civilization and the resulting abhorrence of torture. Torture, principally for the purpose of obtaining evidence, was not abandoned in a number of European countries for nearly half a century after the amendment was incorporated in our constitution. England kept its barbarous method of execution for treason on the statute books into the nineteenth century. The soviets today carry on the same cruel punishment of exile which was a weapon of the czars.

Such punishments are unthinkable in the United States, but they are unthinkable not solely because of social sentiment against them but because they have been outlawed for nearly a century and a half by the constitution, and because their worst manifestations were restrained for more than five centuries before that by the English common law, to which our courts still turn in interpreting the limitations of the eighth amendment.

Of the abuses prevented by the amendment, excessive bail probably persisted the longest. The great act defining and strengthening the right of habeas corpus was passed under Charles II. in England. The judges appointed by his tyrannical brother, James II., made use of excessive bail as a final subterfuge to deny the liberties guaranteed by the act. The English bill of rights, passed by parliament after James had been driven from the throne, included the identical language later used by the eighth amendment.

Bail is the compromise by which we remedy an otherwise irreconcilable conflict between fundamental principle and practical necessity in our system of criminal justice. The whole system is based on the principle that a man is innocent until proved guilty. The practical necessity is that he must be arrested before he can be brought to trial, and usually must be kept in custody for a time before trial, while he is still under the law presumed to be an innocent man.

By granting bail we restored to the accused his personal liberty if he is able to post a forfeit, the loss of which will presumably be greater than the penalty for the crime of which he is accused. Bail has only one purpose, which is to guarantee the appearance of the accused for trial. Its amount must accordingly be governed by the circumstances of each case. Cases in which the penalty is death or life imprisonment obviously become nonbailable in most instances, since no forfeiture of property could deter the accused from flight if he believed his conviction certain.

Our courts, in passing upon the question of excessive bail, have followed the principle that the amount of bail is to be governed not only by the gravity of the offense charged but by the means of the prisoner. Bail which would not be excessive for a wealthy man might be held to be so if the defendant was poor.

Whether a fine is excessive or a punishment cruel or unusual must be determined in accord with the rule that the punishment should fit the crime. Death in almost any form may be regarded as cruel, but the eighth amendment obviously is not intended to prohibit infliction of the death penalty in appropriate cases. It does, however, prohibit any method of execution which is needlessly painful, and probably would be a bar to infliction of death as a penalty for less serious crimes such as theft, even though the common law once punished such a crime with death. While whipping has not been prohibited in all cases, revival of such colonial punishments as the pillory, stocks, and ducking stool probably would be barred, if not because they are cruel, because they are unusual, inasmuch as they have been so long abandoned.

Excessive fines were prohibited by English law as early as the Great Charter of 1215, which provided that for small offenses the fine should be proportioned to the offense, and that for great offenses no fine should deprive a merchant of his stock in trade, a freeman of his homestead, or a peasant of his agricultural tools.

American courts have sometimes said that fines and punishments do not violate the amendment if they are expressly authorized by statute. That this principle would not always rule may be surmised from the fact that the courts also have said that a given procedure is not due process of law merely because a legislature provides that it shall be.

Thus, although the courts have held cumulative fines and punishments valid in other cases, it is probable that the NRA and AAA violated the eighth amendment as well as other portions of the constitution. They used the device of calling each day's violation a separate offense, and authorized the imposition of fines as high as $1,000 a day for violations not alone of the acts of congress but of regulations made under the color of the acts. These savage and unconstitutional penalties threatened tradesmen with larger fines than they could have earned in the span of their lifetimes, not alone for violation of a statute but as well for the violation of regulations made by private trade associations.

Further discussions of the liberties guaranteed Americans by the constitution will appear in these columns from time to time.

Editorial of the Day

WELCOME, LITTLE STRANGER.

[Baltimore Sun.]

Yesterday Mrs. Dionne of Callander, Ontario, became the mother of a little boy [one], and he made the front pages of the newspapers. He will probably do it again once in a while, not for anything he does on his own account but because he is the little brother of Cecile, Yvonne, Marie, Emily, and Annette, the quintuplets. He made the front page yesterday because millions of people would sigh, "Is that all?" when reading the story of his arrival. When he does it again it will be because his father sneaks him into the quintuplets' special nursery against the rules, or because his mother says that he is easier to take care of than five little girls simultaneously. Otherwise he will be noticed just about as often as the five Dionnes who preceded the illustrious quints.

Many little boys find one older sister pretty exacting, but Jean Sebastian Dionne, or whatever they call him, has five older sisters. Worse, he has five older sisters who are constantly being photographed and recorded by movie machines and sound instruments. He has five older sisters whose images are sold in sets in the best toy shops—the quintuplets on merry-go-rounds, the quintuplets in motor cars, the quintuplets on Ferris wheels, the quintuplets in doll houses. Millions of little girls know them all by name and are saving up for a full set. This little boy is the younger brother to a vested interest, but he was born in the old farmhouse with none of the scientific attention which is bestowed on his sisters. The odds, after all, were against Mrs. Dionne repeating.

Well, it is our hope that the youngest, up to now, Dionne will go far and become prime minister of Canada, but the chances are he will have all he can do to stave off an inferiority complex. Five older sisters, and all in the pictures! The prospects for this young scion of the Dionnes seem circumscribed.

HEALTH WITH CONDITIONED AIR.

OLD time documents mention that the Romans brought snow from the mountains to cool the rooms of fever stricken victims. This was probably the first effort to contend against excessively hot weather in the treatment of disease. I well remember that when a playmate—a neighbor lad—was ill with typhoid his father had the spray nozzle of the garden hose placed outside his window so that the breeze filtering through the mist supplied cool air to the room. It was a homely but reasonably effective attempt at air conditioning.

Many of us are aware of the many quick adjustments that the body is called upon to make in the presence of extreme heat or cold or whenever the temperature changes suddenly. We endeavor to compensate for these by removing or adding clothing or modifying its character. Cold baths, cool drinks, fans, and many other devices are adopted to battle excessive heat.

The recent introduction of an engineering achievement which supplies air tempered to the optimum needs of the body is now accepted as a matter of course. It is thus possible to set up indoors an ideal working environment that can operate throughout the year regardless of latitude. Not only is the temperature controled but humidity as well—which is even more important as far as the normal functioning of the body is concerned.

Nature has provided a mechanism that regulates the heat of our bodies. Whenever we are active at a temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit or above the capillaries in the skin dilate and the sweat glands are stimulated. The system thus rids itself of a considerable amount of water which, evaporating on the surface of the body, exerts a cooling effect. Should the humidity be high evaporation takes place slowly or not at all, with the result that more heat is retained than can be borne with comfort. But with the air at 70 degrees Fahrenheit and a relative humidity of 50 the circulation is relieved and the lungs and other organs are spared an overload. This is the case with "conditioned" air.

Few of us realize that millions of dust particles—soot, pollen, bits of plant fiber, dirt of all sorts—are suspended in each breath we take. Many of these floating bits will settle out, although it has been shown that some dust is so fine that it will remain in suspension in the air for years. In fact, it is only the heavier fragments that respond to the call of gravity and cover all articles of furniture. Allow a smoothly polished table to remain undusted for a week in the cleanest house and then observe in its dust coat the material that is constantly taken into the lungs.

As we know, many cases of asthma are due not so much to grass, tree, or other forms of plant pollens, as to household dust to which the individual has acquired a sensitivity. In fact, dust free rooms are among the best means we have of combating hay fever. I have in mind the case of a young man, a victim of ragweed fever, who is relieved after two or three hours spent in an air conditioned theater or whenever he takes a trip in an air conditioned Pullman.

Much of the research on the common cold has been futile, but one fact has been brought out with recurring regularity, namely, that this infection is rarely transmitted from one person to another under controled air conditions in a temperature of 70 to 71 degrees Fahrenheit and a 55 per cent relative humidity. As a rule, the nasal passages work overtime in trying to modify both the temperature and the moisture of the air that is breathed. The mucous membrane surfaces supply water to dry air, they warm cool air and attempt to cool warm air, but there is a limit to this performance. The nose can compensate only within a relatively narrow range, although it succeeds best in warming cold air.

One caution should be observed, namely: that the variation in temperature between the outside air and that of a controled room should not exceed 15 to 18 degrees. A difference of, say, 25 degrees may cause a sudden contraction of skin capillaries, closure of sweat pores, and result in a mild internal congestion. The patient may even feel a sense of chill. If the outside temperature is 95 degrees Fahrenheit, entering a "conditioned" room at 80 degrees will not only be comfortable but without danger.

PAIN IN ABDOMEN.

Max writes: I suffer attacks of pain in different parts of the abdomen. My case was diagnosed as gastric neurosis, vagotonia, and arteriosclerosis. Will you explain the meaning of these terms and tell me how to alleviate the pain? I am 40 years old.

REPLY.

Gastric neurosis means any nervous condition of the stomach. Vagotonia means irritability of the vagus nerve, the tenth nerve, which supplies the heart and the stomach. It is often marked by excessive contractions resulting in quick emptying of the stomach.

Arteriosclerosis is often referred to as hardening of the arteries. The walls thicken and hence less blood can pass through. As a result, the blood pressure often rises.

Eat four or five small meals a day instead of three average meals. Rest as much as possible. Lying down for a half hour after each meal is advised. Do not use excess quantities of fluid.

POISON IVY.

L. C. writes: How is poison ivy treated?

REPLY.

We have a leaflet on the treatment of poison ivy that you can get by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope.

DAY BY DAY IN THE MAKING OF THE CONSTITUTION

BY JAMES MADISON.
[Father of the Constitution and Fourth President of the United States.]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 19, 1787.—In convention. On reconsideration of the vote rendering the executive reëligible a second time Mr. Martin of Maryland moved to reinstate the words, "to be ineligible a second time." Mr. Gouverneur Morris of Pennsylvania: It is necessary to take into one view all that relates to the establishment of the executive, on the due formation of which depend the efficacy and utility of the Union among the present and future states. It has been a maxim in political science that republican government is not adapted to a large extent of country because the energy of the executive cannot reach the extreme parts of it. Our country is an extensive one. We must either then renounce the blessings of the Union or provide an executive with sufficient vigor to pervade every part of it. It is necessary that the executive magistrate should be the guardian of the people, even of the lower classes, against legislative tyranny, against the great and the wealthy who in the course of things necessarily will compose the legislative body. Wealth tends to corrupt the mind and to nourish its love of power. History proves this to be the spirit of the opulent. The executive therefore ought to be so constituted as to be the great protector of the mass of the people. He finds that the executive is not to be reëligible. What effect will this have? It will destroy the great incitement to merit public esteem by taking away the hope of being rewarded with a reappointment. It may give a dangerous turn to one of the strongest passions in the human breast. The love of fame is the great spring to noble and illustrious actions. Shut the civil road to glory and he may be compelled to seek it by the sword. Second, it will tempt him to make the most of the short space of time allotted to him, to accumulate wealth and provide for his friends. He saw no alternative for making the executive independent of the legislature but either to give him office for life or make him eligible by the people.

Working Out the Idea of the Presidency

Mr. Wilson of Pennsylvania: It would seem to be the unanimous sense that the executive should not be appointed by the legislature unless he was rendered ineligible a second time. He perceived with pleasure that the idea was gaining of an election mediately or immediately by the people. Mr. Madison of Virginia: If it be a fundamental principle of free government that the legislative, executive, and judiciary should be separately exercised it is equally so that they should be independently exercised. There is the same and perhaps a greater reason why the executive should be independent of the legislature than why the judiciary should. Mr. Gerry of Massachusetts: If the executive is to be elected by the legislature he certainly ought not to be reëligible. This would make him absolutely dependent. He was against a popular election. The people are uninformed and would be misled by a few designing men. He urged the expediency of an appointment of the executive by electors to be chosen by the state executives. The people of the states will then choose the first branch, the legislatures of the states the second branch of the national legislature, and the executives of the states the national executive. This he thought would form a strong attachment in the states to the national system. The popular mode of electing the chief magistrate certainly would be the worst of all. If he should be so elected and should do his duty he will be turned out for it like Gov. Bowdoin of Massachusetts and President Sullivan of New Hampshire.

[Shall the national executive be appointed by electors?] Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia ay—6; North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia no; Massachusetts divided.

[Shall the electors be chosen by the state legislatures?] Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina, Georgia ay; Virginia, South Carolina no. On the question shall the executive continue for seven years? It was passed in the negative. Mr. King was afraid we should shorten the term too much. Mr. Butler was against a frequency of the elections. Georgia and South Carolina were too distant to send electors often. Mr. Elsworth of Connecticut was for six years. If elections be too frequent the executive will not be strong enough. There must be duties which will make him unpopular for the moment. There will be outs as well as ins. His administration therefore will be attacked and misrepresented. [On question for six years—all ay except Delaware.] Adjourned.

OPEN AIR MARKET.

Chicago, July 8.—[Friend of the People.]—On our street is a fruit store operated in a house and on the front lawn. It is a public menace to have this fruit uncovered and will surely result in an epidemic of sickness. Do not the board of health regulations guard the people of the city against such nuisances?
M. G.

An inspector was immediately assigned to make an inspection of the fruit and vegetable store complained of. He reports that, at the time of his inspection, there was no violation of the food covering ordinance. This ordinance requires that all food which is peeled, shelled, or cooked shall be protected from dust, dirt, flies, and handling by customers. The exposure of foods that are not cooked, shelled, or peeled is not a violation.

This store will be kept under observation and if any violation is noted the necessary action will be taken.

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN,
President Board of Health.

WPA WILL WRECK.

Chicago, July 8.—[Friend of the People.]—Where shall we apply in regard to an old wreck of a building in our neighborhood? I understand there are neither lights nor water in the building. Part of it is used by a junkman to store old rags and paper and another part of the building is practically a total wreck. This is a dangerous place for children as well as a fire hazard to the neighborhood. Please help us to get some action on this.
A. S.

Our records and reports show that the premises mentioned are under observation of this department. These are two story buildings of frame construction and brick veneer, owner having been notified to repair or wreck and has recently given his consent to the Works Progress administration to wreck the buildings. Work of demolition will begin very soon.

RICHARD E. SCHMIDT,
Commissioner of Buildings.

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

FOR COOLER HOSPITALS.

Chicago, July 15.—Why are hospitals without air conditioned operating rooms tolerated? Surely when restaurants, theaters, hotels, trains and office buildings can have cooling systems, any hospital can afford to keep its operating room cooled. Moreover, extending the system to its rooms, floor by floor, could no doubt be financed by those who could afford to pay an extra charge for such rooms in hot weather.

Why do most department stores persist in requiring their elevator operators to wear heavy, dark, long sleeved dresses or uniforms in hot weather? Light, cool clothes would be so much more attractive looking.

If we had more "cranks"—people who voice their displeasure over petty and big annoyances—wouldn't many things that vex humanity be corrected? AGITATOR.

THE RECORD.

Chicago, July 11.—John J. Mangan in his letter to this column dated July 6 says, "Remember President Roosevelt stands on his record." [The word "President" I inserted.] The American people do not need to be reminded of President Roosevelt's record by Mr. Mangan. The record of not one dollar lost by a bank depositor since Mr. Roosevelt's program became effective stands out as an accomplishment which will never be forgotten by a grateful people. This record, coupled with the fact that bank deposits up to $5,000 are now insured by Uncle Sam, is assurance that President Roosevelt is determined that the masses of the people shall be protected.

Yes, indeed, the people will remember President Roosevelt's record and will return him to the presidency by an unprecedented vote. J. V. C.

ERRANDS FOR THE BOSS.

Chicago, July 2.—Why do our employers give us about ten errands to take care of on our lunch hour? If we don't come back within the hour we are told about it, too. After all, little things like going to the bank, postoffice, stationer's, etc., take at least thirty minutes or so of our alloted time. Please, bosses, have a heart. Most of you don't think about it. You don't realize that we like to do a little bit of shopping ourselves. Thanks, boss!

LUNCH HOUR ERRAND-GOERS.

BUSES VS. STREET CARS.

Chicago, June 29.—Let us change that sixth plank in THE TRIBUNE platform to "Install modern street cars, buses, L's, etc.," and get this thing over with.

JOHN NICASAT

A CENT FOR THE AUTHOR.

Chicago, July 13.—Has your correspondent, Eleanor Blake, ever stopped to consider that the circulating libraries are a great boon to authors, particularly of mysteries?

Very few people, unless they have unlimited funds, will buy a mystery, paying $2 to $2.50 for it, to read just once. I'll wager she wouldn't sell 200 copies of her book, let alone 2,000, if it weren't for the circulating libraries.

Oftentimes these same circulating libraries are the only means of introducing unknown authors to the public. If a book has merit and the reader thinks it a worthwhile addition to his bookshelves he will buy a copy. He is more discriminating these days, for he has no space to accumulate junk.

Furthermore, the circulating library risks real money on authors, sometimes getting only a few cents rental fees out of a book. The word is soon passed around, "That book's no good. Don't waste your time reading it." At least these readers have not invested a couple of dollars.

Be thankful, Eleanor Blake, that you have a field for the sale of your mysteries in the circulating libraries.

RAE SIMON,
Librarian.

ONE MAIN QUESTION.

Kenilworth, Ill., July 11.—After it is all said and done, there is but one main question for the voter in this election: Does he want Roosevelt paternalism substituted for the usual American government of freedom?

Personally, I have no objections to the trafic officer raising his hand and stopping my automobile at the crossing, so trafic from the other directions can have its turn, but I do object to the officer getting into my driving seat, driving me where he thinks I ought to go, and then sending me a tax bill for his services.

V. C. BEEBE.

SONGS OF THE TIMES.

Davenport, Ia., July 8.—Have you noted the more frequent singing of the national anthem and the playing of patriotic airs during the last six months? I have.

Has America awakened? It would seem so. I trust it forecasts the outcome next November. ROBT. N. CARSON.

GONE FISHING.

Chicago, July 8.—I saw in yesterday's paper that our father, Henry, left for a fishing trip while his children have nothing to eat. We wish him a good time, and after November he can fish 52 weeks.

U. S. FACES TRADE LOSS BY PERSIAN ENVOY'S THREAT

Teheran Still Angry; Feels Self Humiliated.

BY H. BASIL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TEHERAN, Iran [Persia], July 18.—Are Americans to be frozen out of the large and growing Iranian market because the Iranian minister to the United States was arrested last Nov. 27 on a speeding charge at Elkton, Md., and his country feels humiliated over the incident?

This question is causing much concern among friends of the United States here because new trade treaties are soon to be negotiated.

Although relations between the two countries are not actually broken, Iran has had no diplomatic or consular representatives in the United States since March, when King Riza Khan Pahlevi informed Washington he was withdrawing his minister and consuls and their stafs as a protest against American press comment on his minister's arrest. Business between the countries has since been transacted through the American legation here or the Turkish legation in Washington.

Iran Chilly Toward U. S.

The official attitude toward the United States is very chilly, observers declare. They assert a friendlier understanding between Iran and America is essential if America is to secure favorable treatment in the proposed trade pacts.

There has been no interference as yet with commerce between the two countries. However the Persian postal department still refuses to deliver American magazines and newspapers to their subscribers here. This is another reflection of Iran's view that the American press, with the exception of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, ridiculed the arrest of Iran's minister. THE TRIBUNE has been the only American newspaper for years, it is said here, which has taken an interest in Iran.

Why Iran Became Angry.

The facts on which Iran's official anger is founded are these:

On Nov. 27 Ghaffer Khan Djilal, the minister, and his English wife were being driven by their chauffeur from Washington to New York when they were stopped by Town Officer Jacob Biddle at Elkton, Md. The policeman said the car was speeding. Biddle charged the minister resisted and in the ensuing fight he [Biddle] was bruised on the face. Djilal grabbed the policeman's tie and badge. Biddle then called Constable Clayton Ellison and handcuffs were clapped on the minister's wrists. The minister said he was pushed roughly back into the car seat and that the officers told his wife to shut up.

When Djilal was taken before a magistrate, however, the latter dismissed the case, saying he had no jurisdiction over a foreign diplomat.

The Iranian minister demanded, and received, an apology from Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland. Secretary of State Cordell Hull issued a statement of regret. Djilal demanded punishment of the officers who arrested him. They were discharged and fined $25 each.

The press comment at the time, however, was that speed laws should be observed even by diplomats. Secretary Hull's statement admonished diplomats that their diplomatic immunity obliged them to observe laws and regulations "meticulously."

That the proud King Riza would not bear without retort the handcuffing and subsequent discussion of his envoy was not unexpected, even though it was realized that the minister was at fault in provoking the policemen. The Teheran government dismissed Djilal from the diplomatic service following the episode, and even relieved the foreign minister of his portfolio. This was considered by observers a criticism for giving the important Washington post to a man who had so little control of his nerves.

U. S. Official Slain in 1924.

The justification for the American policemen's actions is not questioned in Iran's capital, but it is claimed here is an international etiquet which should prevent such action in the case of a diplomat, even when otherwise justified, and that the Iranian's position as minister of a friendly state should have been respected.

The Elkton affair was the second diplomatic problem between the two countries. The first was far more serious.

In July, 1924, Maj. Robert Imbrie, American vice consul, was slain in the streets of Teheran by a fanatical mob which, it was claimed at the time, mistook him for a Bahai [member of religious sect]. A companion, another American named Mellin Seymour, was also attacked.

The United States dispatched a stern note—the stiffest it had sent to any country since those sent to Germany before the world war.

The government and people of Iran—then Persia—condemned what was termed the barbaric killing, and every claim of the United States government was satisfied.

SUBMARINE ERRS; FRENCH RIVIERA TOWN SHELLED

NICE, France, July 18.—(AP)—A French submarine accidentally shelled the French riviera resort town of Sainte Maxime last night while trying to sink a burning yacht at sea.

Two of the shells landed in the village. One of them hit a saw mill, causing considerable damage. Several other shells whistled over the roofs of the town, scaring the villagers from their beds.

Gendarmes said the submarine was the Atalante. When it finally got the range it sank the yacht whose flames were endangering nearby vessels. The pleasure boat was the property of a Chilean, Baez de la Quadra.

EDEN TELLS HOW CLOSE ENGLAND CAME TO A WAR

Says Nation Saw No Gain by Fighting.

BIDFORD-ON-AVON, England, July 18.—(AP)—Foreign secretary Anthony Eden revealed today how close Great Britain came to a European war in defense of Ethiopia.

He emphasized the government now is basing its Locarno policy upon removing European tension engendered by the Italo-Ethiopian war and reoccupation of the Rhineland by Germany.

Excusing the lifting of sanctions from which "there was no escape," Eden added "the alternative course [military action from outside Ethiopia] naturally was very present in the government's mind. Before it came to its decision its merits were in fact very carefully weighed."

The government finally decided against military action, the Secretary said, because "nothing was to be gained by following it."

He admitted abandonment of Ethiopia brought the government "much sincerely felt criticism," but he stated he was convinced military action would "only serve to prolong the state of sterile tension in Europe without any hope of compensating results."

Locarno Parley Wednesday.

LONDON, July 18.—(AP)—Three of five original Locarno signatories laid plans tonight for a "preliminary" meeting in London next Wednesday.

Their discussions, informed sources said, will concern additional arrangements for a later conference—whose time and location are yet undetermined — at which Great Britain, France, Belgium, Germany, and Italy may review European peace suggestions.

After weeks of negotiation France today accepted the invitation of Great Britain to send a representative to the "preliminary" conference next week. Belgium's answer was not expected until Monday, although Brussels reported Premier Paul von Zeeland's government would follow the British lead.

On the agenda will be only exploratory discussions of pending European problems informed sources said, with detailed conversations of proposed peace arrangements delayed for the larger and more conclusive meeting.

CANTON REVOLT MOVE AGAINST CHINA COLLAPSES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 18.—Organized resistance to the Chinese central government at Nanking in the two southeastern provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi appeared today to have collapsed.

Gen. Chen Chi-tang, Cantonese war lord and head of the southern insurgent movement, which had as its avowed aim war against Japanese aggression, was reported to have called off the revolt and to have left Canton for Hongkong. This followed desertion of his entire air corps. About 160 flyers took off in 62 planes, 58 for Nanking, and the rest for Hongkong.

Numerous subordinates also deserted and went to Hongkong. They circulated telegrams denouncing Chen Chi-tang and charging the anti-Japanese war declaration was camouflage for selfish ambitions. Canton's collapse left the Kwangsi province faction in a serious predicament.

Canton, according to reports, is in a chaotic condition, with several clashes. Foreigners are fleeing from the foreign concession to Hongkong. Anxiety was felt for the welfare of American missionaries.

Soviet Plane with Pay Load Soars 6.8 Miles; Record

MOSCOW, July 18.—(AP)—An altitude of 11,000 meters [36,089 feet] was reached today by Vladimir Kokinaki, soviet aviator. Flying a two seater plane with a pay load of 500 kilograms [1,102.311 pounds] the pilot made a 63 minute ascent over Moscow. He reported a temperature of 49 degrees below zero at his maximum height. The international altitude record for airplanes with a pay load of 500 kilograms was held by Bourdin, a French aviator. He flew to a height of 31,272.871 feet on Jan. 26, 1934.

Dr. Ellen Fitz Pendleton Remains Seriously Ill

Wellesley, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—The condition of Dr. Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president emeritus of Wellesley college, was "serious and unchanged" tonight, Miss Mary L. Coolidge, dean of the college, reported. Dr. Pendleton, 72, collapsed from heart disease last Thursday.

Wooden Gun Ignored

Columbus, O., July 18.—[Special.]—Armed only with a wooden gun and a blackjack, three or four convicts tried to escape over the west wall of the Ohio prison today, but one shot from a tower guard's gun halted them.

Guard R. L. Pennington said he fired a shot when he saw three or four prisoners on top of the industrial building, adjacent to the west wall, trying to throw a 50 foot rope made of mattress twine across a 36 foot space between the building and the wall.

The prisoners fled from the roof and other guards seized two of them. They were Henry Mershon, 33, of Cincinnati, and Morris O'Flaherty, 27, of Cleveland, both serving terms for robbery.

The plotters were equipped with pulleys, fashioned from spools, which they apparently intended to use to slide across the rope.

8 NATIONS GRANT TURKEY RIGHT TO REARM STRAITS

Sign New Dardanelles Pact Tomorrow.

MONTREUX, Switzerland, July 18.—(AP)—Immediate right to remilitarize the Dardanelles was granted to Turkey tonight by eight signatories to the Lausanne post-war treaty.

Delegates to the international conference resulting from the Turkish request to rearm the straits agreed to sign a convention Monday.

The decision was unanimous, with only the Japanese making slight reservations because of what a spokesman described as Japan's "unfortunate departure from the league of nations."

The Nations in Accord.

The countries agreeing to the convention included Great Britain, France, Russia, Japan, Turkey, Greece, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria.

The convention would grant complete liberty to merchant marine passage through the straits in peacetime and wartime, even with Turkey at war, provided the commercial vessels do not assist the fighting powers.

The Russian navy would be granted complete freedom in peacetime to leave and enter the Black sea through the straits, but nations outside would be subjected to limitations on passage of fighting ships through the channel.

Limitations on Use of Straits.

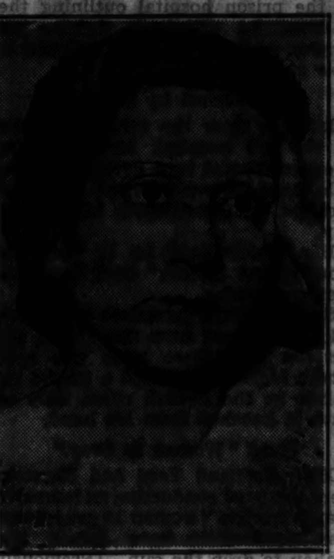
During wartime belligerents would be prohibited from using the straits unless acting for the league or under the obligations of a regional pact of which Turkey was a signatory.

The convention would continue for twenty years after signatures unless denounced and may be amended every five years.

The Japanese reservations specify the convention would not be considered to modify Japan's position as a non-member of the league, both as regards the covenant and regional pacts concluded under its framework. Japan reserved full liberty of action under regional treaties.

A Turkish pledge guaranteed that during remilitarization activities the Islamic power would not disturb the graves of thousands of war dead now buried in the demilitarized zone.

Held in Shooting



MRS. SOPHIA FERRACANE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Sophia Ferracane, 37 years old, 817 Townsend street, mother of four children, who fired a wild shot at Mrs. Ruth Hougland, 30 years old, 1140 Sunnyside avenue, a divorcée, Friday night, was in custody of Racine avenue police yesterday. Mrs. Ferracane went to Mrs. Hougland's apartment with her son, Victor, 18 years old, and her estranged husband, August, fled through a rear door as she entered. Mrs. Ferracane accused Mrs. Hougland of breaking up her home and then drew a revolver. Mrs. Hougland fled from the apartment as Mrs. Ferracane fired one shot.

GETS DIVORCE ON GROUND WIFE HAS JEWISH LAWYER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 18.—The Supreme court ruled today that a husband who belongs to the Nazi party is entitled to a divorce from his wife if she seeks the advice of Jewish lawyers.

This ruling holds even if the lawyer has been the adviser of the wife's parents, who are paying her legal bills, and even if the husband has no personal objection to the lawyer except his race. The mere act of consulting a Jew is sufficient grounds for divorce, it was held.

In another recent court ruling it was stipulated that health insurance companies must pay for operations carried out to enable women to bear children if the women are of such racial value that the operations are "in the interest of the general public."

JOBLESS WOMAN, 'HEIR' TO $500,000, TRIES TO END LIFE

Miss Rose M. Scully, 40 years old, 339 North Parkside avenue, who is a claimant as one of the heirs to the $500,000 estate of her aunt, the late Mrs. Mary Scully Fagan Wilhelm, was recovering last night in the West Suburban hospital from the effects of poison she took last Wednesday.

Found unconscious by her landlady, Mrs. C. M. Hoye, Miss Scully was taken to the hospital. There she told physicians she was despondent over the inability to find employment.

After the death of her aunt in 1933 Miss Scully and 13 other nieces and nephews filed suit in the Circuit court to annul the marriage of their aunt, Mrs. Wilhelm, 76 years old, and August Wilhelm, 36 years old, a millinery salesman. The effect of the marriage was to nullify a will in which the 14 nephews and nieces were named as her heirs.

At the instigation of Miss Scully, Mrs. Wilhelm's death was investigated by the coroner, but found to be from natural causes. Later Mrs. Wilhelm's estate was placed in escrow pending the expected will contest, which will probably be heard in the fall.

Austrian Trade and Army Commission Visits Berlin

VIENNA, July 18.—(AP)—An Austrian military and economic commission traveled to Berlin today, a source close to the government said, to work out practical details of the new Austro-German agreement. No official announcement of the trip was made.

TRIBUNE SUMMER PROJECTS PROVE HEAT LIFE SAVERS

They Help Mothers and Their Children.

The lives of three babies, each less than 10 days old, probably were saved yesterday by the Tribune free ice fund.

All three cases, termed "emergency" by Miss Edna Mae Wray of the United Charities, director of the Tribune free ice fund, were out on the crowded west side, where—even on seemingly cool days—heat billows up from the pavements and into crowded, airless flats and attics, there to stay.

In each case the mother, unable to nurse her baby, was feeding it a milk formula made with milk which no desperate iceless effort could keep fresh.

Rushes Free Ice Tickets.

"The Visiting Nurse association gave one family an ice box," Miss Wray reported, "but they couldn't buy ice to put in it. A neighbor gave another $1 a week ago, but when the ice from that dollar was gone they had nothing, and the baby was very sickly. We rushed ice tickets out to all of them, and I am certain it saved their lives.

"I have been swamped with calls today," she continued. "New babies and heart cases. A hospital called, asking us to give ice to a cardiac patient who must have ice packs. A special worker called, asking ice for a mother with nine children. Her husband died before the last baby, now 15 months old, was born."

In the same mail with numerous requests for aid yesterday came a grateful letter from a tubercular mother with two tubercular children.

Will Drink Fresh Milk.

"I want to thank you for the ice tickets," she wrote. "They mean so much to me and the children. I have been very sick, as the heat is getting me on account of having only one lung, but—thanks to the ice tickets—it will be a pleasure to drink fresh milk."

The answering of all these requests has been made possible through the contributions of readers of THE TRIBUNE. A gift of $1 will keep a baby's milk cool for a week. Yesterday's contributions were:

From cool Camp Algonquin, summer camp operated by THE TRIBUNE and the United Charities in the Fox river valley, came another letter from a mother, this one with nine children. The six youngest, from 2 to 14 years of age, are with her at Camp Algonquin, sent there by contributions of readers of THE TRIBUNE.

Children Run and Play.

"I know you must know of this wonderful place," she wrote of the camp. "But will you let me rave? I dread the thought of going home with no yard for these six children to play in, only the sidewalk. It sure does me good to see them just run and play, and not a thought of an automobile. I never dreamed a place like this could be so nice, and everything arranged so that even I am supposed to have a rest, which seems so funny to me. Is it possible for us to stay longer?"

A gift of $9.10 makes a two week outing at Camp Algonquin possible for one child. A gift of $25.20 will send a mother and two children. Current contributors are:

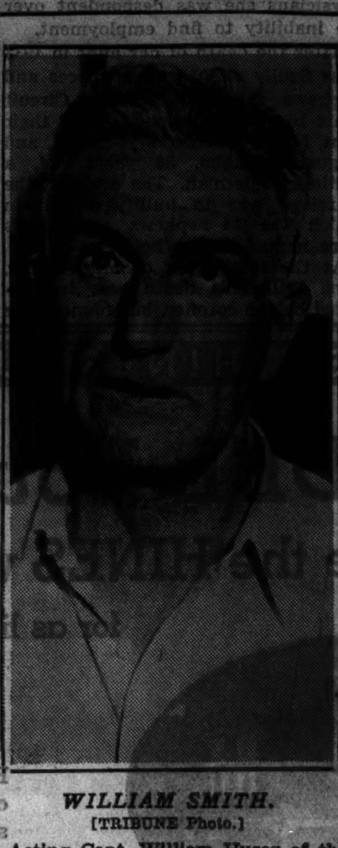
Guard for Children of James Roosevelt Fined

Hampton, N. H., July 18.—(AP)—Robert F. Droney of New York, secret service agent assigned to guard the children of James Roosevelt, son of the President, paid a $5 fine and $4.60 court costs today for speeding. A policeman testified Droney was driving 60 miles an hour July 13. The President's son maintains a summer home at Little Boar's Head, near here.

Exposition Balloon Race at Cleveland Is Delayed

Cleveland, O., July 18.—(AP)—Officials of the Great Lakes exposition today postponed until July 27 the balloon race between Goodyear X and The Great Lakes Exposition, winner and runner-up, respectively, of the National balloon race. Originally the race was scheduled for Monday.

CONFESSES



WILLIAM SMITH.

Acting Capt. William Husar of the Brighton Park police station announced yesterday the capture of the moron who raped two girls, 8 and 7 years old, Friday afternoon, after enticing them into a vacant lot at 35th street and Washtenaw avenue.

The degenerate, according to Capt. Husar, is William Smith, 59 years old, 8909 Cottage Grove avenue, a salesman, who is married and the father of two grown children. He was identified by the girls, Capt. Husar said, and then admitted his guilt. Smith was found intoxicated in the same lot where he perpetrated his attack, Capt. Husar said.

VOLCANO ERUPTS AFTER QUAKE IN COLOMBIA; 14 DIE

BOGOTA, Colombia, July 18.—[U. P.]—A volcanic eruption showered the Tuquerres area, near the Ecuador border, with ashes and lava today in the wake of an earthquake which leveled Tuquerres and damaged seven other towns.

Fourteen were known dead and twenty-two were gravely injured as a result of the quake, which occurred last night, with intermittent minor temblors today. Most of the injured were women and children.

Heavy quake damage was reported. Tuquerres, a town of 30,000, was reported in ruins. Destruction extended to Pasto, Tulcan, San Gabriel, Santander, Yascual, and Panamal. Two hours after the major temblor struck, the Gonzales and Garzon families engaged in a political feud on Tuquerres streets. One person was killed, another wounded, before renewed quakes ended the fight.

EX-CHICAGOAN'S ARREST BY NAZIS PUZZLES FRIENDS

Relatives of Ludwig Hoffman, German born former Chicagoan who has been in jail in Nuremberg, Germany, since July 1 for referring to Julius Streicher, publisher of The Steurmer, an anti-Jewish newspaper, as a "lump," expressed mystification yesterday.

"It doesn't seem logical that Hoffman would make such an utterance against a high Nazi," said Mrs. Paul Ziegler, 910 East 75th street. "Mr. Hoffman boarded with us until two years ago, and he always seemed in sympathy with Nazi principles."

Mrs. Ziegler's husband is a brother of Hoffman's wife, she said. Mrs. Ziegler added that, so far as she knew, Hoffman had never become a citizen of the United States. Dispatches from Germany telling of Hoffman's imprisonment referred to him as an American citizen.

KING'S ASSASSIN LAYS ACT TO SNUB BY HOME OFFICE

Planned Protest Because He Got No Mail.

LONDON, July 18.—(AP)—George Andrew McMahon, who sought to attack King Edward VIII of England, told his wife in Brixton jail tonight, "I am neither traitrous nor disloyal and did not intend to shoot the monarch."

The prisoner, 34 years old, asserted he wanted only to protest because the home office had not answered his letters.

"I have faith in you," his dark eyed wife comforted him. "I will do all that is possible to help you. But you chose a shockingly wrong method of protesting your grievement."

McMahon, his wife and Alfred Kerstein, his attorney, talked for an hour in the prison hospital outlining the unsuccessful attacker's defense for Friday, when he will be arraigned in Bow street court.

Questioned by Doctor.

Isolated from the other prisoners in the jail hospital, McMahon has been questioned by a doctor at intervals since he was arrested after the incident on Constitution hill Thursday.

His friends said he is "terribly worried and broken" over the trouble he caused.

Scotland Yard detectives completed taking evidence from more than 100 persons who were near the spot where McMahon leveled a loaded revolver at the British ruler, only to have it knocked from his hand.

Hunt "Woman in Gray."

Both Scotland Yard and Kerstein were reported conducting an intensive search for the "woman in gray," who was reported to have forced McMahon to drop the gun. [Previously police were said to have talked to this woman and to be shielding her from the public.]

Kerstein said a dozen persons wanted to testify for the prisoner, but he considers most of them notoriety seekers. Because of the crowds which were watching the royal procession, Kerstein said he believes few persons actually saw what happened.

McMahon will appear before Chief Magistrate Sir Rollo Graham Campbell to answer charges of possession of a gun with intent to endanger the king's life.

King Edward, who left Buckingham palace to spend the week end at his country home at Fort Belvedere, announced today he would assume patronage of the Windsor Football club, which his father carried on during his life. The Windsor club is the only one in the country under the monarch's patronage.

France Plans Heavy Guard.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CANNES, France, July 18.—The revolver pointing incident in London has highly intensified preparations safeguarding King Edward VIII. of England when he arrives July 27 for a vacation on the Riviera. A high official of the ministry of interior said today greater precautions will be taken than for the president of France.

Thirty picked men of the Surete Generale, the national secret service, will be on duty night and day, which means that twice that number will be employed. Marseilles is contributing spotters who are familiar with the tough Marseilles criminal and terrorist element. They will be disguised as gardeners working on the lawns of Maxine Elliot's seaside Chateau de l'Horizon, or as road menders or gatekeepers.

MERCHANTS TO CLOSE IN BLOW AT MEXICAN STRIKE

A special session of the powerful National Chamber of Commerce decided, it was learned, to close capital commerce Monday unless the conflict between the Mexican Light and Power company and its 3,000 employés is settled.

There was, meanwhile, considerable belief cautiously expressed in official quarters that tonight might bring an end to the movement that, in its 60 hours duration, had brought this city uncomfortably close to food shortage, fear of epidemic and even possible floods.

RUSSIA DEVELOPS NEW GOLD FIELD IN BLEAK SIBERIA

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, July 18.—A new placer gold field of great wealth which a competent authority says is "richer than Alaska," is now being developed in the desolate, virgin territory of eastern Siberia, about 100 miles north of the town of Okhotsk, on the fringe of the Okhotsk sea. It is learned that 60,000 men are already working there.

Supplies and equipment hitherto reached the region with delays and difficulty that recall the stories of old Klondike, but are now beginning to flow more easily via the new north Baikal railroad from Irkutsk to the Okhotsk sea, and up the river Kolma from the northern coast.

Next year the Russians expect to have drags and excavators working in the new field, and the most modern mining equipment is now being produced. Soviet Russia has been steadily increasing its gold production, and this year it expects to lead the world with an output of around $600,000,000, which would set a new record.

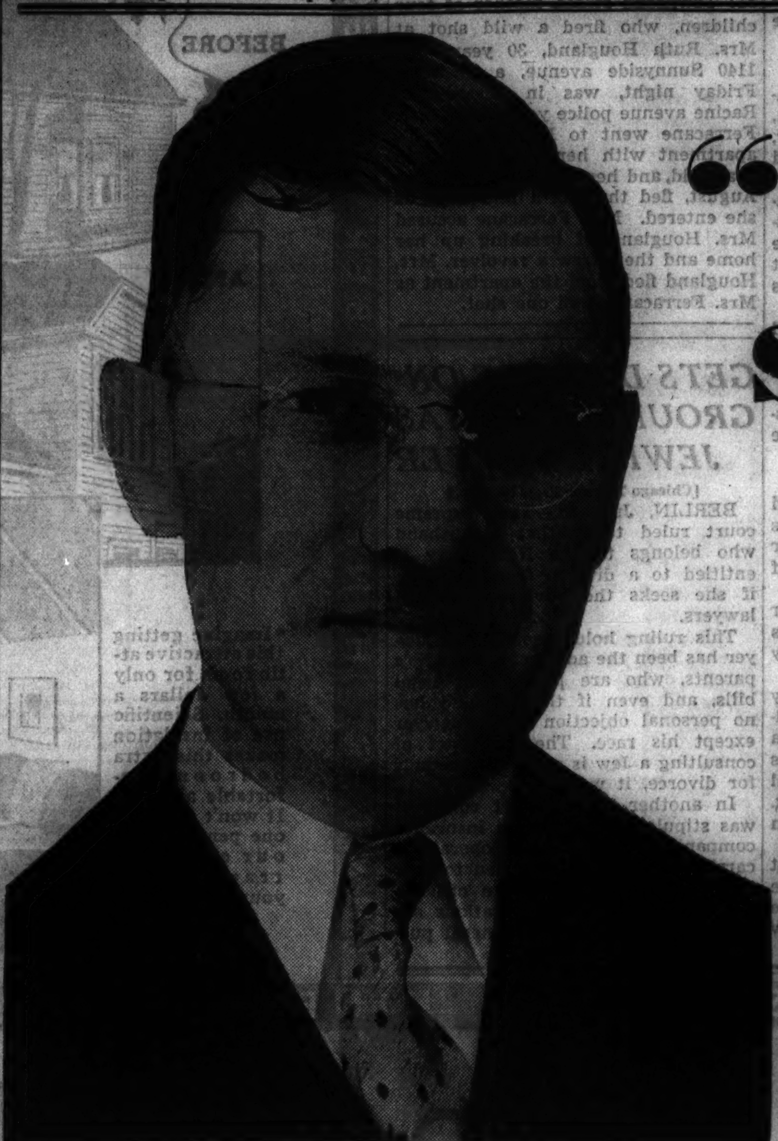
"How we found the summer home we always wanted"



"Every father of a family of small children is familiar with the summer home problem."

Dr. Albert L. Lash, 3844 W. Jackson Blvd., tells how Tribune want ads guided him to an ideal summer home.

"EVERYONE with a family of small children is familiar with the summer home problem. We have had our share of it.

"Every year, for the last seven years, we have had a summer cottage for the season, and each time in a different location.

"We concluded that renting is not nearly so satisfactory as having your own place—if you can find the ideal location.

Looked Each Sunday

"This spring I set out early, determined to find a good location and to buy a little place, if I could find one at the right price.

"We organized family expeditions, and each Sunday drove to a different location to size it up. We visited several places without seeing anything that the whole family would agree on.

"It was getting toward the time when the children would be out of school and ready to go to the country. We still hadn't found a cottage, so I turned to the old reliable Tribune want ads to see what they had.

Found the House

"The first day I looked—Sunday, May 10—I spotted an ad for a five room log cabin at Michiana Shores, a little way beyond Michigan City.

"We drove down there and saw the house. Everyone in the family said it was exactly what we wanted in the way of a house. The lot, however, was a little too small.

"R. H. Hanauer, sales manager in charge of Michiana Shores for the H. M. Cornell Co., developers of the property, said that I could pick out the lot I wanted and they would duplicate the house and have it ready in four weeks' time.

We Are Delighted

"That same day, while we were there, we picked out a lot we liked and signed the papers so they could go ahead with the house. We moved in July 1st. We are all delighted with our new summer home and thank the Tribune for helping us to find it."

"The family said it was exactly the kind of a summer house we wanted."

Would You Be Interested in a home of your own, if you could find one in exactly the right spot and at a price and on terms which would suit your pocketbook?

Scores of places of all kinds, sizes and descriptions are being offered at prices which are surprisingly low. You, too, can find exactly the kind of a home you have been dreaming of if you will keep an eye on the Real Estate columns of the Tribune want ad section.

The living room of Dr. Lash's new summer home has a large fireplace of natural field stone.

EIGHT LOG CABINS, SIX WEEK-END CABINS AND A NUMBER OF LOTS ALL SOLD THROUGH TRIBUNE WANT ADS THIS SEASON!

"You will be interested in knowing of the results we have been securing from our advertising in the Chicago Tribune of log cabins and summer home lots, near Michigan City.

"Already this year we have built and sold eight log cabins, ranging in price from $1,000 to $2,200; and six week-end cabins, ranging in price from $292 to $595. In addition, we have sold a large number of wooded cottage sites, ranging in value up to $1,200.

"Russell H. Hanauer, who has been associated with me for the past ten years, and who is in sole charge of our summer home operation, attributes the success of this enterprise largely to Chicago Tribune classified advertising."

BREEDERS HOLD FIRST GUERNSEY PARISH EXHIBIT

Dr. N. S. Heaney Wins Top Honors at Cattle Show.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Premier exhibitor honors were awarded Dr. N. Sproat Heaney, owner of Woody Nook farm, Glenn Ellyn, at the first annual Parish Guernsey Cattle show held yesterday at Mill Road farm, five miles west of Lake Forest. The show was sponsored by the Northern Illinois Guernsey Breeders' association. Dr. Heaney won by scoring the greatest number of points as an exhibitor of breeding animals.

August Zeising, owner of Thorn Hill farm, Deerfield, won the premier breeder title among the ten herd owners exhibiting in the show.

Bull Calf Wins Two Titles.

St. James farm, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick of Naperville, was awarded both the junior male championship and the grand champion male award on a bull calf, St. James Prince's Cavalier. After winning in its own class the animal was entered for the grand championship and took that title also. After awarding it the honors, Judge Louis Zeitz of Waukesha, said to the spectators, "That animal has everything you want in a Guernsey bull."

After having won top honors in the male division, the St. James farm Guernseys won the senior and grand championship female awards with St. James Champion's Susan.

Winners Will Tour Fairs.

Out of the 55 animals judged in yesterday's show about twenty of the best, including champions and first and second prize winners, will be selected for a tour of fairs, starting with the Illinois State fair to be held in Springfield from Aug. 15 to 23. Later the "pick of northern Illinois Guernseys" may be shown at the Dairy Cattle Congress in Waterloo, Ia., and at the Wisconsin State fair in Milwaukee.

The parish type of show has been introduced in Illinois as an educational department of the association, offering breeders an opportunity to have their herds judged locally by an expert so that animals can be selected more intelligently for the bigger shows.

Edwin C. Welch, owner of Little Orchard farm, Antioch, and a member of the association's executive committee, announced at the end of the program yesterday that the second annual parish show would be held next year at the Cantigny farm near Wheaton.

Judging Contest Is Held.

Another educational feature of yesterday's show was the junior dairy cattle judging contest. George Mitchell Kane of Mundelein was awarded a silver cup for scoring the highest number of points in competition with 23 other individuals. Roy Oestman of Hinsdale was second; Lester Leudtke and Walter Wilcox, both of Woodstock, tied for third, and Earl Kane, Mundelein, was fourth.

In the cattle judging contest for teams made up of three boys each, a silver cup was won by the Future Farmers of America club team from the high school at Woodstock. Young Leudtke, Wilbur Benoy, and Morris Hall composed the team.

The Lake Zurich 4-H club trio—George Mitchell Kane, Warren Nehmer, and Cecil Campbell—won second. The 4H Opportunity club of Lisle took third with Roy Oestman, Gerald Pott and Martin Drendell making up the team.

Other Winners Are Listed.

Junior yearling bull—Little Orchard Moonlight, Little Orchard farm.

Bulls, 3 years old and over—Langwater Comet, Little Orchard farm.

Junior yearling heifers—St. James Rocket's Beatrice, St. James farm.

Senior yearling heifers—Little Orchard Clara, Woody Nook farm.

BEEF INDUSTRY UNITES IN SALE DURING AUGUST

All Groups Co-operate to Fight Imports.

Combined forces of organized cattle producers, packers, and wholesale and retail meat distributors have completed their plans for a nation-wide domestic beef sale to be conducted during August, according to an announcement made public yesterday by the National Live Stock Marketing association of Chicago.

The purpose of the program is to assist 6 million cattle raisers in handling their problems and to benefit millions of beef consumers. An effort will be made to stimulate the sale of American beef to combat the increasing competition of foreign imports under the New Deal's foreign trade policies.

Producers Start It.

The domestic beef sales project was started by representatives of farmers and ranchmen who first obtained the assistance of the food chain stores. Subsequently independent meat dealers, packers, and other agencies joined in the movement to sell a seasonal surplus of beef during August at fair prices to the producer and to the consumer, says the announcement.

More than 30,000 retail stores operated under chain systems, in addition to independent retail meat shops in 75 cities in all parts of the country, are to take part in the campaign which starts the first of next month. They will distribute to housewives menus telling how beef may be cooked and served. Refrigerated show cases will be usedto display an assortment of every kind of cut in the beef carcass. Advertisments will appear throughout the month of August in daily and weekly publications in towns and cities all over the nation, all designed to supplement the efforts of thousands of salesmen behind the butcher's block.

Cites Increasing Imports.

The sale was prompted by a serious situation confronting the beef industry, explained C. B. Denman, president of the National Live Stock Marketing association, representing 300,000 farmers and ranchmen.

"Imports of live cattle and canned beef for the six months' period ending June 30 were of menacing volume to our domestic cattle, and seriously held down domestic cattle and beef prices," explained Mr. Denman, whose organization is opposed to the administration's liberal foreign trade policies that permit an increase of imported beef and other meats entering this country. "Hot weather during the first half of July set new records and as a result many cattle were prematurely forced to market."

See No Tariff Barrier.

Economists point out that there is no real tariff barrier against the importation of canned beef when foreign or domestic importers can bring beef into this country in cans under a relatively low rate of 6 cents per pound and the favorable exchange rate to the South American producers who are supplying most of the canned beef now coming into the United States. From January to May more than 43 million pounds of foreign canned beef came into this country.

Mr. Denman said that with all these unfavorable elements in the industry beef cattle growers set out to avert a complete price collapse and initiated the movement which has resulted in a heavy response from all agencies interested in the beef trade.

New Buildings to Double Vandalia Prison Farm Units

Vandalia, Ill., July 18.—[Special.]—The capacity of the Illinois state penal farm here will be doubled upon the completion of the six new dormitories under construction, Superintendent George E. Ray stated. At present only about 700 prisoners can be housed. A modern hospital is being built as a part of the $305,000 building program approved by the legislature. There are 802 farm inmates—almost 100 more than normal capacity. Convict labor is being used in all excavation work, but free labor will be used on the construction. The hospital and dormitories will not be ready for occupancy before early next spring.

Chyenkus Latest to Give Up on Stock Swindle Indictment

Maurice L. Chyenkus, 1412 Chase avenue, one of the twenty-four defendants named in the $10,000,000 stock swindle indictment returned last week in the federal court at Gainesville, Ga., surrendered here yesterday. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker and released on a $1,000 bond. Ben C. Waller surrendered in Detroit and Samuel Genis in New York. Up to yesterday eighteen of the defendants had given themselves up and posted bond. Hearing here on removal proceedings to Georgia has been set for July 25.

RELIEF WORKERS MARCH IN LOOP; ISSUE DEMANDS

Horner and Roosevelt Are Assailed.

A demonstration against the relief conditions in Chicago was held yesterday by more than 1,500 relief clients and workers. As they marched through loop streets, speakers mounted on vehicles equipped with loud-speakers criticized Gov. Horner and other officials whom the demonstrators blamed for their predicament.

No disorder accompanied the parade which was routed east from Union square on Randolph street to Michigan avenue and then south to 16th street. In a vacant lot just west of Michigan avenue at this point a massmeeting took place. Most of the marchers wore red brassards on their arms or carried red banners.

Assail Horner and Roosevelt.

As the line of march reached the loop the speakers on the sound trucks made sarcastic references to Gov. Horner's vacation during the crisis. They also turned their fire on President Roosevelt who, they asserted, "already has forgotten the forgotten man."

Strains of the Internationale and a parody of the Marseillaise were heard at intervals. When the marchers passed the Illinois Emergency Relief commission headquarters and the headquarters of Leo M. Lyons, relief administrator, at 1319 South Michigan avenue, they chanted, "Stand him on his head, stand him on his feet, Lyons, Lyons, when do we eat?" Another chant was, "Horner, Lyons, Kelly, Nash, how about the sales tax cash?"

A delegation of 10 leaders left the parade as it reached the city hall and called upon Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes, who acted as the mayor's representative in the latter's absence from the city. In this interview threats that relief clients would be advised to camp in the city hall if they were evicted from their homes were made by Simon Trojar, an officer of the Illinois Workers' alliance, sponsor of the demonstration.

Council to Get Demands.

The interview closed with the promise by Hodes that he would transmit to the city council the demonstrators' demands for the immediate reopening of relief stations for new applications, cash relief, the stopping of evictions, the reemployment of all relief workers and for a council resolution calling upon the legislature for an immediate special session on relief.

A bulletin issued yesterday by Administrator Lyons told of the generosity of relief workers, who have worked without guarantee of pay, of Mayor Kelly, who advanced [illegible] so that orders might be mailed, and of Chicago aldermen, who earlier advanced $2,000 for the same purpose. Lyons also told of the generosity of the medical profession, the druggists' association, and the milk dealers, all of whom have given aid so that relief clients would not go without food and other needs.

Husband a Playboy, She Charges; Gets Divorce

Mrs. Olga Louise Rosenbaum, 35 years old, 4019 Clarendon avenue, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Rudolph Desort in Superior court from S. Ralph Rosenbaum, 35 years old, of the Edgewater Beach hotel. She charged cruelty. Through her attorney, Harry X. Cole, Mrs. Rosenbaum testified that her husband was a "playboy" and refused to work. She complained that he gave his mother more than her share of attention. Mrs. Rosenbaum was awarded $15 a week alimony and the restoration of her maiden name, Rice.

Rabbis from 50 Cities Will Meet Here Today

Rabbis from 50 cities are expected to attend the annual Rabbinical assembly of the Hebrew Theological college today and tomorrow at the Hotel Sherman. Most of the rabbis are the heads of Jewish educational institutions. Rabbi Louis J. Lehrfield of Chicago will deliver the annual address this morning and Rabbi Arthur Rabinovitz, also of Chicago, will conduct a discussion of school curricula this afternoon. Rabbi Charles B. Chavelle of Louisville, Ky., will be the principal speaker tomorrow.

RUBBER CHECKS BRING ARREST.

Raymond Cottrell, 41 years old, who served a term in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for violation of national banking laws, was arrested by the Town Hall police yesterday after he was identified as the man who cashed several spurious checks in the city and Oak Park.

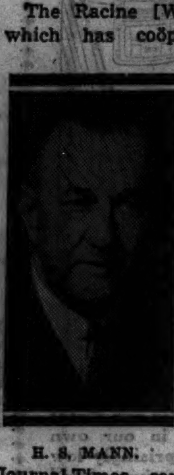
RACINE'S MUSIC FESTIVAL TO PICK CHICAGO ENTRIES

Outdoor Affair Expected to Draw Thousands.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.



H. S. MANN.

The Racine [Wis.] Journal-Times, which has coöperated with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for six years in sponsoring the annual Chicagoland Music festival in Soldiers' field, will hold its own festival in the Racine ball park on Wednesday night, Aug. 5, ten days before the Chicagoland festival, which this year is to be the night of Saturday, Aug. 15.

Herbert S. Mann, business manager of the Journal-Times, says that an entire new lighting system has been erected for the Racine festival and a stellar three hour program is being arranged. Between 10,000 and 12,000 persons attend the Racine festival each summer. The Wisconsin newspaper will send entries in all division to THE TRIBUNE'S festival contests to Chicago.

Racine has taken home many of gold, silver and bronze medals, awarded by THE TRIBUNE, and its local festival has become an institution of which the city is proud.

Kankakee Band to Enter.

One of the largest out-of-Cook county groups to enter the Chicagoland festival is the Kankakee High school band of 125 pieces, directed by G. E. Piersol. The band, made up of both boys and girls, will arrive early on the festival morning and stay in Chicago over Sunday.

Other officials of the organization are Elwood Wheeler, assistant director; Barrett O'Hara, librarian, and Fredrick Grassen, quartermaster. Mr. Piersol is one of the youngest high school bandmasters in this state and his band is rated one of the best in the middle west. For three consecutive years the band has won the Illinois Normal university marching contest.

Another large Illinois musical group enrolled in a festival contest is the Egyptian Choral club, with headquarters at West Frankfort, Ill. Nearly 100 singers from eight downstate cities make up this chorus, which won first place in the mixed chorus class in 1934.

Attorney Is Director.

Frank Trobaugh, director, is a practicing attorney. He received his early musical training at Valparaiso university in Indiana. His interests are varied, a peach orchard taking much of his time. He has just returned from Ephraim, Wis., where he attended the Christiansen Choral school. The chorus will come to Chicago on a special Illinois Central train.

Two of the out-of-town vocalists entered in the festival singing contest are Miss Eugenia Gillespie, 18 years old, mezzo, of Johnston City, Ill., and Jane Elizabeth Moore, 22, soprano, of Kewanee, Ill. Miss Gillespie sang in her high school glee club and is going into the competition for the experience she may gain.

Miss Moore was graduated in 1935 with a B. M. degree from St. Mary's college, Notre Dame, Ind., where she majored in public school music and voice. Last summer she won a scholarship at the American Conservatory in Chicago and during the last winter she has been teaching in the Central Senior High school in South Bend.

Deadline Is Aug. 3.

The deadline for all festival entries, groups in Cook county and individuals, will be Monday evening, Aug. 3, at 6 o'clock. Entrants are advised to get their blanks at once. Details of the north shore preliminary vocal contests, which will be held Thursday and Friday nights at the Edgewater Beach hotel, may be found in the Metropolitan section. Entry blanks for the various festival contests may be obtained by writing to festival headquarters: Room 1418, Tribune Tower.

Three cities which are expecting to send musical units to the festival are Toledo, O., the Sears, Roebuck & Co. band; Watervliet, Mich., the Watervliet Paper company male chorus, and Union City, Ind., high school band.

H. A. STIMSON, 93, RETIRED PASTOR AND WRITER, DIES

New York, July 18.—(AP)—The Rev. Dr. Henry A. Stimson, 93, retired minister, writer, and active participant in religious and civic affairs, died here today.

An uncle of Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of state, he was the founder of the Manhattan Congregational church and its pastor until his retirement in 1917.

Born here in 1842, he was graduated from Yale university in 1865 and engaged in the dry goods business and hunted buffalo in the west before entering the ministry.

Dr. Stimson held pastorates in Minneapolis, Minn., Worcester, Mass., and St. Louis, Mo. He was once a lecturer at the Chicago Theological seminary.

76, She Makes 26th Yearly Trek Over Manhattan Span

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—Twenty-six years ago today Mrs. Josephine Woolston of Union City, N. J., was the first woman to walk across the new Manhattan bridge. Now 76, she walked across the bridge again today, as she has done on every anniversary of the bridge's opening. She said she intended to rest until autumn, and then conquer the new George Washington and Triborough spans.

GRANT PARK BAND CONCERT OFFERS VARIED PROGRAM

Mix Schumann Scores with 'Show Boat.'

BY EDWARD BARRY.

In cool, wind swept Grant park last night the Glenn Bainum band played a program that offered something for everybody. The astonished Schumann found bits of his D minor symphony listed on the same sheet with a group of tunes from "Show Boat," all of which is in perfect compliance with the policy of the Chicago park district and the Chicago Federation of Musicians, joint sponsors of the free lake front concert series.

Two Marches Differ.

The brilliant toned band opened with a march fantasia by Kenneth J. Alford and included in the pre-intermission section of the program quite a different sort of march—that ironically courageous excerpt from the third movement of Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" symphony. The musicians turned in a nice performance of Smetana's sweetly flowing "Moldau," always a good bet for either outdoor or indoor use.

Two soloists added to the interest of the evening. Winfred Stracke, the bass who participated in the notable recital of antique and little known music at Mandel hall a few weeks ago, sang bits of Mendelssohn and Mozart—then returned to the stage half an hour later for the vocal parts of the "Show Boat" potpourri.

Concerts Continue Nightly.

The Grant park concerts continue nightly until Labor day. The programs for this coming week are listed in the music section of this edition.

MEIGHAN ESTATE IS ABOVE $50,000; MOST TO WIDOW

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—The greater part of the $50,000 estate of Thomas Bell Meighan, star of the silent films who died at Grenwold park, Great Neck, N. Y., July 8, will go to his widow, Mrs. Frances Ring Meighan, according to his will filed at Mineola today.

Mr. Meighan bequeathed personal affects and jewelry to his three brothers, James, John, and William Meighan; his household effects to his widow; $1,000 in cash to an employé, Arthur Jarvis.

He left one-fifth of the residuary estate to his sister, Mary Meighan, in trust for life, to produce an income of $1,200 a year. The remaining four-fifths he bequeathed to his widow in trust for life to produce an income for her of $5,000 a year.

'FLYING MOTHER' AND PASSENGER KILLED IN CRASH

Noonan, N. D., July 18.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Dorthea Busse Canfield, North Dakota's famed "Flying Mother," and Albert Lee, a passenger in her airplane, were killed here late today when the plane crashed.

Spectators said the motor of the plane stalled after the ship had reached a height of 200 feet at its takeoff at a fairground here. An old settlers' celebration was being held on the fairground.

The woman and her husband, E. M. Canfield, won notice throughout the northwest for hunting coyotes from airplanes during the winter months and for their barnstorming trips during the summer.

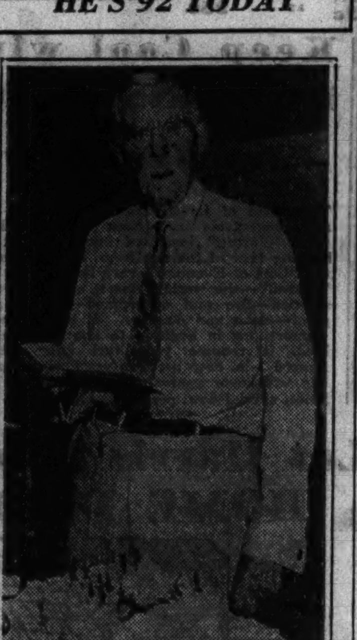
Mrs. Amy Porter, Widow of McKinley's Aid, Dies

New Haven, Conn., July 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Amy Betts Porter, 79, widow of John Addison Porter, secretary to President McKinley, died today in a hospital. During the Spanish-American war, Mrs. Porter was active in Red Cross work, assisting Clara Barton as a nurse in Cuban hospitals.

DIES OF HEART DISEASE.

An unidentified man about 40 years old was found dead of heart disease yesterday in Stafford park at 14th place and Jefferson street.

HE'S 92 TODAY



ROLLIN B. ORGAN.

Rollin B. Organ, 920 East 44th street, who 73 years ago was a coxswain on a Union gunboat at the siege of Vicksburg, will celebrate his 92d birthday today.

The white haired nonagenarian who served from 1900 to1904 as county commissioner, is the last surviving member of Farragut post, G. A. R. He enlisted in the Union navy at the outbreak of the civil war at a recruiting station located where the Merchandise Mart now stands, served on the Gunboat Fort Hindman and was wounded at the mouth of the Cain river during the Red river campaign of 1864.

At the close of the war, he made the three day trip from Rock Island to Washington on a wood burning train—paying $12 for the round trip—to see President Lincoln.

As for his present age of 92, and how he reached it, Organ says "I never touched tobacco or liquor until two months ago when the doctor made me drink wine because I was ill."

Orville Knapp Rites Held; Widow Is En Route Here

Boston, Mass., July 18.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Orville Knapp, widowed bride of the orchestra leader who was killed in a plane crash at Beverly Thursday, left late tonight for her home in Chicago. Private funeral services for Knapp were conducted at noon today. The body was cremated and the ashes will be sent to the Knapp family home at Kansas City, Mo.

STUDENTS FIND HEALTH REASON FOR DRINK CURB

Poll Shows Moral View Has Lost Weight.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

If a poll of representative students at the University of Illinois is to be relied upon, the problem of liquor is passing out of the area of church and pastor into the area of health scientist and physician. Not one student polled said his pastor's view of the use of liquor would influence the former's decision concerning rum.

On the other hand, personal health, scientific facts concerning beverage alcohol and "effects of drinking as you observe them," combined with "common sense," were named as the most influential factors. Only one student polled believed religion or morals has anything to do with the problem. But the pastor may take some comfort in his lack of influence in this matter by discovering that even training rules of an athletic coach were regarded influential only by three students polled.

Poll Taken by Allied Youth.

The poll was conducted by the Allied Youth, national organization engaged in alcohol education, with headquarters in the National Education Association building, Washington, D. C. This organization is described as being in friendly coöperation with individual schools, churches and community groups in most of the states of the country. Studies of the University of Illinois poll have recently been made public.

It was stated that no member of the Allied Youth organization was polled. Nearly 64 per cent of the students in the poll were co-eds, and about 76 per cent were from Protestant homes, with representative numbers of Catholics and Jews.

While the students voted at a rate of five to three against the return to prohibition, yet only one per cent favored the use of total abstinence pledges. Even among the polled students who are tee-totalers the voting was four to one against the pledge.

Express Desire to Learn.

Commentators on the poll from religious groups who are also members of the staf of Allied Youth, including Dr. John R. Mott, noted Y. M. C. A. leader, and Dr. Daniel Poling, Christian Endeavor chief, point with comfort to one result of the poll. This was the two to one vote in favor of personally joining an organization that teaches facts about rum.

The students expressed preponderantly the opinion that the use of alcoholic beverages is increasing among youth. Thirty-two per cent of the students, however, stated that no change is observed on this point. They divided about 50-50 on the question of whether or not beer is intoxicating. Less than one per cent thought it personally objectionable to see a girl intoxicated, while one-half of one per cent said the sale of liquor at an amusement resort would adversely affect his patronage.

PLANE VICTIM

WILLIAM G. LEAMON.

Fair Oaks, Ind., July 18.—[U. P.]—William Leamon, consulting engineer for the Toro Mining corporation, Anaconda, Mont., and Mrs. B. M. Musselman, wife of a Toro official, were killed last night when their Waco cabin plane crashed in a field two miles south of here.

Leamon and Mrs. Musselman were returning home from the east by way of Detroit and Chicago.

Albert Rowen said he heard the motor of Leaman's plane sputter as it passed his farmhouse. The pilot threw out two flares and then attempted a landing. Leamon's plane struck a ditch and turned over, throwing Leamon 500 feet and Mrs. Musselman 800 feet.

The plane exploded and set fire to a field of dry, standing oats which held off would-be rescuers.

MICHAEL J. LYNCH DIES; POLICEMAN AT STOCKYARDS

Policeman Michael J. Lynch, 8219 South Lincoln street, detailed for the last fifteen years to the Union stockyards, died of a heart attack yesterday afternoon while talking with members of Fire Insurance Patrol No. 4 in front of their quarters at 44th street and Racine avenue. He was 59 years old and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret Lynch; three sons, James J., Edward, and Policeman William Lynch, and by a daughter, Eleanor. Funeral services are to be held Tuesday morning in the Church of the Little Flower, 1821 West 18th street, with burial in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

BENNETT TELLS ROMANTIC STORY OF ARTIST HEALY

Chicago Adopted by Great Painter in Last Days.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Boston. . . . 1831. . . . George Healy, timid, eager lad of 18 years, is showing some of his sketches to gentle, courtly Thomas Sully, one of the best of early American portrait painters and then in the heyday of his fame. . . . Having patiently examined the sketches the master says to the boy: "My young friend, I advise you to make painting your profession!"

That advice launched the career of a man who for many a year of the 19th century was Chicago's most distinguished citizen. In almost every European court his name was known and his charming personality appreciated. Monarchs, statesmen, prelates—Pope Pius IX. among them—authors, musicians, and explorers, were his sitters. In this country Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Abraham Lincoln, and Generals Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, and McClellan sat for him, as did many Chicago worthies and their wives.

The Master Is Pleased.

London. . . . 1838. . . . Sully is painting the portrait of Victoria, then in the second year of her long reign. . . . George Peter Alexander Healy, not so timid now, also is there, painting the portrait of John James Audubon. He shows Mr. Sully the picture, and the illustrious painter, after looking a long time in silence, says: "Mr. Healy, you have no reason to regret having followed the advice I gave you some years ago."

Last Wednesday at the Art institute in Chicago, which Healy in his old age called "The American city I love best." . . . Note the date, July 15, for it is the 123d anniversary of his birth. . . . Twenty-one of his paintings—including his celebrated portraits of Webster, Lincoln, Thiers, and Lord Lyons—are being hung in gallery 54 for an exhibition that is to continue until Sept. 23.

And so the timid Boston youth may fairly be said to have justified the advice Thomas Sully gave him 102 years ago. His work has survived.

Daughter Remembers Garden.

Before Healy's garden scene hanging on the west wall of gallery 54 stood Mrs. Charles H. Besly of Hinsdale, Ill., a daughter of the painter. She was escorted by Charles F. Kelley, dean of the institute's art school and to him she said musingly, "How well I knew that garden! It adjoined the house on the Rue de la Rochefoucauld in Paris, where we lived for eighteen years. It was all that was left of the park surrounding the beautiful house that Louis XIV. built for gentle Louise de la Valliere. The ladies sitting in the garden are my mother and my sister Edith. The likenesses are very faithful. That was one of my father's gifts—his mastery of likenesses."

After the London incident of 1838—the second meeting with Sully—G. P. A. Healy continued to paint for fifty-six years, dying in Chicago in 1894 at the age of 80. His eldest daughter, Mme. de Mare, stood at his bedside. "Are you comfortable, father?" she asked. "Yes," he replied, "and happy—so happy!" They were almost his last words.

Half Century of History.

His long, happy, fruitful career was an epitome in portraiture of half a century of European and American history. All the presidents of the United States from and including John Quincy Adams, sixth President, to U. S. Grant, the eighteenth, sat to him. In Europe he painted kings and queens in their palaces and he lived to see some of them eating the bitter bread of exile.

The current exhibition, small though it is in proportion to the vast number of the indefatigable painter's works, opens a mine of fascinating stories of the good and great; intimate, vivid stories that shed important historical sidelights.

Mark well his portrait—a loan from the city hall—of William B. Ogden [south wall], first mayor [1837] of Chicago in the days when we were alleged to be all uncouth. There is distinction in every line of the pose and expression of his honor, whom Mr. Healy painted in 1855 and whom he found charming. Ogden was a lover of the arts. Meeting the painter in Paris he persuaded him to make his home in Chicago and here he dwelt from 1855 to 1867, returning to us in his old age. Of Ogden he wrote in his delightful "Reminiscences of a Portrait Painter," a book now difficult to obtain:

"I do not know if, during my long career, I have ever met a man of greater charm of manner. The word 'genial' seemed made for him. Remarkably intelligent, very well informed, a delightful talker, full of energy, of will, of originality, he seemed destined by nature to be a leader of men. He had, from the first, believed in the marvelous future of the small town, where a few years before there had stood but a fort. His descriptions of the new city fired my imagination."

"I suspect," said Dean Kelley as we studied the picture, "that one reason for Mr. Healy's success in conveying charm to canvas was that his own pleasant manner and cultivated mind brought out precisely those attributes in his sitters, notably in yonder captivating Lincoln [north wall]. Sitting to a portrait painter is often as cruel an ordeal as sitting to the dentist—awful! But Healy made his sitters enjoy the hours they gave him. His daughter tells me that he and Lincoln were good friends and you feel the friendliness in Lincoln's face. This is not a melancholy, abstracted Lincoln but an eager, friendly one—all kindliness and gentleness, and the pose is very characteristic. I have the feeling in looking at the finer Healys that I know what the sitters truly looked like. In that respect his portraits are better than anything any camera could give you. He painted the finest type of people and he seems to have painted them at their best. Furthermore they were very important people and he painted them in a very adequate way."

The Painting of Thiers.

One of these "very important people" was Louis Adolphe Thiers, historian of the French revolution and of the consulate and the empire, rival of the great Guizot—whom Healy also painted—and first president of the third French republic.

Dean Kelley wishes us to study especially the hands in that portrait [east wall]. "Most portrait painters," he said, "realize that the hands often express as much as does the face, but many portrait painters are not good enough craftsmen to paint them or, being lazy, they slight them. Thiers was not of exalted birth and those strong, short, stubby fingers are biographically eloquent. I like the Thiers best of all the Healys I have seen. It is really marvelous as a proof of how wonderfully Mr. Healy was a medium through which the character of a sitter appeared on canvas. It was painted in 1875."

"My father," Mrs. Besly added, "always looked forward to the Thiers sittings. They were enlivened by constant repartee, except when Thiers did not wish to talk. Then he would promptly fall asleep."

Pope Pius IX. as a Sitter.

All who sat to Healy loved him and many confided in him. The stories are numerous. One of the prettiest concerns that ultramontane of ultramontanes, Pope Pius IX., who proclaimed the dogmas of the immaculate conception and of papal infallibility. To Healy's chagrin one of our compatriots—one of those hundred per cent Amurricans from "God's country"—churlishly declined to kneel for the papal benediction. "My son," said Pius IX. gently, "an old man's blessing never did harm to any one."

Another time, speaking of a monk who had left the Roman Catholic church and married, the pope said, "not without glee," "He has taken his punishment into his own hands." He was a restless sitter and would be coming to look over Healy's shoulder to see just how the portrait was getting forward. "I beg," said the painter one day, "your Holiness to sit down." "I am accustomed," was the reply, "to give orders, but you see, Mr. Healy, that I also know how to obey"—and down he sat.

Grant's Plain Tastes.

When Gen. Grant was sitting to Healy in Paris he said he wanted to meet Gambetta. Hence a dinner for the general and "the dictator" was arranged at the Healy home. The French cook outdid herself, but Grant cast a shadow over the feast by whispering to Mrs. Healy, "I would give all these complicated messes for a good dish of pork and beans."

In 1845 King Louis Phillippe sent for our future townsman and said: "Mr Healy, I hear that Gen. Jackson is very ill. You must start at once to the Hermitage to paint his portrait." Mr. Healy made the long voyage and secured sittings. While they were in progress he was awakened one morning by the voices of the plantation slaves who were wailing "Ole massa's dead! O, Lord! Ole massa's dead!" The wailing was premature, caused by an alarming sinking spell, but in a few hours Old Hickory did go to meet "the Eternal" by whom he so often had sworn.

Cross Views on Webster.

When Healy was painting Daniel Webster the senator sometimes made a sitting the occasion for what he called "a good think." Pushing away state papers, he would say, "Mr. Healy, it is well now and then to have a good think" and, enveloping himself in meditation, he would sit. Dean Kelley greatly admires the Healy Webster [north wall], as does THE TRIBUNE's art critic, Miss Eleanor Jewett, who calls it "superb," but Miss Harriet Monroe thinks it merely "a prominent citizen, NOT the man whose brow of thunder and eyes of lightning made his neighbors wonder 'if any one could be as great as Daniel Webster looked.'" Mr. Kelley said, "I find it very interesting for the simplicity of the color—the white, the gray, the black, and the face color." It was painted in 1848, when the senator was 66 and Healy 35 years old.

The Lord Lyons [south wall] will interest you for its quality of distinction. This is the bachelor Lord Lyons who, going to the White House to make formal announcement of the impending marriage of the prince of Wales—late Edward VII.—received Mr. Lincoln's wholly informal and rather appalling reply, "Lord Lyons, go thou and do likewise."

A Summing Up of Healy.

The dean summed up:

"Now all good portrait painting rests upon two attainments: [1]—the ability of the painter to interpret—to size up—his sitter; [2]—expert draftsmanship in order to register the impression. Healy was remarkable both as interpreter and draftsman, and his mastery of likeness shines out from all his best work. It has been said that his range is narrow, but when you behold in this gallery the variety of types he painted—young and old, simple and sophisticated—you find that within his field he had extraordinary range. Imaginative composition did not interest him and perhaps that is why critics do not rank him as high as they otherwise might. He was a sober painter, but no merely industrious painter, and he was a superb craftsman, unwilling to sacrifice fidelity to bravura. Despite his tremendous output very few of his paintings fail to meet a very high test. I don't know of any other painter of his time who surpassed him along his chosen lines. I doubt whether he could have painted a tragic face. Always he was looking for the warm, human relationships."

To G. P. A. Healy's devotion to that quest was due, I like to think, a beautiful tribute Queen Elizabeth of Rumania—she who wrote under the name "Carmen Sylva"—once paid him. Pressing his hand she said, "I thank God that he made me know you and yours."

A CIRCUS IS COMING TO TOWN

Under Big Top

Advance agents of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus arrived in Chicago yesterday to herald the opening of the circus July 25 at Solders' field. The circus train carrying 1,600 performers, seven herds of elephants, 1,009 menagerie animals and 700 horses is expected to arrive in the city this week. The show will be held under the "big top" seating 16,000 persons and containing seven rings and stages.

CENTRAL CITY ACTS AS HOST; GIVES AN OPERA

Central City, Colo., July 18.—(AP)—Central City, just another mountain mining village yesterday, forsook humdrum life tonight to say "Howdy" to the visitors swarming its steep streets and narrow sidewalks.

In 1859 John Gregory made the strike that started a rush. Tonight the 58 year old opera house on Eureka street was reopened for presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan light opera, "The Gondoliers." That show will continue until Aug. 8.

There still is gold in "The Hills," but money doesn't flow like the "redeye" of frontier times. Central City is 8,516 feet above sea level. Singers from New York, Chicago, and Detroit are in the cast of "The Gondoliers."

CALL SALESMAN'S DEATH ACCIDENT.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death in the case of King L. Klimmeck, 38 years old, 6151 Winthrop avenue, a bond salesman, who was fatally injured July 10, when he fell to the pavement in front of 645 St. Clair street.

APOGEE CAPTURES $32,100 LASSIE STAKES

16,000 WATCH HEADLEY STAR WIN IN STRETCH

Floradora Victor in Trial for Classic.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Apogee stepped confidently and gallantly over a muddy six furlong course and won the Lassie stakes which had a gross value of $32,100.

Floradora displayed such a dazzling display of speed in the stretch while winning in the Blackstone purse that she completely conquered most of her leading rivals for the $30,000 classic stakes of next Saturday afternoon.

Apogee Comes from Behind to Win.

Apogee cheered up the players of favorites in the crowd of 16,000 when she ran her brilliant race and came up from behind to win the Lassie by three-quarters of a length and to clinch the 2 year old filly title. She had been backed heavily and paid $6 for a $2 ticket.

And then Floradora came along and caused the heartbeats of long shot players to click ecstatically. After she staged her great rally in the stretch in which she whipped John Hay Whitney's Mr. Bones, and trounced him soundly, she paid off in the mutuel betting at $25.20 for a $2 ticket.

Granville Is Withdrawn.

The muddy track conditions brought about by a three hour rain which visited the course during the early hours of the morning took some of the glamor away from the program because soon after the track turned muddy Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons ordered William Woodward's Granville withdrawn from the Blackstone purse. Most of the withdrawals in the Lassie stakes were also brought about by the changed track conditions.

Still it was the most exciting racing that has been witnessed in Chicago this season. The stretch battles in the two top line events were the greatest thrillers of the year for both Apogee and Floradora had been outrun in the early stages of their battles. The way they came from behind caused the shivers to creep up and down the backbones of many a customer present.

After five horses had been withdrawn in the Lassie stakes ten went to the post. They were the topnotch 2 year old fillies of the land. They were royally bred and they went out to put everything they had into their racing effort.

They're Away in Good Order.

Starter Dickerson had them in line after a short delay of a minute and and half at the gate. He got them away in good order. John E. Hughes of Chicago got a thrill when his long shot filly Idyllic broke on top and for a half a furlong had her nose out in front.

Mr. Hughes' dream of a victory faded an instant later. Along came Jewell Dorsett, the fleetest 2 year old filly that has raced in New England this year and snatched away the lead. When she moved up so did Apogee. Midway down the back stretch Jewell Dorsett was romping along three lengths in front. Apogee was second a length and a half in front of the Wheatley stable's Drawbridge.

Apogee Creeps Up.

Into the turn toward the stretch the field wheeled in this order, but Drawbridge was shortening her strides. She didn't like the muddy going or the fast pace which Jewell Dorsett was cutting out. Still she clung to third place until the field straightened out for the run home.

Then it was that Jewell Dorsett's strides also began to shorten up. Apogee was at her saddle girth. A second later Apogee was looking her in the Early morning rains made the track muddy, but these young debutantes of the turf didn't seem to mind.

MAYS CRASHES, REPORTED DYING; 1 DRIVER KILLED

Boston, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—Wesley Johnson of Lansdale, Pa., was killed and three other automobile race drivers seriously hurt today in a collision at the Readville track.

The injured were Rex Mays of Glendale, Cal., who was reported to be dying at the Forest Hills hospital; Henry Angeloni of New Brunswick, N. J., and N. Vern Orenduff of Paterson, N. J. Johnson died on the way to the hospital.

The accident occurred at the halfway point of the 20 mile feature race. Mays and Orenduff were fighting for the lead and rounding a turn at what observers said was 100 miles an hour when their cars crashed into Johnson's machine. He was hurled out as the force of the collision sent his car flying through the air.

Car Crashes Through Rail.

Angeloni, driving behind Mays and Orenduff, turned sharply to the right to avoid the pile, but he suffered injuries when his machine crashed through the guard rail.

Oscar Ridon, a Boston driver, was injured slightly in an earlier race when he lost control of his machine and dashed through the railing.

Johnson, who had been lapped, apparently lost control in the thick dust. His machine struck a post and bounced back crosswise on the track. Mays's car was the first to crash, striking the end of Johnson's car. Both machines overturned just as Orenduff's racer struck them.

Officials of the A. A. A., sponsor of the races, immediately waved the remaining drivers to a halt, ending the competition.

Mays on Danger List.

Hospital officials said Mays had a crushed chest, two broken ribs and lacerations. His name was on the danger list. Angeloni had minor lacerations, and Orenduff lacerations of the face, contusions and abrasions of the body, and a fractured rib.

BABE STAPP HURT IN MINEOLA AUTO TRACK CRASH

Mineola, N. Y., July 18.—(AP)—Equaling the track record, Frank Bailey of New Brunswick, N. J., won the feature twenty mile dirt track auto race of the Nassau County Police sweepstakes at the Mineola fair grounds today, covering the forty laps in 21 minutes and 8 seconds. In a triple crash Bailey, Babe Stapp of Los Angeles, Cal., and George Connor of Indianapolis, Ind., escaped with minor injuries.

561,000 Cast Ballots in 1st Week of All-Star Poll

BY ARCH WARD.

Football fans of America are responding with unprecedented enthusiasm to their first opportunity to run a sports event.

Returns in the first week of the poll now being conducted by 182 newspapers to pick a team of all-American football players to meet the Detroit Lions have broken all records.

More than 561,000 already have cast ballots. Last year at this stage fewer than 200,000 votes had been tabulated. When the polls close at midnight a week from tonight there are indications that 2,000,000 will have had a hand in naming the team. Never before have so many selected the personnel of a sports squad. Only the coaches' poll preceding the 1935 All-Star football game excelled that figure.

The fans who are interesting themselves in this year's college eleven know that not only by their votes are they selecting the members of the squad but they also are deciding the starting lineup for the game at Soldiers' field the night of Sept. 1. The coaches, who will be elected by popular vote immediately after the player poll closes, must employ at the kick-off players chosen by the fans. In case the No. 1 man is unable to join the squad or is incapacitated in training the No. 2 player must be given preference.

The starting team will be composed of the two ends who receive the greatest number of votes, the two tackles, two guards, center, quarter back, full back, and two half backs.

They'll Be National Choices.

The collegians who race onto Soldiers' field to the strains of their alma maters' favorite songs will owe the honor to no small group of alumni or home town favorites. They will be America's choices because the voting this year is truly national. There are 182 newspapers, reaching every section of the land, conducting the poll, and enthusiasm runs about as high one place as another. Only the best reach the top when Uncle Sam really goes to work.

At the halfway stage Minnesota players have made the strongest showing. Setting the pace is Glenn Seidel, quarter back, who this morning has 126,663 votes, which gives him a slight bulge over Vern Oech, his teammate, at guard. Dick Smith, tackle, and Sheldon Beise, full back, are the other Gophers leading their positions. Dale Rennebohm is running second at center and Babe LeVoir ranks fifth among half backs.

In addition to the four Minnesota players the personnel of the starting lineup if the poll were to close today would be Milliner, Notre Dame, and Topping, Stanford, ends; Spain, Southern Methodist, tackle; Tangora, Northwestern, guard; Jones, Ohio State, center; Berwanger, Chicago, and Shakespeare, Notre Dame, half backs.

Gary Polls Heavy Vote.

As evidence of the interest consider yesterday's vote from the Gary, Ind., Post-Tribune. The leaders and their ballots follow: Ends, Milliner, Notre Dame, 4,503; Moscrip, Stanford, 4,502. Tackles—Smith, Minnesota, 4,502; Rukas, Louisiana State, 4,532. Guards—Tangora, Northwestern, 4,557; Oech, Minnesota, 4,502. Center—Jones, Ohio State, 4,594. Quarter backs—Seidel, Minnesota, 4,502; Pincura, Ohio State, 82. Half backs—Berwanger, Chicago, 4,618; Dailey, Purdue, 4,520. Full back—Elser, Notre Dame, 4,652.

First returns from the Worcester, Mass., Telegram give a wide lead to Flanagan, Holy Cross guard; Smith, Alabama quarter back, and Moscrip, Stanford end. Fans voting through the Des Moines Register are backing Grayne of Iowa by 3 to 1 over Grayson of Stanford and 4 to 1 over Beise of Minnesota. Berwanger leads the half backs, Seidel the quarter backs, and Jones has a huge lead at center. The Omaha World-Herald returns give Scherer of Nebraska the edge at end and Berwanger a 2 to 1 margin over La Noue of Nebraska at half back.

Thousands of votes are rolling in from central and northern Wisconsin for this lineup: Ends—Milliner, Notre Dame, and Loebs, Purdue. Tackles—Smith, Minnesota, and Pfefferle, No-

LOUIS NAMED IN $100,000 SUIT BY DETECTIVE

Repercussions of the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight and its attendant rumor that Louis was drugged with a shot in the arm the day of the fight appeared yesterday in two damage suits alleging defamation of character, one of which was filed in the Superior court here, and the other in the United States district court.

In the Superior court bill, the colored fighter's managers, John Roxborough of Detroit, Mich., and Julian Black of Chicago, ask $100,000 each from Sheridan Bruseaux, head of a south side detective agency. They base their claim on a story published last Tuesday in an afternoon newspaper describing an affidavit in which Bruseaux made the charge that Louis was doped.

Bruseaux Asks $100,000.

The federal court suit was filed by Bruseaux. It named Louis and his two managers, and bases the $100,000 damage claim on a second story published Thursday in another afternoon newspaper in which Bruseaux's dope charges are refuted by the defendants.

In the original affidavit, which, according to published reports, Bruseaux filed with the New York State Boxing commission, the detective states he was told of the hypodermic injection by Louis' sister, Mrs. Eulalie Barrow Gaines, in the presence of three persons. Administration of the injection almost led to physical combat between Black and Louis' trainer, Blackburne, the affidavit declared.

The day following publication of the story, Louis and his two managers made vigorous denial. Mrs. Gaines also declared she had never made such a statement. Black and Roxborough stated in their bill yesterday that publication of the "wilful, malicious, scandalous, and defamatory remarks" by Bruseaux has injured their reputations and impaired their revenue as the fighter's managers.

Cites Three Paragraphs.

Bruseaux' suit countered with the claim that he was injured professionally by the "wicked and malicious" remarks made by the managers and Louis in a copyrighted story they gave to an afternoon newspaper on July 16. The detective lists three specific paragraphs in the story as containing the remarks which damaged his reputation as an honest investigator. The first paragraph stated: "Rumors of Joe Louis being 'doped' not only are false and libelous, but part of a campaign of blackmail and shakedown maliciously pursued before and after the fight by Sheridan A. Bruseaux, a Chicago south side detective."

Story Irks Bruseaux.

The other paragraphs to which Bruseaux took exception were:

"Sheridan Bruseaux, a south side detective, persistently has sought to obtain money from Roxborough. At the time of Trainer Blackburne's difficulties over a shooting [near 57th and South Park way, in which one person was killed and another wounded. Blackburne was later exonerated], Bruseaux sent word to Roxborough that he had damaging evidence which could be suppressed for a price. Bruseaux claimed he had found the pistol used in the shooting and could prove it belonged to Blackburne and had been given to him by Roxborough."

"Bruseaux repeatedly sought through round-about messages to 'sell' his silence on the alleged Louis 'doping' to Roxborough and Black and on being refused, a final ultimatum was issued that, unless hushed, the story would be printed in a Chicago paper on Tuesday, July 14."

NO APPENDICITIS, SAYS SIMMONS; IT'S JUST PAIN

Boston, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—Al Simmons, Detroit Tiger outfielder, took things easy today—all because of a "pain in his stomach." Simmons said a doctor in New York examined him yesterday after pain had caused appendicitis scares in the Tiger camp. "He said it was something like ptomaine poisoning and wasn't appendicitis," asserted Simmons tonight, "but I've still got the pain."

RADCLIFF DRIVES OUT 7 HITS; LATE RALLY BEATS PHILLIES

Dykes' Team Climbs Into Fifth Place.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 18.—The marauding White Sox went on the loose again today. They bowled over the Athletics 7 to 4, for their fifth consecutive triumph in the first half of a double header. Not satisfied with that, they put on a real manhandling exhibition in the second while parading to their sixth straight and to fifth place by a score of 21 to 14. And, in the course of the big parade, Raymond [Rip] Radcliff elbowed his way into the league batting leadership.

The midget White Sox fly chaser blossomed forth as the league's choicest hitter for the time being by exploding six hits in seven attempts in the second battle, after being held to one safety in five appearances during the initial struggle. This powerful demonstration at bat sent Radcliff's season's average soaring from .375 to 383. Meanwhile, Yankee Lou Gehrig, the ousted pace setter, dropped from .377 to .375 as the result of his day's labors at New York.

It's Rip's Big Day.

Radcliff's lone single in the first battle didn't figure in the run production. Neither did a single with which he opened the second game. But he doubled and scored in the second inning of this affair. He rolled into a forceout in the fourth, but in the fifth singled as part of a wild seven run blast that put the Sox ahead for keeps. In the sixth he singled again, driving in two runs. He singled in the eighth to drive in another. And in the ninth he touched off his second two bagger which helped in the scoring of four more. All this happened against four Mack pitchers, none of whom deserves mention.

Lyons Manages to Last.

The first battle was a comparatively tame affair, in which old Ted Lyons managed to stick despite the heat and menacing bats. His mates gave him a three run lead on a cleanup double by Luke Appling off Harry Kelley in the opening inning. They gave him three more off the same fellow in the third and one more in the ninth. Meanwhile Lyons found all his trouble in home run balls. The Macks scored all their runs on three whacks out of the park.

The Sox started the second game just as they started the first. They opened with three runs, but the Macks countered with three off the usually sterling John Whitehead. John was put back into the lead, but couldn't hang on. The Macks thumped him for three more in the fourth, going ahead 6 to 5.

Brown Relieves Whitehead.

Then the Sox bubbled up with their seven run fifth which crushed both Lee Ross, the starter and Rescuer Randall Gumpert. The Macks went after Whitehead again in the home fifth, so Clint Brown came into the picture to get credit for the victory, despite a six run assault against him in the ninth.

FIRST GAME

Kelley fanned three men in the opening inning of the first game, but the shower of strikes didn't prevent the Sox from stepping off to a three run lead. Radcliff was the first strike victim. Rosenthal and Haas slapped singles into center and a pass to Bonura filled the bases. The three runners didn't have long to wait before being dispatched on their way. They went home on Appling's cleanup double which lined into left center. M. Hayes then fanned, Dykes scratched a hit to Kelley and Sewell fanned.

The three run assault on Kelley in the third also began after one was out. Bonura survived on a wide throw by Higgins and went to third when Appling singled through short on a hit and run. M. Hayes popped out, but Dykes singled and Bonura scored. Sewell also singled and Appling scored. Lyons singled and Dykes crossed the plate to round out a 6 to 0 lead for Lyons. Radcliff closed the inning with a bounder to Higgins.

Puccinelli Hits Homer.

Haas' one handed stab of a liner in the third, when two of the Macks hit safely, was a tip off that made the three run attack on Lyons in the fourth less of a surprise. Puccinelli led off with a home run into the second story of the left field bleachers. Bonura went a long way to capture Higgins' pop foul, but a moment later dropped a perfect throw from Dykes on Johnson's roller, then F. Hayes sailed his homer into the left field seats. The next two fellows were easy.

After his wobbly fourth, Lyons staggered along in the heat and dodged mishap until Puccinelli blew open the eighth with his second homer, this one landing on the roof in left field. The Sox returned the run to Lyons in the ninth. Rosenthal singled, Hayes sacrificed, and Bonura was safe on Newsome's wide throw. Rosenthal took third on the error and scored after Puccinelli had made a diving catch of Appling's liner. Lyons yielded one hit in the French Yields One Hit in Last Four Innings.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Cubs yesterday went back to the swatting technique as a means of keeping at the top of the National league standings. The switch, after they had made only four runs in three preceding days, worked out most happily, for the champs beat the Phillies, 8 to 6, after trailing 5 to 2.

Every one of the ten Cubs who participated in the contest made at least one hit except Roy Henshaw, the starting pitcher, and Roy contributed a sacrifice. He did not contribute a great deal of pitching in the five innings he worked, though he did depart with the Cubs ahead, 6 to 5, by virtue of a four run fifth inning Chicago splurge before his withdrawal became official. Larry French was the tenth member of the Chicago cast. He singled to drive in the last run of the game.

Homer Helps French.

French was the winning pitcher, earning his ninth victory of the year on excellent relief pitching and for the technical reason that the only hit made off him in the last four innings, Chuck Klein's No. 15 homer in the seventh, tied the score and made it Larry's game to win or lose. Without the Klein homer Henshaw would have been the winning pitcher.

All the Cubs runs were earned and sound hitting was a factor in the scoring in each of the three productive innings. In the first singles by Stan Hack, Bill Herman, and Augie Galan supplied the power in the accumulation of two runs; in the fifth inning rally, success was achieved on singles by Galan and Ken O'Dea, a double by Frankie Demaree and a single by Tuck Stainback, which drove in the tying run and the marker that put the Cubs in front. The winning flurry in the seventh got its impetus from an unintentional pass to O'Dea and an intentional one to Cavarretta, but the two runs were driven across on singles by Bill Jurges and French.

End Home Stay Today.

The victory was the ninth in twelve games the Cubs have played to date in the home stand which ends with this afternoon's double-header against the Phils. They have lost three, one each to their three eastern visitors before the Phils arrived. It also was their eighth victory of the season over the Phillies in ten games played this season.

Henshaw's wildness and a single by Atwood got the Phillies off to a one run start in the first inning. Sulik walked on four pitches, after which Moore fouled to Hack and Klein fanned. Camilli walked, then Atwood dropped a single in front of Galan, Sulik scoring and Camilli stopping at second. Chiozza was called out on strikes.

The Phils' lead did not survive the first inning. Hack opened the Chicago offensive with a single to left and stopped at second when Herman singled to the same terrain. Galan singled to right center, Hack scoring and Herman taking third. O'Dea fanned but Herman scored while Demaree was forcing Galan. Stainback grounded to Norris.

Phils Get Frisky.

Norris opened the second with a single to left, then Gomez bunted to Henshaw, who threw the ball to the boxes, Norris reaching third and Gomez stopping at first. Kowalik hit into a double play, started by Jurges, scoring the tying run. Sulik flied to Galan.

The third inning got under way with Moore's single to left. Klein singled to right, Moore stopping at second. Camilli bunted to Cavarretta, who couldn't make up his mind where to throw the ball until Camilli had reached first, filling the bases. Atwood forced Camilli, Moore scoring and Klein stopping at third. Chiozza popped to Herman, then Atwood reached second on a passed ball. Norris walked, again filling the bases. Gomez singled to center, scoring Klein, but Atwood was out at the plate, Galan to O'Dea.

The Phils rang up their fifth run after two were out in the fifth. Atwood walked with one out, reached second on an out and scored when Norris' high bouncer got away from Jurges for a single.

Klein Biffs One.

Hack walked on four pitches at the start of the Chicago fifth and was forced by Herman. Galan singled to right, Herman reaching third. O'Dea singled to right, Herman scoring and Galan taking third. Demaree doubled over third, Galan scoring and O'Dea stopping at third. Kowalik was replaced by Jorgens. Stainback singled to left, O'Dea and Demaree scoring to put the Cubs ahead. Jorgens then tossed out Cavarretta and Jurges.

Klein's score tying No. 15 homer which led off the seventh was a nice hard shot that landed halfway up in the right field bleachers. Camilli was called out on strikes, Atwood grounded to Herman, and Chiozza popped to Jurges.

O'Dea walked to get the home

NEW YORK C. Y. A. BOXERS HOPE TO BREAK TRADITION

Seek to Whip C.Y.O. Hosts in Home Ring.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

New York's Catholic Youth association hopes to set a record Wednesday night at Soldiers' field for amateur boxing. The boys from Manhattan, as they finish their training today and tomorrow on the Palmer House rooftop gymnasium, vision a victory over Chicago's Catholic Youth organization.

The visiting team in the New York-Chicago rivalry never has scored a triumph. Last year the C. Y. O. whipped its Catholic counterpart from New York, 10 to 6. This single victory wouldn't exactly be a criterion, but the same rule has been observed during the nine years of intercity Golden Gloves battles.

In 1928 New York's Golden Gloves team inaugurated this oldest amateur rivalry with an 8 to 8 draw with Chicago at the Coliseum. From then until last March, when THE TRIBUNE'S team tied New York in Madison Square Garden, the hosts always have been superior to the visitors.

This May Be the Year.

This may be the year for an upset. Without offering an alibi, it is a fact that the Chicago Catholic Youth team has lost three of its champions for this series. Johnny Brown, 118 pounds; Andy Scrivani, 135 pounds, and Chester Rutecki, 147 pounds, now are on the Atlantic speeding toward Germany where they will seek international honors in the Olympic games.

Coach Paddy Kane has excellent replacements, but quite obviously, the C. Y. O. team will be weakened. Then, too, New York is reported to be better than the squad which lost here last July. It is almost a completely new team, for only three boys have returned. It is fast and, unless George Coyle, Golden Gloves and C. Y. O. star, is asked to make the bantamweight limit, there will be no weight difficulties. The middleweights, for instance, Charles Aiden and Frank Murphy, now weigh at least four pounds under the 160 pound limit. Even the heavyweights, Sal Lapera and Bill Pavlovich, are only about 10 pounds over the 175 pound limit for light heavyweights. This may not be an advantage, but it does make for a speedier team.

Coyle May Fight at 118 Pounds.

Word is expected tomorrow whether Willie Tweedie, New York featherweight champion, will be here or not for the tournament. If Tweedie is available, he will fight Chicago's No. 1 bantamweight, and Val McGovern will be in the second position. Otherwise, Coyle will be asked to make 118 pounds and box in the championship spot. If Tweedie is here, Coyle will fight Chicago's 126 pound champion, and either Billy Taylor, who has won his last seven bouts, or Bernie Miller, will be the runnerup.

Flyweight—Benny Valles or Johnny Healey.

Featherweight—Georgie Coyle [1] and Billy Taylor or Bernie Miller.

The Chicago team will be named tomorrow, although the designation of champion or runnerup may not be known until twenty-four hours before the bouts.

Hold Third Reception Tonight.

Tonight at Ogden park, 65th street and Racine avenue, Chicago's south side boxing fans will have an opportunity to greet the visiting team in the third and last of the civic receptions.

The first of the 16 fights Wednesday night will start at 8:30 o'clock. Prior to this a program of community singing and fireworks has been arranged. Last year 32,000 saw the first intercity Catholic Youth tournament, and officials are hopeful that this record will be surpassed. The proceeds will be used for the C. Y. O. milk fund which supplies 35,000 children. Tickets for the bouts are $2.20, $1.10 and 50 cents.

30 AUTO DRIVERS TO RACE TONIGHT AT RIVERVIEW

Five cities are represented among thirty drivers who will compete tonight at Riverview speedway, Addison street, near Western avenue, in the second half of the competition for the outdoor championship of the Midwest Auto Racing association.

Chicago pilots entered are Jimmy Snyder, 1936 indoor champion; Wally Zale, Shorty Sorenson, Paul Russo, Ted Tetterton, Carl Petersen, Chuck Niesel, Emil Andres, Ray Richards, and Ted Johnson. Out of town entrants include Harold Shaw of Indianapolis, Karl Hattel of Los Angeles, Johnny Sawyer and Ralph McDaniels of Milwaukee, and Art Hartsfeld of Toledo.

Snyder, who has been gaining rapidly in the point standing, will attempt to set a new track record. The present mark is held by Harry MacQuinn at 15.77 seconds. The fifth of a mile oval has been resurfaced, and several tons of salt have been added. The idea of mixing salt with clay as a track dressing was taken from the salt flats of Utah, where Capt. George Eyston of England has been electrifying the world during the last two weeks with record performances.

The feature event tonight will be at thirty laps. Other events are three elimination races, a ten lap handicap, an intercity team contest, and an eight lap poularity race.

Time trials are set for 6:30 o'clock, and the first race will start at 8:30.

THEY'LL BE READY FOR NEW YORK

This sort of road work over the fields is certain to put these members of the Catholic Youth organization boxing squad in shape for their important intercity bouts Wednesday night at Soldiers' field against the Catholic Youth association battlers from New York. The Chicago boxers have been putting in their final training sessions at their Lockport, Ill., camp and promise to be ready for whatever the New Yorkers have to offer. Boys in the picture are, left to right: Eddie Garvey, Sammy Zaczek, Johnny Noto, Frank La Porta, Al Noto, Frank Kainrath, Chris Schuessler, and Phil Kenneally.

Savior Canadeo, flashy little C. Y. O. lightweight, who hopes to earn a place on the squad which meets the New York C. Y. A. Wednesday night, is smiling broadly here. He is carrying a milk can, but rest assured, said container is empty, hence the smile. However, after the Soldiers' field bouts many milk cans full of milk will be made available to the 35,000 children in the C. Y. O. vacation schools. Proceeds of the show will be devoted to that worthy purpose.

Apogee Wins Lassie Stakes in Stretch Run

eye. Jewell Dorsett was all done. Apogee dashed on past her and was slowly drawing away from then until the line of finish.

The only one of the other starters who made up ground in the stretch was Odessa Girl, the Detroit filly ridden by Joe Renick. She came with speed in the final furlong to take down third money. Devils Pace finished fourth and tired Drawbridge was fifth. Last i nthe field was Idyllic which started out on her mission so gallantly.

Headley Receives $21,020.

Owner Headley's share of the purse was $21,020. Jewell Dorsett earned $5,000 for John Theall, the Louisiana turf man who owns her. Three thousand dollars was picked up for her owners by Oddesa Girl, and there was a $1,000 prize for Devil's Pace who finished fourth.

From the very beginning Apogee was the favorite. Her fine performance in the Hyde Park stakes a week ago had won her the stout backing. Over the muddy track she galloped the 6 furlongs in 1:13 1-5. The early pace was indeed fast for Jewell Dorsett ran the first half mile in :46 2-5.

Jocky Earl Steffen was in the saddle on Apogee and he rode the daughter of Pharamond II.-Summit with great confidence. The crowd had thought she was soundly beaten when Jewell Dorsett outfooted her into the last bend and was three lengths in front. Steffen didn't. He waited until he had the Headley color bearer straightened out for the run to the finish line before he made his move with her.

She Needs No Punishment.

He didn't have to punish her to make her go on to her sensational victory. He simply loosened the reins. Apogee bounded forward like a great champion. She did it with such determination that it was evident then and there that no other filly in this fashionable field could possibly finish in front of her.

Floradora packing 102 pounds, carried Dale Shaffer's silks to victory in the Blackstone purse in much the same manner although she widened out her lead near the finish line to three lengths.

Throughout the early stages of the mile and a furlong struggle Mr. Bones and Warren Wright's Count Morse ran as a team only inches apart. For a furlong Count Morse's nose was in front. The next furlong found Mr. Bones with his nose in front. So it went until the stretch battle started.

Count Morse Falters First.

They ran each other into exhaustion. Count Morse dropped back first. When he faltered Mr. Bones for an instant appeared to be the winner. He didn't have enough left to withstand the great challenge Floradora offered.

Floradora has looked the true part of a great router in her two most recent races. She is a stretch runner deluxe. She flew past Mr. Bones as if he had been standing still. From there on home she pulled away from her soundly beaten Classic rivals. She ran the mile and an eighth in 1:51 3-5 and was a long shot in the betting. She paid $25.20 for a $2 ticket. Mr. Bones saved second money. Isolater, a stablemate of Granville, finished third.

HELEN MOODY TO PLAY IN EASTERN TENNIS TOURNEY

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and the entire United States Davis cup team will play in the Eastern grass courts tennis tournament at the Westchester Country club, Rye, N. Y., on Aug. 10, Maskell Fox, president of the Eastern Lawn Tennis association, said today.

Wilmer Allison and Gene Mako are expected to participate in the doubles, but Donald Budge and Bryan Grant have entered for both singles and doubles.

IMA COUNT, having good speed from the start, bore out slightly on the turn, stood mild pressure gamely when straight in the stretch and wearing down VERY WISE drew out fast in the closing strides. Latter took command easily, saved ground after the opening quarter, and held on well to the final sixteenth, where he weakened. BAL ELE, on inside throughout, could not improve his position.

... strong urging when unable to outrun JEWELL DORSETT, and holding on well, overtook latter in last sixteenth and won drawing clear. JEWELL DORSETT displayed keen speed from the start, maintained it smartly for five-eighths, then weakened badly, but held others safe. ODDESA GIRL, under vigorous riding from the start, lost ground on stretch turn, then went to inside and held on with courage.

Time, :23, :46 3-5, 1:13 1-5. Two dollar mutuels paid: Billy Bee, $7.40 straight, $4.00 place, $3.20 show; Top Dog, $6.40 place, $4.00 show; Nellie Flag, $4.80 show. Winner trained by R. E. Potts. Went to post at 5:41. At post 1½ minutes. Start good. Won handily, place driving.

BILLY BEE, well up from the start, rushed into a long lead when getting through on inside on the turn, was strongly shaken up in the stretch, and appeared to have little left. TOP DOG began to move up approaching the stretch, came through on inside when passing FRAIDY CAT and RECOVERY, and outgamed NELLIE FLAG in the final eighth. Latter, also saving much ground, moved up boldly soon after reaching the final quarter, and held on fairly well, though failing to withstand TOP DOG.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and one-sixteenth. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

Time, 1:46 1-5. [Turf]. Two dollar mutuels paid: Jokester, $41.20 straight, $12.60 place, $6.60 show; Dark Woman, $3.80 place, $3.20 show; Our Reigh, $5.80 show. Winner trained by J. J. O'Bryne. Went to post at 6:12. At post ½ minute. Start good. Won driving, place same.

JOKESTER, under mild reserve for half a mile, gained steadily when urged, was given a breathing spell approaching the stretch, responded gamely to hard riding and was up to win in the final strides. DARK WOMAN, rushed to the front early, set the pace under mild reserve, offered good contention, but could not resist the winner. OUR REIGH, slow to attain his best stride, closed with determination in the final stages.

17,000 WATCH MOVIE STARS PLAY BASEBALL

Los Angeles, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—Seventeen thousand howled themselves hoarse and the game of baseball took an awful beating today when Hollywood movie stars staged their annual charity game.

Lined up as the comedians and the leading men, the game started off with a riot when the fun-makers stormed into the park on wheelchairs, crutches, wheelbarrows, and a police patrol wagon.

The heroes, all dark and handsome, put Walter Abel on the mound to start. By the end of the second inning, one hour later, the comedians had used up four pitchers and still were going strong.

Jack Benny, with a cigar in his mouth, managed to reach first base on a walk. There George Jessel and Benny Baker served him with beer and sandwiches—and Benny almost collapsed on a race around the bases when Vic Orsatti slammed a home run inside the park.

Leo Carillo, from the microphone, requested Warner Baxter in the stands to arise—and 1,000 men obliged.

Lamon M. E. Defeats Central Baptists, 6 to 5

Lamon M. E. defeated Central Avenue Baptist, 6 to 5, yesterday and retained its one game lead over St. Stephens Evangelical in the Church A. A. of Chicago Baseball league. In the last half of the ninth inning George Verbers' hit drove in the deciding runs.

St. Stephens Evangelical won, 10 to 5, from Trinity Evangelical Luthern in another league game.

Given Wrong Ticket; Wins $8,600 on Bet

M. L. Emerick, Chicago banker, is thanking his lucky stars that one of the betting clerks at Arlington made a mistake when he bought $200 worth of tickets in the sixth race on Friday. He asked for four $50 tickets on No. 8. The clerk made a mistake and gave him the $200 worth of tickets on No. 9. While the banker and the clerk were wrangling about the mistake the race was run. No. 9 won and Mr. Emerick collected more than $8,600.

The old theory that folks don't bet on 2 year old races was shattered yesterday. A total of $65,675 was wagered on the Lassie stakes. The total wagering for the afternoon was $466,326. More money was wagered on the Lassie than any other race on the program.

The gayest parties of the Arlington racing season were given in the Post and Paddock club yesterday.

Attracting great attention on the lower veranda was the table presided over by the two elder sons of the John E. Hugheses—John Jr. and Mansfield, and at which the subdebs were Rose and Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, Mary Bryan, and Miss Nancy Iselin of Middleburg, Va. Naturally they concentrated on the fortunes of the Hughes horse, Idyllic.

Hal Price Headley's Whopper, one of the leading cup horses of the country, was "resting easily" yesterday after an emergency operation on Friday night in which three large gall stones were removed from his bladder. Three veterinarians who conducted the operation were of the opinion that the big horse would not live through the night if the operation was not performed and permission was secured by Headley from insurance officials to proceed in a last attempt to save the horse.

"Whopper, though very sick, came through the operation better than we expected and I look for a quick recovery," said Headley yesterday. "Only a horse of Whopper's great physical conformation and gameness could have survived, the vets told me."

Three prominent members of the American jocky colony made their seasonal debut at Arlington Park today. Apprentice Ira [Babe] Hanford, who rode Bold Venture to win the Kentucky Derby, rode the Wheatley stable's Devil's Pace in the Lassie stakes; Jocky Johnny Gilbert was up on Mr. Bones in the Blackstone and The Queen in the Lassie; Jocky Johnny Longden piloted Jewell Dorsett in the Lassie and Knave in the third race. Hanford and Gilbert came from New York and Longden from Suffolk Downs.

Chicago Faces Heavy Boxing, Mat Schedule

The heaviest boxing and wrestling schedule during the Chicago outdoor season will be held this week. Fight shows include those at Marigold gardens tomorrow, Western stadium Tuesday, and Northwest stadium Wednesday. Mat bouts will be held at Mills stadium and White City tomorrow, and Arcadia gardens Wednesday.

Pal Silvers, veteran Brooklyn, N. Y., boxer, will attempt to halt the comeback campaign of Leo Lomski of Aberdeen, Wash., in an eight round headliner at the Marigold arena. Silvers knocked out Mike Mitchell, Bellaire, O., in three rounds in the Chicago stadium's heavyweight tournament March 13. Lomski has won four battles and fought a draw in five starts.

Bouts on this week's boxing and wrestling schedule include:

TOMORROW.

AT MILLS STADIUM—Vincent Lopez vs. George Calza, one fall, 90 minute time limit; Sam Cordovano vs. Marshall Blackstock, Eddie Newman vs. Bobby Bruns, Fred Grobmier vs. Jack Thomas, each one fall of 30 minutes; Whitey Hewitt vs. Sun Jennings, one fall of 20 minutes; all heavyweights [wrestling].

AT MARIGOLD GARDENS—Leo Lomski vs. Pal Silvers, [8], heavyweights; Bus Breese vs. Carl Fasnaugh, [6], Junior welterweights; Pete Lello vs. Hank Melody, Danny Villario vs. Nick Peters, and Ritchie Howell vs. Sonny Batson, each four rounds.

TUESDAY.

AT WESTERN STADIUM—Al Nettlow vs. Benny Barrish, [8], junior welterweights; Gene Higgins vs. George Dungey, [5], welterweights; Sammy Verse vs. Eddie Moran, Tuffy Breese vs. Jimmy Mitchell, and Cowboy Logan vs. Rolla Taylor, each 4 rounds.

AT LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Sonny Valdez vs. Toby Vigil, [10], lightweights.

WEDNESDAY.

AT NORTHWEST STADIUM—Tommy Freeman vs. Johnny Phagan, [10], middleweights; Steve Roberts vs. John Brown, light heavyweights, and Mickey O'Shea vs. Ken Murray, welterweights, each five rounds; Eddie Callahan vs. Joey Mandell, and Bobby Juhrend vs. Bob Crowley, each four rounds.

AT SOLDIERS' FIELD—Sixteen intercity amateur boxing matches.

AT ARCADIA GARDENS—Ali Baba vs. Zack Malkov [wrestling].

Homewood Course Opens Meeting Aug. 3.

Encouraged by the response to their stakes which closed last Wednesday, officials of the Washington Park Jocky club have plunged into preparation for the opening of their 31-day meeting August 3.

Most of the major stables now racing at Arlington Park will move over to the Homewood course. Thus, promise is held of the continuance of the high standard of sport established at Arlington.

"Horsemen from prominent eastern and western stables were very liberal in their stake nominations, and worthy horses will race for the seven events totaling $40,000 in added money during our 31 days," Walter L. Gregory, president of Washington park, said.

$10,000 Race Heads Stakes.

Heading the stake offerings at the Homewood meeting is the $10,000 Washington park handicap, for 3-year-olds and upward at a mile and a quarter, to be run Labor day. When the mailed entries are all in, it is expected at least 25 of the best cup horses will be named for the race.

Other stakes which closed were: For 2-year-olds—the $5,000 Prairie stakes to be run Aug. 15, and the Washington Park Juvenile stakes, Sept. 15, both at six furlongs; for 3-year-olds, the $7,500 Sheridan handicap Aug. 22; and for 3-year-olds and upward, the $2,500 Chicago handicop on opening day, and the $5,000 Great Western handicap, Aug. 29.

Not less than $8,000 per day will be distributed for overnight events during the 31 days at Washington park. A $2,000 added supporting feature will be offered each Saturday a stake for 2-year-olds is scheduled; a $1,500 race will feature each Wednesday's card, and two $1,200 overnight races will be offered daily.

Will Revice Old Glories.

Revival of the old glories of Washington park will color the meeting. The Washington park tradition runs back into the early years of organized racing in America, for the tradition was inaugurated in 1884. Running throughout the month of August and ending Labor day, Washington park's meeting will fit in the best weeks of the summer vacation period.

An important innovation is the adoption of the Eye in the Sky, the famous picture finish invention of Harry I. Day. This device costs $300 per day to operate, and has been used with striking success at Arlington park, Santa Anita and Narragansett park.

Another feature of the Washington park meeting will be the operation of the giant electric totalizer, the most modern wagering robot in the world. This machine now is being overhauled and will be ready for final tests soon.

Clang Wins Empire Stake in Nose Finish

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Clang, world record holder for six furlongs from John F. Clark Jr.'s one horse stable, today scored his second straight stake victory when he took a photo finish decision in the mile and a sixteenth of the twenty-eighth Yonkers handicap at Empire City.

The 4 year old son of Stimulus stepped the distance in 1:45 1-5, three-fifths of a second off the track record, in accounting for his success over a distance of ground. At the finish Eddie Litzenberger had the Clark gelding a nose in front of Mrs. William Ziegler's Esposa, with G. D. Widener's Chicstraw a half length behind in the field of seven.

Clang Pays 9 to 2.

Clang, freshened up after a month's rest since beating Sation in the Carter handicap at Aqueduct, carried top weight of 120 pounds, but handled it well in winning the purse of $5,525 and paying his backers 9 to 2.

The race took on an entirely different aspect when Good Gamble, winner of the Butler handicap and queen the A. G. Vanderbilt stable, was scratched, leaving only Scotch Bun and Good Harvest to represent the young sportsman. Trainer J. H. Stotler explained the filly was being saved for the $25,000 Massachusetts handicap at Suffolk Downs Wednesday, in which she will accompany Discovery to the post. Clang also is slated for the rich Suffolk race.

Vicaress Takes Early Lead.

With Good Gamble out, William Woodward's Vicaress was made the choice at 16 to 5 in an open betting affair. The 4 year old daughter of Flying Ebony flattered her many backers by setting the pace in the home stretch. Then she weakened and finished fifth, showing the way home only to the Vanderbilt pair.

Clang and Esposa took turns at forcing the pace. When Vicaress called quits they stepped to the front and, joined by the fast stepping Chicstraw, engaged in a thrilling stretch battle. Litzenberger put up a great ride, however, to get Clang home in front.

SUPPLY HOUSE WINS

Boston, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—Uncorking the same burst of speed that marked his maiden race, Percy M. Pike's Supply House today gained his second victory in two starts in the Faneuil Hall, today's five and a half furlong feature at Suffolk Downs.

This Display colt had to come from behind and turn the sprint distance in the track record smashing time of 1:05.2 to overhaul the Windsor farm's Double Scotch and Willow Bud in the stretch drive.

Double Scotch was a half length behind the winner and that much in front of Willow Bud.

THOMAS EXPECTS MOST THRILLING ALL-STAR GAME

Coach of '35 Squad Looks for Wide Open Play.

[This is the first of two articles by Frank Thomas of the University of Alabama, head coach of the 1935 All-Star football team, concerning prospects for this year's battle between the All-Americans and the Detroit Lions at Soldiers' Field, Sept. 1.]

BY FRANK THOMAS.

The All-Star game this year should be the most thrilling in the series inaugurated by THE TRIBUNE. There are two obvious reasons.

In the first place, the university squad will be better balanced, particularly in the backfield. Secondly, the Detroit Lions, depending more on speed, passing, and open play, will furnish thrills that the Chicago Bears, depending primarily on sheer strength through the line, could not offer. A wide run, even if it does not gain much ground, permits the crowd to see what is happening. The ball carrier, smashing between the tackles, is obscured by the pileup of his own blockers and the concentration of the defense.

I do not want to detract from last year's game. The All-Stars played superbly, as statistics of the first half indicate. And, of course, the fact remains that the Bears were a mighty fine team, for they won the game, 5 to 0.

Rain Stops Offensive Drives.

But the rain in the last half bogged down the offenses of both teams. Sustained drive was impossible and each eleven played for the breaks. The rain also upset our plans in the second half and we were forced to keep our heaviest backs in the game, when we had anticipated letting such fleet runners as Cotton Warburton and Buzz Borries show their heels to the pros.

Incidentally, I'd like to say right now that THE TRIBUNE's plan to have the eleven winners in the national poll start the game against Detroit is a fitting cap stone to the idea which has been built into an annual football feature. I believe the fans will vote more carefully. They will consider the balance of the team, and I also believe that if eleven boys know from the day they report for training that they will open play and stay on the field as long as they produce, it will heighten morale.

Team spirit last year was splendid. I'll always regret that illness kept me from the first week of practice, but Charley Bachman, Dr. Spears, and Slip Madigan accomplished wonders whipping the squad into shape, while I was forced to stay in a hospital bed.

College Goal Uncrossed.

Actually, I was surprised how seriously all our players took the game. At no time did we have any difficulty getting the boys to try plays or to train. The fellows were highly appreciative of the honors conferred on them and they gave their best. I'm sorry they didn't win, but at least they continued the record started the year before by keeping the Bears from crossing the college goal line.

That the Bears didn't cross our goal line was a distinct tribute to the smashing play of the line, supported by such backs as Al Nichelini, Bill Shepherd, and Stan Kostka. Up until the time a fumbled ball cost us a safety, we had a chance to tie the score at 3 to 3 by a place kick. The second half primarily was defensive football for both teams, with the Bears getting breaks because Beattie Feathers backed us down field by his long rolling kicks, which bounded away from our safety man.

All of us, coaches and players, were disappointed when we didn't win. Nevertheless, the game always will stand out in memory as a thrill of a lifetime. Superbly staged, with all the fanfare of any university battle, and decided before a throng of nearly 80,000, which jammed the high slopes of Soldiers' field and overflowed to the sides of the gridiron, the game always will be remembered.

I certainly hope the university players can whip the Lions this year. I believe their task will be a bit more difficult, but I have high hopes for a squad which undoubtedly will have in its personnel veterans from such great elevens as Princeton, Stanford, Southern Methodist, Notre Dame, Ohio State, and Minnesota.

Keeps Choices Secret.

I don't know who will be chosen to coach this year's All-Star team, and I'm not divulging the names of the men for whom I expect to vote. But I wish them luck, and from my experiences last year I can assure them that if the last college graduating class is anything like the one before it, they will have wholehearted coöperation.

In my final article I'll try and be more technical and explain why this year's All-Star crop should develop into a splendidly balanced eleven, and why the Detroit Lions offer a greater obstacle to success than did the Bears.

NAVY ATHLETIC HEAD TO TAKE LEAVE, JOIN SHIP

Annapolis, Md., July 18.—(AP)—Commander John H. Brown Jr., U. S. N., graduate manager of athletics at the Naval academy, today turned his duties over to Lieutenant Commander Andrew C. McFall, U. S. N., commander of the seaplane squadron at the academy.

Commander Brown, who has been on duty in the department of physical training at the academy for three years, will go on a month's leave Monday. On Sept. 4 he will report aboard the cruiser Milwaukee, at San Pedro, Cal., for duty as executive officer.

Commander McFall will take over the duties of graduate manager in addition to his regular aviation assignment. The squadron now is being used for the instruction of the second [junior] class midshipmen studying aviation at the academy this summer.

FOUR GREAT BACKS—WHO'S YOUR CHOICE?

Dick Crayne, Iowa's mighty full back for the last three years, is running like wildfire in the nation-wide poll to select a full back for the College All-Stars in their game against the Detroit Lions Sept. 1 at Soldiers' field. Crayne, who can kick, pass, run, and tackle, practically is a unanimous choice in the state of Iowa.

Here's the leader of the College All-Star full backs today—Sheldon Beise, Minnesota's powerhouse. Beise, like Crayne, is popular all over the country, although his heaviest backing naturally comes from the north, where people are voting a straight Gopher ticket in thousands of cases.

Bill Shakespeare, Notre Dame half back, who with Jay Berwanger of Chicago is leading half backs in the nation-wide poll, stopped over in Chicago yesterday en route from New York to Hollywood, where he will appear in a motion picture based on a football story by Francis Wallace, also a Notre Dame alumnus.

DORADE BELIEVED YACHT WINNER TO HONOLULU

HONOLULU, July 18.—(AP)—The yawl Dorade, which won the trans-Atlantic yacht race in 1931 and the fastest races in England in 1931 and 1933, apparently held the advantage tonight as a possible winner in the California-Hawaii handicap.

Only five of the twenty-two yachts which left Santa Monica July 4 had been sighted or finished the race here at 10 a. m. [3:30 p. m. Chicago time] today.

The Dorade not only beat the other four on corrected time, having the largest handicap of any of the five, but also on elapsed time, being first to cross the finish line at Diamond Head, just one minute before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Her elapsed time was 13 days 7 hours 29 minutes for the more than 2,200 miles.

Sunday was set as the deadline for finishers.

The Dorade was purchased recently by James Flood of the St. Francis Yacht club, San Francisco.

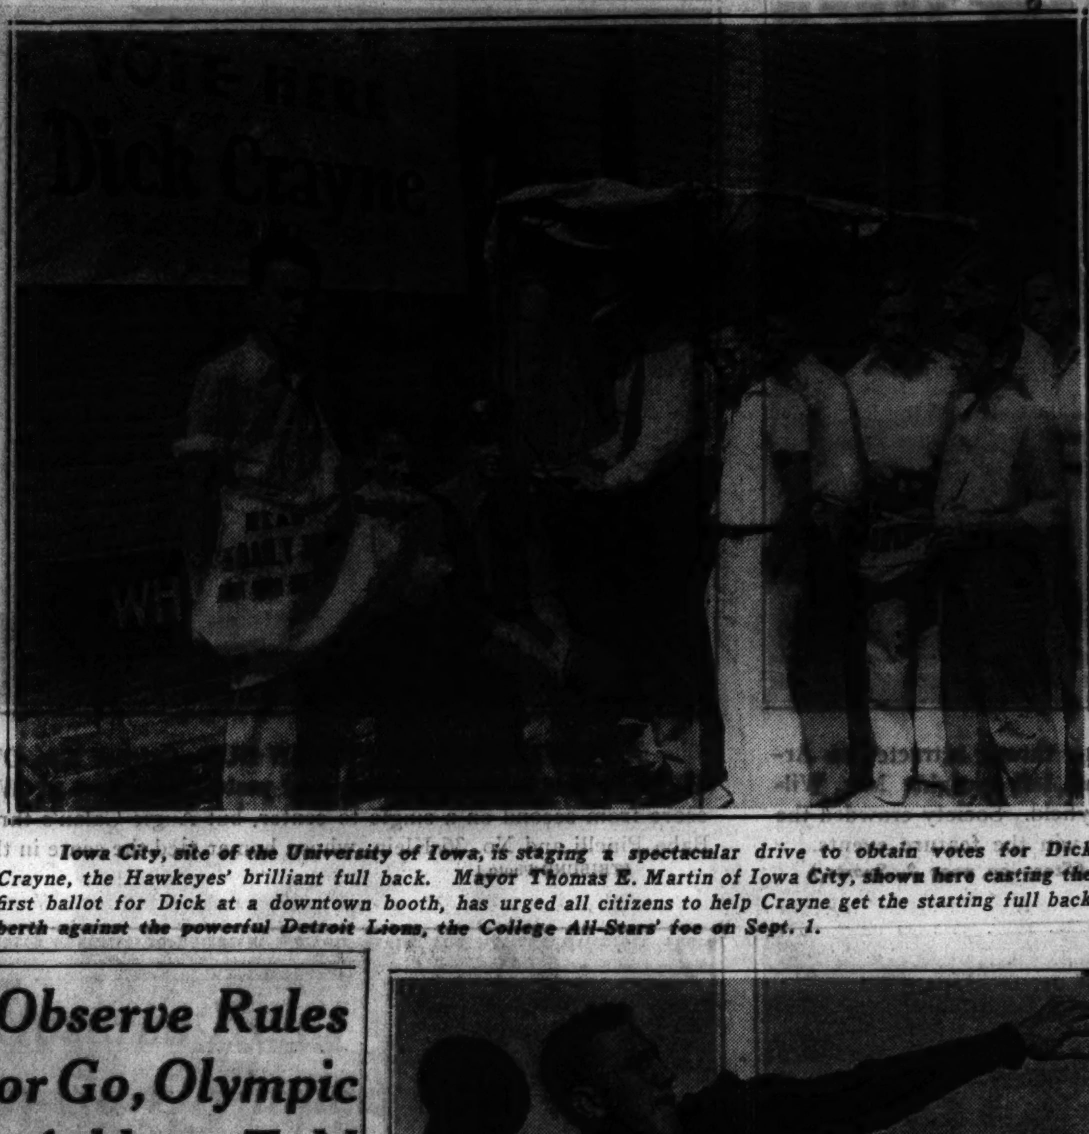
CALIFORNIANS MONOPOLIZE CLAY COURT NET FINALS

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Robert Riggs, 18 year old national clay courts tennis champion from Los Angeles, today scored a straight set victory over Don McNeill of Kenyon college to reach the final round of the eastern clay courts tournament at Jackson Heights. The scores were 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

In tomorrow's final Riggs will oppose another Californian, John Law of Pasadena, former Stanford player, who eliminated Wayne Sabin of Hollywood, Cal., clay court doubles champion with Riggs, and fifth seeded player, 7-5, 6-1, 8-6.

The doubles final also became an all-California affair when Sabin and Riggs outlasted Ernest Sutter of New Orleans and Ramsy Potts of Memphis, 4-6, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3, while Law and Gene Smith of the University of California downed Frank Bowden, New York, and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 3-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1.



Iowa City, site of the University of Iowa, is staging a spectacular drive to obtain votes for Dick Crayne, the Hawkeyes' brilliant full back. Mayor Thomas E. Martin of Iowa City, shown here casting the first ballot for Dick at a downtown booth, has urged all citizens to help Crayne get the starting full back berth against the powerful Detroit Lions, the College All-Stars' foe on Sept. 1.

Observe Rules or Go, Olympic Athletes Told

ABOARD S. S. MANHATTAN, July 18.—(AP)—Disciplinary problems among members of the American Olympic team which arose today when rain cut short the workouts drew a sharp warning from Avery Brundage that further unreasonable violations of the training rules would result in the dismissal of the offenders at the first port of call—Cobh, Ireland.

The American Olympic committee president delivered his ultimatum to the team after receiving reports of late hours, drinking and gambling among some of the athletes. Brundage stressed that there were only a few violators and that the majority were holding to the regulations and maintaining good discipline on the whole.

Managers Held Responsible.

The managers of three teams, the women's swimming, field hocky, and fencing, were charged specifically with the responsibility of enforcing stricter adherence to training rules.

"We are making all reasonable allowances," Brundage declared. "We are not prudish, nor do we have any objection to a glass of beer or smoking by athletes who know how to behave generally and not disrupt the team's morale and discipline. Now it's up to the members of the team to show they mean business."

Much official debate developed over the decision of the team salute to be used in the Olympic parade. It will take the form of the men lifting their hats, holding them in their right hand and extending the right arm forward parallel to the ground. The girls merely will extend their right arms forward.

It's Not Nazi Salute.

Officials denied the suggestion that it was a modified Nazi salute, explaining they desired a distinctive gesture as a part of the opening ceremonies.

It has not been decided who will have the honor of carrying the Stars and Stripes, except that the choice will be based on seniority, thus making James W. O'Conner, Venice, Cal., and Fred Lauer, Chicago, members of the water polo team, and Alfred A. Jochim, gymnast from Union City, N. J., eligible. They will be competing in their fourth Olympiad. The problem may be solved by naming two color guards.

BEATS BROTHER AT TENNIS.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 18.—[U. P.]—Wilbur Hess of Houston, Tex., defeated his brother, Jake, to win the men's singles championship of the state open tennis tournament here today. Scores were 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

Jay Berwanger, Chicago's triple threat back field star for the last three years, this morning is showing the way to half backs in the college All-Star poll. Jay has received 108,593 votes, almost two thousand more than the total for Bill Shakespeare.

BIG CARS WILL RACE TODAY AT LINCOLNWOOD

Big car racing will be held today at the Lincolnwood motor speedway, Lincoln and Devon avenues and McCormick boulevard. About thirty-five drivers will compete in the seven events carded. A forty lap affair tops the program, which will be held on a half mile track treated with oil to make it dustless.

Howard Cox, Gordon Chard, Tom Slattery, Fred Tegtmier, and Shorty Sorenson are among those entered. The program includes a series of qualifying time trials, three qualifying races of ten laps each, a fifteen lap handicap race with slow cars at the pole, a fifteen lap consolation race, and the forty lap feature. The time trials start at noon. The first race will get under way at 2:30 o'clock.

Shields to Quit Tennis; Movies Get Full Time

Hollywood, Cal., July 18.—(AP)—Francis X. Shields has discovered that it's no fun to start at the bottom in one field after having reached the top in another. Shields, former national tennis champion, is in the movies now.

"So, eventually, I'll have to quit tournament tennis altogether," he said today. "I've found you can't combine the two."

St. Joseph, Ill., July 18.—[Special.]—Bill McCarthy is the new coach at St. Joseph High school.

561,000 Vote in 1st Week of All-Star Poll

Lockport Supports Lindberg.

The Lockport, Ill., Business Men's association and high school alumni yesterday sent in more than 2,000 votes for Les Lindberg of Illinois. Milwaukee sent down 7,000 for Wally Cruice of Northwestern, who lives there, and Marvin Bell of Marquette, an end. Al Lind, Northwestern center, has been given amazing support in various points around the middle west. The Champaign-Urbana area is going all the way for Gryboski, Galbreath, and Lindberg of Illinois.

New York is rallying behind Shakespeare of Notre Dame, who comes from Staten Island. He now is polling more than two votes for every one Berwanger gets in the Herald-Tribune returns. Princeton players, notably Constable, full back; Lea, end; Weller, guard; Bliss, center, and Le Van, half back, are running well. So are Millner of Notre Dame, Smith of Minnesota, and Smith of Alabama.

The Minneapolis Journal forwarded 3,515 votes yesterday for a lineup that included Smith, Oech, Rennebohm, Seidel, Le Voir, Roscoe, and Beise of Minnesota, and Moscrip of Stanford, Pfefferle of Notre Dame, and Tangora of Northwestern.

Shakespeare is the leader among the half backs in the Indianapolis News voting. Pilney and Berwanger are running even. Millner is far in the lead at end, and Oech and Karcher, the latter of Ohio State, are the favorites at guard. The Burlington, Ia., Hawkeye-Gazette is adding heavily to the totals of Crayne of Iowa, Berwanger of Chicago, Wilson of Southern Methodist, Scherer of Nebraska, and Lester of Texas Christian. Fans voting through the Bay City, Mich., Times are giving a handsome vote to Renner of Michigan and Warmbein of Michigan State at half back.

Close Race in Kansas City.

The Kansas City Star finds Berwanger, Shakespeare, and Wilson running neck and neck at half back and Reynolds of Stanford the most popular tackle. Riley Smith of Alabama is a Kansas City favorite at quarter back. Players from Texas are rolling up a huge vote in the Dallas News poll. These include Spain, Orr, Wetsel, Wilson, and Shufford of Southern Methodist, which is located in Dallas, and Lester and Lawrence of Texas Christian. Berwanger is 17 to 1 ahead of Shakespeare in Dallas.

Nationally known players are heavy favorites with fans casting their ballots through the Philadelphia Record. The leaders at center are Lester of Texas Christian and Jones of Ohio State, at guards Michaels of Villanova and Tangora of Northwestern, at tackles Smith of Minnesota and Spain of Southern Methodist, at ends Millner of Notre Dame and Moscrip of Stanford, at full back Grayson of Stanford, at quarter back Smith of Alabama, who is running 5 to 1 ahead of Fromhart of Notre Dame, his closest rival, and at half back Bassman of Ursinus is running ahead of Shakespeare and Berwanger.

Iowa Stars Are Popular.

Crayne of Iowa added 3,900 votes yesterday through the Daily Iowan alone. Hoover and Richards of Iowa both are running ahead of Berwanger at half back, and Moscrip and Millner are about even at ends. The Detroit Free Press reports Beise the heavy favorite for full back. Berwanger is leading Shakespeare about 3 to 2 in the Detroit vote.

Ticket Sale for White Sox Feature Games Open Today

Harry Grabiner, vice president of the White Sox, announced yesterday that the ticket sale for the opening game with the Washington Senators Tuesday and the double-header with the Yankees next Sunday will open today at Comiskey park.

3,500 ATHLETES TO LIVE DE LUXE IN OLYMPIC CITY

Doeberitz Village Model of German Art.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DOEBERITZ, Germany, July 18—Tall pines and rolling lawns surround the homes of Olympic athletes of 1936. Sport de luxe, brought to the peak of modern perfection, will reduce every difficulty of training, resting, eating, playing, amusement and even banking and travel service to a minimum.

Situated about nine miles west of the Reich Sport field in wooded surroundings, this village will accommodate about 3,500 competitors in the games. As guests of the German army, the teams will be provided with every convenience. One hundred fifty houses with from 16 to 24 beds each, arranged two to a room, have been built into the picturesque forest landscape.

These houses are erected around a huge structure in which offices, kitchens [two for each nation], dining rooms, showers and cooks' quarters are combined. Each nation has its own entrance to its own dining room. Wide, sunny terraces adjoin the dining rooms and will form a part of them.

Training facilities are provided by a large field, flanked with a swimming tank of twenty-five meter length, covered with sliding glass walls and roof to be opened to clear skies, and a training hall with complete gymnasium equipment.

At the entrance, an administration building shields the grounds from the public and the highway and provides offices for the team captains, attaches and managers. It also houses postal, telephone, banking, travel and registration servies, a restaurant and a social hall for visitors and the press.

Greeks Shielded Athletes.

The ancient Greeks isolated their holy contestants weeks before the games to shield them from the contacts of everyday life in order to insure a more godly glory for the victorious.

Taking a page from this ancient book, Los Angeles erected in 1932 the first modern Olympic village. This initiated a new contest, taken up by Berlin this year, to provide bigger and better Olympic villages.

The third Reich will couch the games of 1936 in great style and luxury. On the site of an ancient Indo-Germanic [Aryan] meeting place of the stone age, the German army picked the ideal spot for the dorf [village]. Cut off from the public, the teams can train and rest at ease with every modern gadget near at hand.

Each team has been consulted and its special desire for accomodations complied with. Menus, training routines and rules have been given minute consideration in the completion of the camp. In this land of technical perfection nothing has been left undone to meet the athletes wishes.

Public Pays to See.

For weeks now the public has been streaming through its entrance arch, paying 50 pfennigs, or 20 cents, a head to see this newest of wonders. Its completeness, its setting and its function have lighted the imaginations of hundreds of thousands eager to see for themselves how the third Reich will provide for sports, how it will entertain the heroes of the nations and, lastly, how it will accommodate its own new army.

For the perfection of this village will not be destroyed after the games nor left to waste away in the years until another Olympic contest might bring it back to life. It will never be a ghost village, for when the nations desert it late in August it will become a new army cadet training school, having already been built on army land with army minds, standards and funds.

JAPANESE SWIMMERS FAST

BERLIN, July 18.—(AP)—Japan's swimmers picked the hottest day of Berlin's summer to invade the recently completed Olympic pool and practically set it on fire today. Experts who watched the stars of the large Nipponese squad rip through the water in near world record time or better were almost ready to concede them again the supremacy they established at Los Angeles four years ago.

Timed by trainers and coaches, Shigeo Arai flashed through the 100 meters in 56.6 seconds, two-tenths of a second under Peter Fick's listed world mark.

Shumpei Udo did the 400 meters in 4:42.8 for the 50 meter pool, which the Japanese considered better than Jack Medica's record of 4:38.7, made in a 25 yard tank. Hamuro swam the 200 meter breast stroke in 2:42, six-tenths of a second under the listed world record.

Masoji, who won the 100 meter back stroke at Los Angeles, was timed in 1:07.6, a second under his winning time in 1932. Times made by other members of the squad were almost as impressive.

$1,850 ADDED TO FUND

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—The Olympic fund was swelled by another $1,850 today, according to an announcement by Asa Bushnell, assistant treasurer of the American Olympic committee, who is remaining behind to straighten out as much of the financial muddle as possible.

With the $2,500 received Thursday, Bushnell has collected $4,350 since the departure of the team Wednesday. Most of the contributions have been small. Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer, set a goal of $100,000 before he departed.

Bushnell revealed that the canoeing squad of ten and its two officials, the only American Olympic party which has not yet sailed, is within a few dollars of its budget of $2,700. The canoeists will sail on the United States liner President Harding next Wednesday.

TRIBUNE SWIM MOVES TODAY TO WHEALAN POOL

22 Boys and Girls Are Now Qualified.

Competition in THE TRIBUNE'S seventh annual 100 yard swimming races will shift this afternoon to Whealan pool, Milwaukee and Devon avenues. All contestants registered for the trials must report for registration at 1 o'clock. The first race will start at 2 o'clock.

Yesterday the first of the sectional trials was held at Cermak pool and 22 boys and girls qualified for the championships which will be held next Sunday at the Lincoln park lagoon. Betty Betz of the Lake Shore A. C. and Harold Long Jr. of Kenosha, Wis., were among the list of stars who proved they must be considered in any discussion of this year's list of champions. Long swam the course, with two turns, in 57 seconds, the fastest race of the trials.

Qualifiers at Cermak.

CLASS A—BOYS.
Robert Thezan, Jackson Park Natatorium.
Phillip Welch, Kewanee, Ill.
Irving France, J. P. I.

CLASS B—BOYS.
Laverne Reimer, Joliet, Ill. Y. M. C. A.
Ned Sheehy, Michigan City, Ind.
Clifford Rademaker, Columbus park.

CLASS C—BOYS.
James Meany, Cermak pool.
Robert Janacek, Morton H. S.
Eugene Sonnenberg, Medinah A. C.

CLASS D—BOYS.
Harold E. Long Jr., Kenosha, Wis.
Emery R. Walker Jr., Oak Park, Ill.

CLASS E—BOYS.
John I. McKenzie, Forest Park, Ill.
Herbert Levy, 922 Eastwood avenue.
John Somowski, Jackson Natatorium.

CLASS A—GIRLS.
Jean Lawler, Long Beach Country club, Michigan City, Ind.
Elizabeth Zalewiski, Burnham, Ill., pool.

CLASS B—GIRLS.
Peggy Connelly, 211 North Kilbourn avenue.
Susie Elstum, Hammond, Ind.

CLASS C—GIRLS.
Patsy Heckin, 4520 West Van Buren street.
Happy Huttienne, Lake Shore A. C.

CLASS D—GIRLS.
Jean Ellen Jens, Wheaton, Ill.

CLASS E—GIRLS.
Betty Betz, Lake Shore A. C.

Many From Out of City.

Nearly half of yesterday's qualifiers live outside of Chicago. Phillip Welch of Kewanee, Ill., was one of three boys in the 11 and 12 year old class who reached the championships. Ned Sheehy, Class B, and Jean Lawler, Class A girls, from the Long Beach, Ind., Country club, also won gold qualifying medals and places in the finals.

Laverne Reimer of the Joliet Y. M. C. A., Robert Janacek of Morton High school, and Susie Elstum of Hammond were other successful swimmers from outside the city.

At least 40 more swimmers will win gold qualifying medals this afternoon at Whealan pool, where the number of contestants is more than twice as large as at Cermak pool. The climax of the preliminaries will be the races at Lincoln park lagoon next Saturday afternoon. All the entries have not been tabulated, but the number now is more than 500. Notification cards for all contestants at Lincoln park will be mailed by Wednesday.

Team entries in the last mail for this series of races have been received from Mitchell playground, Calumet Memorial park district, Humboldt park, Bellfuss natatorium, and a supplementary list from La Follette park. Director Gerhard of Bellfuss has entered 25 boys and 10 girls in the Lincoln park trials.

Record Field Starts Race to Mackinac

Ideal weather favored the fleet of 42 craft which went to the starting line yesterday afternoon in the 29th annual Mackinac Island race sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club. The 42 boats constituted a record field for the lengthy haul up Lake Michigan, longest freshwater race in the world, and was the largest fleet, fresh or salt water, ever to go to the starting line.

First over the starting line off Belmont Harbor was Dorello, a perennial contender for Mackinac honors, owned and skippered by G. T. Murphy. Following Dorello in the racing division, which got away at 2:30 o'clock, were Scarab, Flight, Hope, Warrior, Silver Moon, Princess, and Stormy.

The class B section of the cruising division answered the starting cannon at 3 o'clock immediately after the larger racing class had been sent on its way. The class B cruisers, limited to boats less than 45 feet long, was headed by Kenneth McClelland's Melita, C. N. Steele's Privateer, and Nathaniel Rubinkam's Rubaiyat. The last named, less than a year old, went into the 331 mile race with a record of never having been beaten.

The class A section of the cruising division was the last to leave Belmont harbor. Included in this were such favored entries as Charles V. B. Reilly's Suez II, John T. Snite's Bagheera, Bob Benedict's Southern Cross, Lynn Williams' Elizabeth, and Henry Babson's Maruffa.

20 LEAVE PORT HURON.

Port Huron, Mich., July 18.—[Special.]—Twenty yachts left Port Huron this afternoon on the annual 241 mile race to Mackinac Island.

Italy to Send Squad of 224 to Olympic Games

ROME, July 18.—[U. P.]—The Italian Olympic committee announced today that Italy's team at the Berlin games will comprise 224 athletes who are entered in 16 events.

WHEN GOV. LANDON WAS FOOTBALL STAR

Sundown and Sunup Best for Bass Fishing

BY BOB BECKER.

When hot weather comes, many fishermen find the early morning and the sunset hours the most productive ones for going after bass and other game fish. These times of day suit us during July and August because we like to work a fly rod for black bass.

In fact, many black bass fly rod fishermen will give you all the hot hours of midday, when the wind dies down and activity is at a standstill, and take a few hours of fishing after sunup or when the setting sun is dropping behind the timber on lake or stream.

It's a Great Thrill.

Any fisherman who hasn't tossed small surface lures with a fly rod around sundown when the fish are on the lookout for insects has a big thrill ahead of him. And don't think for a moment that using a fly rod for black bass is just "artistic pleasure." It isn't.

Those lifelike nature lures, the fuzzy imitation bug, hair lures that float and gedunk themselves with a glug when retrieved, and the many other surface lures that one can use with a fly rod often will fool more fish than any other style of angling. A short time ago we had a report from F. S. in northwest Wisconsin regarding the bass fishing. He reported that for a while the only fishermen who were able to get a limit of bass without an awful lot of work were the fly fishermen. Using wet hair flies, hair floaters that dance on the surface, and similar lures, they had the bass completely fooled.

Spinner Fly Is Effective.

We use both wet flies and those that are tied and also dressed with oil so they will stay on top—much like our fan wing trout flies that drop lightly to the smooth surface of a stream pool and float to invite the trout to a strike.

But there are times when you must go deeper for bass. Then is when a wet fly is used. And there may be times when a tiny gold spinner ahead of the fly is mighty effective.

Of course, fly fishing for bass is no open sesame to a string of fish every time you go after bass. We have seen quiet, calm evenings when they ought to rise and didn't, much to our despair. And we have seen days and evenings when things looked pretty sad for fishing and suddenly the surface of the lake was boiling with rising fish. At such times the ratio of fish hooked by a fly fisherman using a surface lure makes the bait caster very depressed, because the latter has little to do when black bass are on the loose smacking insects.

Bass Fooled by Bug.

On the St. Croix river trip this summer we used a yellow wet fly made of maribou stork feathers and a yellow hair fly which stirred up the small mouthed bass. But during most of our fly fishing we have been using surface lures for black bass—the kind that float well when oiled, create considerable disturbance when jerked slightly, and thus give the bass the impression that here is a real bug—just waiting to be eaten.

If there are rock bass in the lake you are fishing you won't be able to keep them off your hook, because these little fellows also go for bugs in a big way.

SUTTER, FISCHER PLAY TODAY FOR MICHIGAN TITLE

Saginaw, Mich., July 18.—(AP)—Clifford Sutter of New Orleans and Carl Fischer of Detroit won their way today into the final round of the men's singles of the Michigan state tennis tournament and will meet tomorrow. Sutter disposed of John Geindel of Detroit, 7-5, 6-2. Fischer had to go five sets to overcome Norman Bickel of Chicago, 4-6, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1, 6-1.

In the men's doubles quarter final matches John Forman and Al Winston of Chicago defeated George and John Reindel, Detroit brothers, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1. In the semi-finals Forman and Winston eliminated Klunzinger and Sargenti, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

King Edward's Fairlead Wins Warren Handicap

SANDOWN PARK, England, July 18.—[U.P.]—King Edward VIII's royal colors flashed to victory for the tenth time since his accession to the throne when his Fairlead won the mile and 5½ furlong Warren Handicap plate race today.

Hal Schumacher Sent Home for Medical Care

Cincinnati, O., July 18.—[Special.]—Hal Schumacher, one of the Big Three of the Giants' pitching staff, was en route back to New York tonight for medical treatment by Dr. C. Palmer, club physician, Manager Bill Terry announced.

A complaint in the right elbow robbed Schumacher of his effectiveness this afternoon when he was hammered from the mound by the Reds in the second inning under a four hit shower that included Ernie Lombardi's home run. The Giant pilot minimized the character of the complaint but insisted Schumacher undergo treatments rather than risk handicapping the club in a drive which has now reached four straight victories.

WAGGONERS VS. RINGAS.

The Waggoner baseball team will meet the Frank Ringa Boosters at Champagne Velvet stadium, Wellington and Ashland avenues, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

B. B. Y. O. SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT TO LAST A MONTH

A drive for entries to its first annual softball tournament has been launched by the B'nai B'rith Youth organization. Play will open in two weeks and continue for a month.

Hundreds of entries are expected before the deadline is reached on Monday, July 27, when all entries must be filed with Nussy Elman, who is in charge of registration, at 308 West Madison street.

That it's going to be an interesting tourney is certain, since the meet will be conducted in three age divisions. The junior bracket is for boys 12 to 15, intermediates for boys 16 to 19, and seniors for boys 20 to 25 years old. The only requirements for entering are that participants be Jewish and that entering teams carry a representative Jewish name.

Teams from all parts of Chicago and suburbs will compete in the B. B. Y. O. meet. Every Jewish organization, Hebrew school and synagogue is rounding out a team for the tournament.

AUSTRALIA AND GERMANY SPLIT DAVIS SINGLES

Baron von Cramm Beats Adrian Quist.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 18.—(AP)—Australia and Germany broke even today in the opening singles matches of the interzone final of the Davis cup tennis competition.

The Anzacs, conquerors of the United States last month in the North American final, gained a 1-0 lead when young Heiner Henkle defaulted to the veteran Jack Crawford after the Australian won the first two sets, 6-2, 6-2.

However, Baron Gottfried von Cramm squared the count with a 4-6 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 11-9 triumph over Adrian Quist.

Henkel Ill, Defaults.

The result of today's matches more than ever makes it appear the outcome of the series will hinge on the doubles match to be played Monday. The series will wind up Tuesday with Von Cramm meeting Crawford and Henkel opposing Quist.

Henkel had been ill with chills for several days. After finding his weakened condition impaired his footwork in attempting to chase Crawford's deftly placed shots, the youthful Teuton withdrew.

Meanwhile, the British Davis cup team concluded its final practice in preparation for defense of the cup next week-end against the survivor of the Germany-Australia series.

Budge Defeats Perry.

Playing at Eastbourne, H. W. [Bunny] Austin trimmed Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., 6-0, 6-2, 6-2, and Don Budge of Oakland, Cal., took the measure of Fred Perry, 9-7, 7-5, 8-10, 7-5.

Budge's victory gave the United States a 3-2 winning margin in the informal international series. Perry played indifferently, as he invariably does when a title is not at stake, and appeared both nervous and patchy.

In the previous matches Americans captured one of the opening singles on Thursday and Budge and Grant conquered Pat Hughes and Charles Tuckey in the doubles yesterday.

CORA BABCOCK WINS SWIM.

Scranton, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—Cora Babcock, 18, of Franklin, N. J., won the annual 2 1-3 mile championship swimming race of the Scranton Swimming association at Lake Ariel today.

U. S. Team Sails for Olympics Review of the Week's Sports

America's Olympic team, 334 strong, sailed Wednesday for Hamburg, Germany, and the Olympic games at Berlin, Aug. 1 to 16, after overcoming financial difficulties which threatened to leave many of the nation's track and swim stars at home because of inability to finance the ocean trip. Financial problems were settled in a last minute hustle for cash through donations, a campaign by the American Olympic committee, and efforts of the athletes themselves. The last three to be assured passage were Iris Cumming of Orlando Beach, Cal., and Dorothea Dickinson and Elizabeth Ryan of New York, all swimmers.

As the athletes sailed away, all were in smiles despite the fact that many of them had pawned their jewels or mortgaged property to finance the trip. That these athletes would be reimbursed and assured of funds to return home from New York after the games was predicted by Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee. The Olympic committee still is short $75,000, one-third for operating expenses, one-third to meet an obligation to the permanent Olympic committee, and one-third to reimburse the athletes. A campaign for $100,000 is being conducted to solve these problems before the athletes return to the United States.

Despite the financial muddle which attended the sailing, the team athletically has no drawbacks. World records in the men's final swimming trials were broken by Johnny Higgins of Providence for the 200 meter breast stroke in 2:41.1, and by Adolf Kiefer of Chicago, who clipped one-tenth of a second off his own world mark for the 100 meter backstroke at 1:07.5. In the final track and field performance two world records, two American marks, and three Olympic standards were broken by members of the team.

Cubs Take Two Game Lead on Cardinals.

The bull dog battle of the Cubs and Cardinals for permanent occupation of first place in the National league marked the week in major league baseball. The Cubs clung to a two game advantage acquired during a week in which their pitchers performed brilliantly and their batsmen not so well.

Trailing the Cardinals by three games last Saturday, the Cubs swept through a week in which they won six games while losing two. Sunday they opened with the Giants in a double-header, taking the first, 4 to 2, losing the second, 8 to 6, as French won and Warneke was routed. Monday the Cubs won, 1 to 0, taking first place by three percentage points for the first time since June 28. Tuesday the Cubs won, 6 to 1, behind Curt Davis and clung to their three point margin. Wednesday the Cubs were hosts to the Bees and won, 2 to 0, behind Tex Carleton, and increased their advantage to 16 points as the Phillies beat the Cards.

The Cubs' lead widened to two games as they whipped the Bees, 1 to 0, in ten innings with Warneke on the mound, while their St. Louis brethren again lost to the Phillies, 6 to 2, Thursday. But Friday was another day, and Cubs' bats failed where pitchers had stood up and the Bees took the final game, 5 to 1, while the Cards defeated the Phils. Yesterday the Cubs won and the Cards lost, so the former regained the two game margin.

The American league race was marked by the feats of the Cleveland Indians, who won seven games without loss, and the White Sox, who hung up seven victories with only one defeat. The week's standing of games won and lost:

C. W. Hay, Racing Official, Dies in Louisville.

Racing lost a noted figure when C. W. Hay, general manager of the Hawthorne track, succumbed to a heart attack in front of a Louisville theater and died later in a hospital. Hay was 56 years old. He was the owner of the Scotland farms at Frankfort, Ky., and had been connected with racing for twenty years. He had been general manager of the Washington Park track from 1927 until 1935.

World land speed records for automobiles went into the discard last week when Capt. George Eyston of England sent his giant Speed of the Winds roaring over the Bonneville salt flats of Utah. Tuesday he broke the world record for forty-eight hours of driving with an unofficial average of 149.16.

The amazing Dizzy Dean, St. Louis Cardinals' star pitcher, gave baseball fans a scare through no fault of his own last week. Hit on the head by a ball from the bat of Burgess Whitehead, New York Giant second baseman, Dean fell unconscious and was taken to a hospital. Examined by Dr. Robert Hyland of the Cardinals, he was found to have suffered only a slight concussion. Dizzy returned to the pitching mound Thursday and was routed. Back again he went in a relief rôle Friday against the Phillies, pitched hitless ball for three and two-thirds innings, and received credit for the victory.

AMERICAN GIANTS AND MILLS PLAY 2 GAMES TODAY

Florals Face Firemen; Milwaukee vs. Coals.

Games Today

Duffy Florals vs. Chicago Firemen at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets, 1:30 p. m. [2].

Three double-headers will be played by Chicago semi-pro teams this afternoon. The American Giants, one of the best colored teams in the country, will invade Mills stadium for a pair of battles with the Mills. The Duffy Florals will clash with the Chicago Firemen at Shewbridge field, and the Milwaukee Red Sox will meet the Spencer Coals at the latter's field.

The Mills and the American Giants have been consistent winners this season, with the former club scoring in nineteen of twenty games, while the colored boys have been victorious seventy-two times in ninety games. The American Giants' pitching staff includes Ted Trent, Willie Cornelius, Bancy Thomas, and Putt Powell, right-handers, and Norm Cross and Kaybee Ivory, left-handers. The Mills plan to start Hippo Vaughn and Phil Collins or Jack Wilkins.

Milwaukee's Red Sox can send four former major leaguers against the Spencer Coals. Pitcher Eckert played with the Cards and the Reds, Kubek saw service with the Browns, Mandy Brooks is a former Cub outfielder, and Mosloff is an ex-Boston Red Sox infielder. Clarence Cleary and either Pete Beam or Jake Sommerfield will pitch for the Coals.

The Duffy Florals plan to start Dutch Kohlenburg and Mike Yaros against the Firemen, who usually put up a tough battle against the Florals.

Royal League Swim Meet to Be Held Next Sunday

Special exhibitions of swimming and fancy diving will feature the Royal League Junior swimming meet to be held at Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., 3333 North Marshfield avenue, next Sunday. The games are being given under direction of Jay Elwart, athletic director of the Royal League.

AT ALL-STAR BASEBALL GAME

82% CHOOSE MELLOW VINTAGE TOBACCO

BOSTON, MASS., JULY 7—Boston's baseball fans know their cigars. And they appreciate the rich, mellow flavor of Vintage tobacco . . . a taste test, made at the All-Star ball game, proves it.

We chose 247 smokers at random from among the spectators . . . gave each man two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

Each man smoked both cigars—indicated the one he liked best. The cigars bore no names or bands to prejudice. They chose by taste alone . . . for taste is the only thing that gives smoking pleasure. 82% preferred Vintage White Owl's mildness.

MORE SMOKING PLEASURE . . . Today's White Owl is a double "best buy." It's a Vintage cigar—and it's larger, too. Look at this actual-size picture. White Owl averages a 10% longer smoke than other widely advertised 5¢ cigars. Compare White Owl with your present brand. Taste the Vintage tobacco—see the extra size. Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform Vintage cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

Trosky Hits 2 Home Runs for Cleveland.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Paced by Trosky's pair of home runs, the Cleveland Indians today blasted out a 10 to 3 triumph over Washington for their eighth straight victory. Trosky's first homer in the fifth inning came with one on base and his second in the ninth found two mates aboard. Both over the right field fence. Holding a two run lead going into the ninth, Cleveland batted Buck Newsom for five runs to put the game on ice.

Buddy Myer, the American league batting champion in 1935 who has been ill, played second base for the first time since June 3. He got two hits in four times at bat.

YANKS AND BROWNS SPLIT.

New York, July 18—(AP)—The Yankees' big guns, spiked in the opener of a double header with the Browns, came back with a 15 hit attack to break even today.

Elon Hogsett held the Yanks to nine hits in the first game as the Browns put together seven hits in the fifth inning for all their runs and a 7 to 2 victory. Lou Gehrig smashed out his 26th homer and Jake Powell his second to lead the barrage in the 15 to 4 second game victory.

Monte Pearson won his 12th triumph in the second game, shutting out the Browns with five hits until the ninth.

Bottomley's fifth homer of the year featured the Browns' big inning in the opener. It came with a mate on base and scored th first two runs. Afterward, with two out, singles by Lyn Lary, Jule Solters and Sam West, Roy Bell's double, a pair of walks and Joe di Maggio's error brought in the other five runs.

TIGERS, 6; RED SOX, 5.

Boston, Mass., July 18.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers pulled back into third place today when Elden Auker gained his first victory in five starts against the Red Sox, 6 to 5.

Auker, spurred on by Billy Rogell's homer with two on in the third, held the Red Sox scoreless until the eighth when he passed the first three Boston batters, Roger Cramer, Bing Miller, pinch hitting for starting pitcher Fritz Ostermueller, and Johnny Kroner.

Bill Werber dropped a short single into right field and, as Cramer raced for home, he sprinted for second, where he piled up against Kroner. Both players were standing on second when Werber was tagged out. Heinie Manush singled to right to drive in Miller and Kroner. Auker was relieved by Roxie Lawson.

Cubs Rally to Defeat Phils, 8 to 6

seventh under way and advanced on Demaree's sacrifice. Stainback fouled to Atwood and Cavarretta was given and intentional pass. Jurges singled to left, scoring O'Dea, Cavarretta, stopping at second, and Frinch also singled to left, scoring Cavarretta, Jurges stopping at second, Sivess replaced Jorgens and fanned Hack.

LEE, CARLETON TO PITCH

Employment of Larry French as a replacement for wobbly Roy Henshaw in yesterday's game necessitated a change of pitching plans for today's double-header. Bill Lee will pitch the first game, and Tex Carleton the second. Each will be trying for his tenth victory of the season. The Phillies probably will start Passeau and Walter.

Chuck Klein had a fluctuating day against the Cubs. He fanned his first and last times up, but between the two he had a single and his fifteenth homer. Usually homers are painful to a pitcher, but it is probable that Larry doesn't feel badly about Chuck's the way things turned out. It was the only hit off French and took the victory away from Henshaw's record and gave it to French.

The rain early yesterday morning caught Groundkeeper Bobby Dorr by surprise, for he didn't have his tarpaulin down and, as a consequence, had to sand the infield. Bob didn't mind the trouble, for the rain made the outfield even greener than he's been keeping it with a hose.

A crowd of 7,124 paid to get in. And there were 3,000 juvenile guests.

Ah! Some Hits!

RADCLIFF TIES 2 MARKS IN 2D ATHLETIC GAME

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Rip Radcliff, the Chicago White Sox outfielder, tied two American league records today in getting six hits for seven times at bat in the second game of the double-header at Philadelphia.

His six hits in one game tied the record for total hits in a single nine inning encounter, and his seven times at bat tied the mark for a total at bat by one player in a nine inning contest.

His performance shot him into the American league batting lead in front of Lou Gehrig of the Yankees.

Postoffice Golfers to Stage Tourney Tomorrow

The Chicago Postoffice Golf association will hold one of its regular tournaments tomorrow at the St. Andrews Country club, North avenue and West Chicago road. John Hornbeck is chairman of the tournament committee and William V. Burt, secretary.

FRANKLIN UNION NINE WILL MEET CHICAGO HEIGHTS

The Franklin Union No. 4 baseball team, one of the leading traveling clubs of the Midwest league, will meet the Chicago Heights A. A. at the latter's field this afternoon. The rest of the schedule follows:

Benda Slovaks vs. Midlothian A. C. at 152d and Crawford.

Winiecki Cragins at Quincy, Ill.

Frank Ringas vs. Waggoners at Wellington and Ashland.

Higgins Boosters vs. Remias Amphions at Lavergne and Le Moyne.

SOCCER TEAMS PLAY 7-A-SIDE TOURNEY TODAY

The Chicago Soccer league will hold a seven-a-side tournament today at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue. Twenty-three clubs will compete. The third division will open the tournament this morning at 10 o'clock, and will play the miss-and-out system until the winner is decided. The second division teams then will go into action.

The winners of the second and third divisions later will compete against first division clubs. Included in the latter classification will be Sparta, professional champion; Maccabees, Peel cup winners; Morvaska, Orlics, and the Italian-Americans. The Kessler trophy will be awarded the winner of the tournament.

RADCLIFF, SOX RUN WILD; BEAT A'S, 7-4 AND 21-14

Rip Makes 7 Hits; Leads American League.

Mack's ninth but it came after two were out so was harmless.

SECOND GAME

A double play put a crimp in the Sox in the first inning, but they scored three runs. Radcliff opened with a single off Ross and Rosenthal bounced into a double play. Haas then singled and stopped at third on Bonura's double. A single by Appling scored Haas. Bonura and Appling registered when M. Hayes doubled to left center. Dykes rolled to Higgins for the third out.

The Macks matched the Sox both in hits and runs in the home half. Finney drilled a single through Dykes' hands and scored on Dean's triple to center. Moses beat out a high infield bounder, and Dean counted. Rosenthal took Puccinelli's fly, and Haas then made his second one-handed leap of the day to rob Higgins of a hit. Johnson tapped in front of the plate and Grube made the mistake of thinking the ball would roll foul. It stopped on the line for a hit. Hayes then singled to center, driving Moses home. Newsome popped to Dykes.

Johnson Makes Two Errors.

The Macks injected a little comedy into the second inning to give the Sox a run. After two were out, Radcliff doubled to right. Rosenthal grounded to Johnson, who fumbled. He pecked around in the dust in search of the ball, so Radcliff kept moving toward the plate and scored when Johnson threw wild for his second error on the play. Appling added another run to Whitehead's lead when he sailed his fourth homer into the left field bleachers in the third.

The jostling of Whitehead for three runs in the fourth began with a double by F. Hayes, who scored on Newsome's single. Ross struck out trying to bunt. Finney scratched a hit to Appling, and Dean singled to right, Newsome scoring and Finney charging to third. Finney registered on Moses' fly to Radcliff. Puccinelli singled, but Higgins rolled to Appling.

How Our Boys Can Hit!

Bonura was set down on a fly to center before the Sox got together for their seven run jamboree in the fifth. Appling walked and M. Hayes singled. Both scored on Dykes' double. Grube doubled off Higgins' shins and Dykes counted. Ross went away and in came Gumpert. Whitehead walked and Radcliff singled, Grube scoring. Whitehead and Radcliff counted on a two bagger by Rosenthal. A single by Haas drove Rosenthal home. A lefty named Naktenis then appeared and stopped the fun.

Dykes didn't hesitate about yanking Whitehead in the home fifth. Johnson opened with his fourteenth homer, and F. Hayes doubled. So Brown came to the rescue. He was nicked for a single by Newsome, F. Hayes scoring, but subdued the next three men.

The liberality of Naktenis made it easy for the Sox to score two in the sixth. Dykes and Grube walked, moved ahead on Brown's bunt, and scored on Radcliff's single.

The Riot Continues.

A lad named Flythe was on the mound in the eighth, and the Sox liked him so well they scored three more. Grube walked and Brown sacrificed. Grube counted on Radcliff's fifth hit of the game. Radcliff went to third on a wild pitch and Rosenthal walked. Radcliff scored on an infield out, and Rosenthal followed him when Appling doubled.

The Sox were weary, but not too weary to score four in the ninth. Passes, wild pitches and doubles by Radcliff and Rosenthal did the business. The Macks registered six runs on five hits off Brown in the ninth, but it was harmless fun.

Power Aplenty!

Kennedy, Cain Pitch Today in Twin Bill

Philadelphia, Pa., July 18.—[Special.]—Another double-header with the Athletics tomorrow will conclude the White Sox travels for the time being. The pitching for the finale will be placed in the care of Vernon Kennedy and Merritt [Sugar] Cain.

The Sox open a two weeks' stand at Comiskey park next Tuesday, the Washington Senators being the first of the eastern teams to appear.

Vernon Wilshere, the ex-Athletic southpaw, reported to the Sox today at the request of Manager Dykes. The boss will look over the Indiana university product for several days before deciding whether to tender him a contract.

The Sox were forced to speak harshly to Umpire Quinn in the fifth inning of the first game. Appling's throw to Bonura apparently beat Moses, the runner, and Bonura's foot was on the bag, but Quinn guessed the man was safe. The next batter grounded out to end the inning.

Pinkey Higgins, a year ago regarded as about the best third baseman in the league, is in bad favor with the local fans. The 11,000 present today booed him from start to finish.

The Sox's record since the spurt started is thirteen victories in sixteen games and nine out of their last ten.

RADCLIFF LEADS BIG SIX BATTERS; DISPLACES GEHRIG

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Rip Radcliff of the White Sox collected seven hits in twelve times at bat in a double-header yesterday to take over the lead in the American league trio in baseball's batting "big six," dropping Lou Gehrig of the Yankees out of first place for the first time in weeks.

Radcliff boosted his mark eight percentage points to .383, highest in the big leagues, while Gehrig got but two hits in seven times up to lose ground. Radcliff's teammate, Luke Appling succeeded Bill Dickey of the Yanks in third place.

The standings [three leading hitters in each league]:

BOSTON BEATS CARDINALS, 6-5; DEAN IS LOSER

Dizzy Nicked for Winning Run in 11th.

St. Louis, Mo., July 18.—(AP)—Jerome Herman Dean essayed a relief pitching rôle for the third straight day but the Bees got to him for a run in the eleventh and beat the Cardinals, 6 to 5, in the first of a three game series today.

The Bostons overcame Cardinal leads three times, with home runs by Thompson and Cuccinello helping the attack. They tied it up in the ninth just after Dean came in.

Thompson started the eleventh with a double. E. Moore bunted and Thompson beat Dean's throw to third. Then Wally Berger lifted a long fly to Terry Moore and Thompson scored the winning run.

Collins and Mize hit homers for the Cardinals.

GIANTS, 10; REDS, 2.

Cincinnati, O., July 18.—(AP)—The New York Giants turned on their heaviest hitting barrage since late in May today and climbed back into the National league first division with a 10 to 2 conquest of the Cincinnati Reds. Their 19 hit attack, combined with the seven hit pitching of Hal Schumacher and Frank Gabler, dropped the skidding Reds to fifth place and chalked up the fourth straight Giant victory.

Mel Ott hit his 18th homer of the season with a mate on base to start the Giant scoring in the first. Joe Moore also hit for the circuit, and Ernie Lombardi did the same for the Reds. Score:

VANDERBILT AT HELM; RAINBOW WINS EASY RACE

Newport, R. I., July 18.—[Special.]—Harold S. Vanderbilt brought his sloop Rainbow, winner of the America's cup in the last international series, home with almost three minutes to spare today in the first of the special series between this sloop and her competitors, Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee and Chandler Hovey's Weetamoe. The races are being run under the auspices of the New York Yacht club race committee. All three boats have undergone some changes since the racing season last year.

Ab Jenkins to Seek Auto Speed Records in Utah

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 18.—[U. P.]—Ab Jenkins, American automobile speed driver, today wired friends he will arrive in Salt Lake City next week to prepare for an attempt on world speed records on the Bonneville salt flats early in August. Jenkins will attempt to crack many of the twenty new world records established last week by Capt. George E. T. Eyton of England on the salt flats in a 48 hour run. Jenkins previously had held many of the records Eyston broke, and still claims the 200 mile mark.

Women Will Open District Play in Golf

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The annual district championship of the Chicago Women's District Golf association, banner event for local feminine golfers, will open with an 18 hole medal play qualifying round tomorrow at the Westmoreland Country club. Match play will open Tuesday and continue through to the 36 hole title match on Saturday.

The tournament, which has been under the jurisdiction of the C. W. D. G. A. since 1930, after having been sponsored by the Women's Western Golf association for several years, has become one of the major events of the central states, if only because of the playing caliber of the field. More than 80 will play.

This year's event will bring into play such stars as Mrs. Philip T. Atwood of Olympia Fields, defending titleholder; Rena Nelson of Exmoor, 1934 champion; Mrs. Melvin Jones of Flossmoor, six times a winner; Mrs. Charles Dennehy of Onwentsia, finalist in the recent Western open; Mrs. David W. Norton Jr. of Glen View, new Illinois state champion; Hilda Livengood of Flossmoor, former state title holder, and Eleanor Dudley of Ridge, winner of the Western Junior last year.

Pairings and starting times for tomorrow's qualifying round:

8:45—Mrs. Philip T. Atwood, Olympia Fields, and Mrs. Charles Dennehy, Onwentsia.

8:50—Rena Nelson, Exmoor, and Mrs. Lucile Robinson Mann, Olympia Fields.

9:00—Mrs. Melvin Jones, Flossmoor, and Virginia Ingram, Sunset Ridge.

9:10—Mrs. Lillian Zech, Tam o' Shanter, and Eleanor Dudley, Ridge.

9:15—Marie Louise Gardner, Indian Hill, and Hilda Livengood, Flossmoor.

9:25—Mrs. J. W. Taylor, Evanston, and Mrs. T. J. Lowry, Sunset Valley.

9:35—Mrs. Harold Foreman, Lake Shore, and Louise Willard, Exmoor.

9:40—Mary Pietsch, Glen View, and Mrs. Marjorie M. Davis, Lake Shore.

9:45—Mildred Hackl, Midlothian, and Helen Peterson, Exmoor.

9:50—Elizabeth Wing, Glen View, and Mrs. Floyd Hunt, Exmoor.

10:00—Louise Johnson, Mohawk, and Virginia Lindblad, Lincolnshire.

10:05—Mrs. W. W. Kerr Jr., Illinois, and Virginia Nillen, Park Ridge.

10:10—Lois Tucker, Westmoreland, and Mrs. O. C. Bell, Edgewood Valley.

10:15—Mrs. D. F. Comstock, Illinois, and Barbara Wilder, Skokie.

10:25—Mrs. W. W. Haerther, Exmoor, and Mrs. J. E. Almond, Sunset Ridge.

10:35—Virginia Jensen, Mohawk, and Margaret Keirnan, Exmoor.

10:40—Mrs. O. E. Burnett, Medinah, and Mrs. Lucien Brigham, Sunset Valley.

10:50—Mrs. S. L. Schwarz, Northmoor, and Mrs. H. D. Raymond, Evanston.

ZEKE AND HIS WIFE AIN'T ON SPEAKIN' TERMS!

MEHLHORN'S 136 TAKES LEAD IN ST. PAUL OPEN

Espinosa and Laffoon Tied for Second.

St. Paul, Minn., July 18.—(AP)—Decked out in a large sombrero and oblivious of a huge gallery, Bill Mehlhorn of Louisville, Ky., left a sizzling trail of birdies behind him today to shoot 68 and lead the field into the final day's 36 holes of the St. Paul open golf tournament.

Mehlhorn disregarded a threatening storm which appeared after all other sub par shooters and co-favorites for the title had ended their day's play, to post a two day total of 136. He had tied with four others for the lead yesterday when he also shot a 68.

Ky Laffoon and Abe Espinosa of Chicago were one stroke behind with 137, after taking 69s today, and there were a host of others within striking distance to leave the race wide open for the title held by Harry Cooper of Chicago.

Birdie 18th Provides Lead

Mehlhorn went over par on the 16th and 17th holes when he missed his second shots, after scoring five birdies—three on the first nine, when he got a 33, and two on the second. Going up the 18th fairway the Kentuckian needed a birdie four to assure him sole possession of first place. His brassie was only two feet from the pin and he missed the putt for an eagle. His birdie, put him in the lead.

The day was almost perfect for golf and the players took advantage to make the race the closest in six years' history. Dick Metz, Lake Forest, Ill., shot 69 to be only one stroke out of second place with a 138.

Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., a former St. Paul champion, was tied with Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis and John Bulla, Chicago, at 139. Revolta was the only player besides Mehlhorn to hit 68 today.

Several Favorites Face Struggle.

Some of the strong "regular" favorites faced the difficult task of overtaking the leaders in Sunday's play for the $1,200 first prize. Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., in first place at the start of the day's play got a par 72, and was bracketed with Jimmy Thomson, Shawnee-on-Delaware, at 140.

Gunnard Johnson, Minneapolis, another 68 player yesterday, was alone at 141. Clarence Yockey, Kansas City, Harry Cooper, twice winner, Clarence Doser, Rochester, N. Y., and Leonard Dodson, Springfield, Mo., had 142, and MacDonald Smith, Glendale, Cal., 143.

Sixty-four players who scored 153 or under will play in final rounds tomorrow.

MRS. MARSHALL IS WINNER IN COUNTY GOLF

Mrs. Rose Marshall of Cog-Hill defeated Miss Josephine Souchek of Ridgemoor, 1 up, yesterday to win the women's Cook county open golf championship at Jackson Park. Mrs. Marshall won the title when Miss Souchek missed a sloping putt on the last green.

It was the second triumph for the Cog-Hill golfer, who first won in 1933. Both had the same medal scores, 81—82—163, for the double round.

The contest was even at 18 holes, with the Ridgemoor player having the only birdie, a deuce at the 13th. She was 1 down at 27 holes, 2 down after passing the turn, but even at the 13th in the afternoon round. Mrs. Marshall won the long 14th, 500 yards, in par, but Miss Souchek came right back with a birdie at the 15th and then lost her golden opportunity at the last green, when she missed a sloping putt.

Mrs. Thelma Curry of Lincolnshire won the consolation final, 2 and 1, from Mrs. Mildred Simmons of Jackson Park.

WOODS DEFEATS SAMPSON FOR MIDWEST TITLE

Jim Woods Jr. of Lincoln Park, scored the most decisive victory in the history of the tournament by defeating Bob Sampson of Evergreen, 10 and 9, in the 36 hole final of the ninth annual Midwest public links golf meet at the Lincoln Park Waveland avenue course yesterday. Their cards:

Par	453	453	444—36
Morning round:
Woods—Out	443	563	444—37
Sampson—Out	463	374	544—40
Woods—In	543	553	443—36—73
Sampson—In	663	463	544—41—81
Afternoon round:
Woods—Out	453	453	435—36
Sampson—Out	553	463	445—39

Wood wins 10 and 9.

Vic King of Lincoln park, defeated Moe Springer, 12 years old, also of Lincoln park, 7 and 6, for the first flight championship.

Goodwin, Billows Play for N. Y. Amateur Title

Syracuse, N. Y., July 18.—[U. P.]—Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, defending champion, and Tommy Goodwin of Mamaroneck, 1932 title holder, will clash at Bellevue club here tomorrow for the 1936 New York state amateur golf championship. Billows eliminated Jack Tucker of Rochester, 2 and 1, and Goodwin scored over Dick Chapman of White Plains, 1 up, in 19 holes in the semi-finals today.

LESLIE; FRASER ENTER FINAL OF WESTERN GOLF

Lehman Loses, 5 and 4; Duvall Beaten, 2 and 1.

Omaha, Neb., July 18.—[Special.]—For the second time in three weeks Paul Leslie, 20 years old, Louisiana State university junior, is knocking at the door of an important golf championship. Defeated in the National Intercollegiate finals at Glen View in Chicago last month by Chuck Kocsis, Leslie reached the final round of the 37th annual Western Amateur tournament by stopping the comeback of Johnny Lehman of Chicago, 5 and 4, at the Happy Hollow Country club this afternoon.

Reaching the finals with the 135 pound Leslie was Bob Fraser of Omaha, who upset Freddie Haas Jr. of New Orleans in the quarter finals yesterday. Bob, the chap who wasn't figured to get anywhere—what with Johnny Goodman and Rodney Bliss, two Omaha stars, in the tourney—defeated Grable Duvall of Kansas City, 2 and 1, in the other 36 hole semi-final today.

The 36 hole final will be played tomorrow.

Lehman Erratic With Woods.

Leslie didn't have to shoot subpar golf, his two over regulation for the 32 holes being more than good enough to beat Lehman, who was erratic with his woods through 27 holes of play.

Johnny got into a creek twice, into the sand pits as many times and out of bounds once during the morning round and this afternoon on the out nine he teed the rough and trees four times. His iron work, however, on this nine enabled him to win three holes going out, but all it did for him was to cut Leslie's lead from five up at the luncheon intermission, to four at the turn this afternoon.

Leslie increased his lead to six up through 30 holes of play and after Lehman won the 31st with a birdie 3, the result of a 15 foot putt, the match ended at the next. Leslie put his pitch on the short hole to ten feet of the flag, Lehman's best was 30 feet away. When John was three feet short with his first putt and Paul placed his to within a few inches of the cup, the Chicagoan conceded Leslie a half, in 3's and the match.

Fraser Wins on 35th.

Fraser, with a 2 up lead at the lunch hour, had three one-putt greens and two birdies for his first nine this afternoon and held a three up lead at the turn. Duvall cut into the local golfer's lead with steady golf and when they reached the 33rd green Grable posted a birdie 4, leaving Fraser only one up.

A half in par 4's was the result at the next and Fraser won the match at the 35th despite two shots to get onto the green on the short hole. Duvall was worse than Fraser on the final hole, getting off a bad tee shot and overshooting the green with his second, winding up with a 5 two over par.

DOC MAC KENZIE TO LOSE BEARD ON WEDDING EVE

Reading, Pa., July 18.—(AP)—A famous trade mark on automobile race tracks, the beard of George [Doc] MacKenzie, Eddington, Pa., driver, is due to fall under the strokes of a razor his fiancée has purchased.

Miss Vera T. Mather, an artist's model from Langhorne, Pa., went shopping for a wedding ring, a trousseau, and the razor today in preparation for their marriage Monday night in the hospital where MacKenzie is recovering from injuries suffered a week ago at the Reading fair grounds.

Floyd Roberts, Van Nuys, Cal., driver who suffered a broken leg in the same crash, will be best man and will sing, without accompaniment, when the couple is married by the Rev. Albertus T. Broek.

The whiskers which have waved in the dusty breezes of a hundred tracks are coming off at the insistence of Miss Mather. "Doc" grew the beard as an offering to Lady Luck.

"I hadn't intended to cut them off until I won at Indianapolis," he said, "but I guess they'll have to go."

Lewis Asks Title Bout with James Braddock

Marshall Field's Horse Runs Second in England

SANDOWN PARK, England, July 18.—(AP)—Marshall Field's American-owned Foray finished second to Lord Rosebery's Full Sail in the 5 furlongs of the National Breeders' Produce stakes for 2 year olds today. Held at 9 to 4 in the betting, Foray lost the decision by one and a half lengths to Full Sail, which was quoted at 20 to 1. M. M. Boussac's Goya II. was third in the field of seventeen.

Spanish Revolt.

Spain, for months beset by labor and political troubles in which 300 have been slain, faced an even more serious crisis yesterday—an army revolt in Spanish Morocco. The rebellion started in Melilla Friday and spread to several army centers, among them Ceuta. Madrid ordered prompt suppression, and yesterday government planes rained bombs on rebel strongholds. [See main news section.] One bizarre twist occurred. The foreign legion sent to smash the rebels at Melilla joined the rebels. The revolt closely followed the murder in Madrid of José Calvo Soleto, monarchist and former cabinet minister.

Poker Hands.

The great international stud poker game continued in Europe last week. The antes were promises, the stakes men, money, and nations. Jokers were wild. Everything went. Those clever enough to slip cards up their sleeves, or to deal out predetermined hands were not cheaters, but diplomats.

Up to yesterday, the week's poker game had not been completed, but the following summaries indicate, thus far, the way the chips are moving.

Germany.

Germany won a sizable pot last week-end on its pact of friendship with Austria. On Sunday Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, exchanged messages sealing the pact. Schuschnigg said that the agreement would "serve the interests of Austria," and Hitler said it would fulfill the traditions of the "two German states" and help the cause of peace in Europe.

Dr. Paul Goebbels, German propaganda minister, later informed a friend that the pact presaged a new alliance among Germany, Austria, Poland, Italy, and Hungary, forming "a solid bloc of virile nations that will not tolerate discrimination of any kind."

Throughout the week France expressed concern over the coup. Unofficial spokesmen predicted Germany would soon bid for higher stakes—annexation of Austria, Danzig, and other places. The English press, while not insensible to possibilities, hailed the pact as a bit of "wise statesmanhip," but Baron Hans von Zessner, a leading Austrian, wondered how "Austria's Catholic culture and German paganism can flourish in the same soil."

Some slick dealing preceded the pact, causing Italy to drop its hand as Austria's avowed protector against Nazi Germany. As England and France saw it, according to the week's reports, Germany probably promised Italy not to annex Austria—now, anyhow—and also promised to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Great Britain.

The London diplomatic players had to do some fancy shuffling during the week to save the proposed Locarno conference. This conference was scheduled to meet in Brussels Thursday to take up Germany's rearming of the Rhine.

England, France, and Belgium were ready. But Italy wouldn't play because Germany wasn't invited to the conference. France and Belgium insisted the parley go ahead anyway. But wise England, wishing to harmonize everything, held that both Germany and Italy should attend the conference. A temporary solution was found Friday in Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's suggestion that England, France, and Belgium hold a preliminary meeting in London on July 23, "to pave the way for a five power or all-European conference on European security." It is now expected Italy, and perhaps Germany, will attend the latter conference.

France.

France did some fine dealing, also. On Friday unofficial sources hinted that Paris might recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia. The sources said England also might. This was regarded as an effort to bring Italy away from the German wooer, Hitler.

As play progressed during the week, France discovered that its ace in the hole, for the present, was Russia. It became known Friday that Russia, no friend of Germany, had accepted financial aid from Czechoslovakia to build a railroad across the Carpathian mountains, tying up with the Czech railway. Such a road would be immensely valuable to Russia in a war with Germany. It was a further strengthening of the chains between Russia and Czechoslovakia. The latter country, which was born because of Germany's world war defeat, fears any new Germany supremacy, the fears being that such supremacy would wipe out Czechoslovakia.

On Friday France made a practical move when the chamber of deputies, by a vote of 484 to 85, passed control of the nation's arms industry to the government. [See Business Review.]

Italy.

Italy and Great Britain showed how one bluffer can forgive another when, early in the week they split a pot. Italy, on Monday, began sending home 40,000 of its troops from the Egyptian-Libyan border. England's battleships were sailing homeward from the Mediterranean whence they had been sent to awe Italy during the Ethiopian war. The movements indicated renewal of old friendships.

But curiously, Italy remained the big European question mark. Germany wants its friendship, France and England want it. So far Mussolini has played Hitler's way. Mussolini refused to attend the Locarno conference without Germany; he shut his eyes to the Austro-German alliance; he reputedly promised Germany help to regain lost colonial provinces. And Rome blandly talked of a new alliance with Germany—as Goebbels had mentioned. And in partial return a Nazi stooge, Danzig—which is a free city, but 96 per cent German, indirectly recognized Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Italy was obviously playing Germany against France and England, professing new friendship with Germany, but secretly desiring old friendship with France and England. Mussolini did not stop there, however. On Wednesday he lent little Albania $1,500,000 for which in return King Zog granted Italy large oil concessions and defense concessions in the Adriatic sea. Wednesday was the day that sanctions were lifted. The entire country rejoiced. Happy Mussolini thundered that the sanctions ending "represents the surrender of those who would deny us victory."

It was obvious that Germany and Italy drew most of the aces during the week.

Strange

Charles E. Harvey, a railroad car checker of Omaha, Neb., stepped off the frontboard of a locomotive, stumbled and fell on the ties. The train was starting. Harvey lay still, face down, his hands stretched out in front of him. The locomotive and 61 cars passed over him. He incurred severe bruises and cuts, but was able to get up and walk to a doctor's office.

Dee Shuman of Rochester, Ind., was annoyed by a rattle in his automobile. He was unable to locate the cause for several days. Then he looked under the front seat cushion. He found a 38 inch rattlesnake with twelve rattles and killed it.

At Hollywood, Cal., "Lily," a female Dobermann-Pinscher dog owned by Mrs. B. R. Eason, mothered four pigs in addition to her own offspring. At Vannuys, Cal., a female bulldog mothered six bunnies after losing a puppy.

While riding in an automobile with a young man at Huntington, N. Y., Dorothy and Edith Jackson, sisters, 18 and 20, suddenly screamed. The young man lost control of the car and it overturned. A state trooper saw the accident and called an ambulance. When it arrived Dr. Samuel Levine helped lift the girls into the car. As it drove away the door flew open. Dr. Levine and the girls fell out into the road. The physician's skull was fractured.

When he was 3 months old, James Mandine, now 3, of New York, received serum treatment for a rabid dog bite. Recently James bit the shoulder of John O'Brien, also 3, a playmate. Both were taken to City hospital and given laboratory tests for rabies.

Ernest Boynton of Meredith, N. H., returned from a fishing expedition near Hampton beach with a tale of the biggest one that ever got away. He said that instead of catching a cod he hooked a whale, which he estimated to be 70 feet long. He said the whale carried away his bait, hook, 70 feet of fishing line, and his fishing rod.

A squirrel, believed crazed by the heat, leaped on J. S. Brawford of Estherville, Ia. The squirrel clawed Brawford's scalp and inflicted deep wounds on his legs. Police killed the animal with a rifle.

Lloyd Day and Mrs. Sarah Caudill of Jeremiah, Ky., were married recently. Each had been married three times previously. Each had three sets of twins by previous marriages and three children each besides. The eighteen children are living with the newly married couple.

Miss Dolores Bedoya of San Salvador celebrated her 120th birthday. She said she believed her long life and excellent health was due to the fact that she has never been in love.

Residents of Agua Caliente, Mexico, were astonished when a shower of thousands of tiny fish fell from the sky with a sudden downpour of rain. It was believed a waterspout along the coast had drawn a school of the fish into rain clouds.

While sitting on the porch of her home at Quincy, Mass., Mrs. Muriel Johnston was struck by a bolt of lightning. A physician who treated her for burns said the rubber corset she was wearing had saved her life.

Republicans.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee for President, and Frank Knox, the party's vice presidential candidate, held their first important conference on campaign plans Wednesday at Topeka, Kas. Gov. Landon and Mr. Knox spent almost the entire day together, discussing their acceptance speeches and campaign speaking tour plans. The two acceptance speeches, which will strike the keynote of the campaign, will be made a week apart. Gov. Landon will address the huge crowd expected for the notification ceremonies at Topeka on July 23. Col. Knox will deliver his address in Chicago on July 30.

* * *

On Friday it was announced in Topeka by Wayland Brooks, Republican nominee for governor of Illinois, following his conference with Gov. Landon that the governor would make a speaking tour through Illinois during the campaign. No dates have been arranged for the tour. Another Illinoisan who visited Gov. Landon Friday was George F. Harding, national committeeman. Both Brooks and Harding assured the governor that Illinois would be in the Republican column in November.

* * *

On Tuesday Col. Henry Breckenridge of New York, who entered several state primaries against President Roosevelt last spring, paid a surprise visit to Gov. Landon and assured the governor of his support.

* * *

George N. Peek, first administrator of the New Deal's AAA, former Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, anti-New Deal Democrat, and J. R. McCarl, until recently controler general of the United States, were important visitors at Topeka during the week. After conferring with Gov. Landon, all praised him. Former Gov. Ely and Mr. McCarl said they would support his candidacy.

* * *

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, continued to inspire Republican leaders for a fighting campaign during the week, which he devoted to a tour of New England states.

At Boston Friday he asserted that there will be either a Republican landslide in the November presidential election or the contest will be so close the outcome will not be known for days after the poll.

"It either will be like the Hughes-Wilson election, in which the result was not known for four or five days, or it is going to be a landslide—and it won't be a landslide for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I'm not fooling with Farley when I say he would have a hard time picking six states today," Hamilton said. "I think we are going to carry Missouri and Oklahoma. At least we will come so close it will scare Jim Farley out of his political pants."

Hamilton also predicted that New England would vote for Landon next fall. He said his tour had been the "most gratifying swing I have ever taken."

Democrats.

James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, continued his mood for making predictions last week. Asked if he had seen any indication that sentiment for the President was declining, Farley said:

"The demonstration given the President in New York gives a pretty fair idea of how the people will vote in November. There has never been any doubt in my mind as to how the man on the street feels. Hundreds of people stop me on the street as I go around and tell me they are for the President and the program he is directing.

"There is really nothing wrong except that newspapers, who oppose the administration, have colored their articles in an attempt to make it appear that sentiment is different from what it actually is.

"There is no doubt but President Roosevelt will have a substantial majority in New York state and that will be true all over the country. I don't care whom the Republicans nominate for governor of New York. Lehman will get a huge majority and the President will get at least as many votes as he got in 1932."

* * *

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, minister to Denmark, made a second visit to Democratic headquarters in New York Wednesday. She discussed with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Miss Mary A. Dewson, head of the women's division of the national Democratic committee, the part she will play in the campaign. Mrs. Rohde was accompanied by her husband, Capt. Boerge Rohde of the Danish king's life guards. They were married a week ago yesterday. The daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan said that she planned to make several campaign speeches in behalf of President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Nathalie Sedgwick Colby, divorced wife of Bainbridge Colby, will not join her former husband in abandoning the Democratic party to support the Landon-Knox ticket. On Friday she joined the staf of campaigners who will stump for Roosevelt. At the same time it was announced that Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, author, had also joined the list of speakers for the Democratic ticket.

Democratic leaders in Michigan were making plans last week for their state convention, to be held in Battle Creek Sept. 25 and 26. The choice of Battle Creek ended a sharp dispute between leaders, some of whom wanted the convention to go to Detroit.

* * *

Prof. Felix Frankfurter, one of the President's brain trusters, on vacation in England, was quoted as saying Wednesday at Oxford that he considered the campaign to date "most unexciting." He said also that he believed American election campaigns are much too long.

Townsendites.

The Townsend old age pension organization, in convention at Cleveland, was thrown into confusion Friday night. Dr. Francis E. Townsend, elderly head of the movement, opened a meeting of the board of directors with a demand for the ouster of Vice President Gomer Smith, then walked out of the meeting, saying he would not return until his demand was met. Later, however, he returned and the directors announced that no action had been taken on Smith.

Dr. Townsend broke with Smith following the latter's fiery attack Thursday before the convention against the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, self-proclaimed heir to the Huey Long share the wealth movement and now Townsend's right hand man. The Rev. Mr. Smith wants the Townsendites to join his share the wealth group and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's Union for Social Justice in backing the Lemke-O'Brien third party ticket. Gomer Smith's speech turned the delegates against any such alliance. [See main news section.]

The 11,000 Townsendite delegates heard numerous fiery speeches during the week. The Rev. Father Coughlin spoke Thursday. He delivered a scorching attack against the New Deal and exhorted the Townsendites to join with his group in backing the third party ticket next fall. Earlier speeches lambasting the New Deal were delivered by Dr. Townsend and the Rev. Mr. Smith. Yesterday the delegates were addressed by Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President.

Political Notes.

Senator Carter Glass, Virginia's fiery Democratic leader, was the principal speaker Friday at the bi-centennial celebration in memory of the death of Patrick Henry. His speech was another blast at the New Deal. "If Patrick Henry were living today," said the senator, "he would not cure one evil with a multitude of other evils."

* * *

Norman Thomas, candidate of the Socialist party for President, addressed a meeting of Negroes in Chicago Wednesday night. He declared that Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas, majority leader in the senate, is the "greatest living beneficiary of the peonage system in the south, a system worse than that of slavery before the civil war."

* * *

Representative William Lemke [Rad., N. D.], the new Union party's candidate for President, conferred early in the week in Chicago with Dr. Francis E. Townsend and the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, who took over leadership of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement. Following the meeting Mr. Lemke said they had not come to any agreement on supporting his ticket next fall.

Edward VIII.

The entire British empire was shocked Thursday at a supposed attempt to assassinate King Edward VIII. The incident occurred while the king, mounted, was leading a procession to the palace. Near Wellington Arch, a baldheaded man whipped out a revolver. A woman, dressed in gray, knocked it from his hand and almost under the king's horse. Police seized the man. He said he was George Andrew McMahon, a Scotchman. On Friday Scotland Yard discovered he was Jerry Bannigan, an Irishman. He said he meant only "to protest," not harm the king. He is being held. [See main news section.]

The City

Fires.

As if nature's own temperatures were not hot enough last week, fires added to localized discomfort. To citizens in general this may not have seemed important, but it was to the city's firemen who fought fires on the hottest days, wearing heavy rubber or fabric reefers, thick boots and weighty helmets.

The most dramatic fire occurred in the historic New England Congregational church, 19 West Delaware place, early Tuesday. Flames scorched the interior, ate through parts of the gabled roof, and destroyed many valuable furnishings. The flames could not, however, penetrate the 83 year old stone walls. Those walls had withstood a much more savage attack in 1871. Tall trees and choking smoke impeded the firemen who had responded to a 4-11 alarm. They spared church equipment where possible, but had to smash a $10,000 memorial window. Several thousand near north siders braved the smoke to watch the blaze. Damage was estimated at $50,000, but it probably will cost more than that to repair the church.

While this fire was raging a 5-11 blaze broke out in the Goldenrod Ice Cream company plant at 825 West 21st street. The fire destroyed part of the plant. A series of explosions, supposedly from chemicals, added to the danger. Fire officials estimated damage at $100,000, but D. K. Olin, company president, put the figure at $250,000.

On Sunday fire started in the basement of a Walgreen drug store at 2801 Broadway. The intense heat melted lead connections on pipes of the store's refrigerating plant, allowing fumes to escape. Sixteen firemen were overcome. The property damage was slight, but the fire, in addition to felling the firemen, tied up trafic at the three way intersection of Broadway, Clark street and Diversey parkway for an hour.

Fire caused by spontaneous combustion caused $3,500 damage in St. Theodore's Catholic church, 6205 South Paulina street, Sunday. Most of the damage was to church vestments. In a $15,000 fire on the same day at Pershing road and Racine avenue, $15,000 damage was done, and Fire Captain John J. Clifford of Engine 53 slightly injured.

Rainless Heat.

Chicago learned Thursday that while drouth may be the farmer's misfortune, it can also be the city dweller's woe. On Thursday milk in Chicago went up 1 cent a quart. This was a result of the prolonged rainless heat in rural areas. [See map and drouth article, next page.]

Earlier in the week agents of the Pure Milk association, representing 14,500 dairy farmers around Chicago, and the Associated Milk Dealers, Inc., representing 114 dealers here, got together. The farmers said the drouth had boosted the cost of milk production. The dealers admitted this, and granted them an increase of 53 cents a hundred pounds [1.13 cents a quart] more for their milk than they were getting in June.

Chicago, however, got relief from another quarter—cooling breezes blew out of Canada and over Lake Michigan Tuesday night and Wednesday. Temperatures tumbled from the 90s to the 70s, and continued through yesterday.

Relief.

Food orders were mailed Thursday and Friday to 43,000 of the city's needy families. But paradoxically, while the relief clients were being cared for, the very people—the relief workers—who see to their requirements, were very near to changing places with them, and becoming relief clients. They were working without pay.

A flaw in state relief legislation was the reason. The legislation provides that local funds are to be used for relief, but not overhead. The entire relief machinery, workers, postage, stationery, office rent, transportation and such, is included in overhead. This flaw has crimped administration of relief. It has necessitated donated services of relief employés, and donated or loaned funds for mailing. To mail out the week's checks, Mayor Edward J. Kelly personally lent the city $2,500.

In a letter to the mayor Thursday, Leo M. Lyons, Chicago commissioner of relief, urged action be taken so that local funds raised under the state relief legislation may be used for relief administration. To this end it was arranged that an aldermanic committee meet with Gov. Horner tomorrow.

During the week Senator James Hamilton Lewis went to New York to see Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins about getting temporary help for Chicago, but Hopkins wouldn't see him. Yesterday 1,500 men, women, and children paraded through the loop in protest against present relief conditions. One woman carried the message: "Horner, we want relief." [See main news section.]

City Notes.

Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, of the County court, signed a tentative order Friday cutting nearly $11,000,000 off the $155,456,274 assessed by the six major taxing bodies of the county for the year 1934. He did this by upholding objections to the levies. Some 1,300 owners, representing 91,000 of the 1,200,000 parcels of property in the county, filed the objections, and will be the only ones to benefit. Judge Jarecki's order will be made permanent in six weeks.

Wednesday was a red letter day in Safety court. Not a single motor trafic violator was sentenced to jail. It was the first "jailless" day in that court since May 4 when Judge Gibson E. Gorman began a drastic campaign against drunken and reckless drivers. But the situation became normal again on Thursday. Judge Edward S. Scheffler, sitting in place of Judge Gorman who is on vacation, sentenced five drivers to jail.

Washington

President Roosevelt, playing the rôle of a skipper, steered the schooner Sewanna aimlessly northward along the Maine coast last week. Aboard with him, as members of the crew, were three of his sons, James, Franklin Jr., and John. The cruise, which will end at Campo Bello, N. S., began Tuesday at Rockland, Me. Following the Sewanna were the presidential yacht Potomac and the navy destroyer Hopkins and another schooner, the Liberty, carrying newspaper men.

The President plans to spend a few days at Campo Bello before leaving for Quebec, where on July 31 he will spend a day as the guest of Canada's governor general, Lord Tweedsmuir.

Mr. Roosevelt announced during the week that he plans to make a tour during August of the drouth stricken areas of the west and of the areas in the east damaged by floods last spring. His return to Washington has not been definitly scheduled.

An "unauthorized" investigation by secret service agents of the activities of agents of the federal bureau of investigation—the G-men—commanded by J. Edgar Hoover, was the subject of a near-scandal in Washington during the week. Secret service agents suspected of making the investigation were summoned to the capital for questioning.

On Friday Grady L. Boatwright, secret service agent in charge of the St. Paul office, was questioned at length at a closed hearing concerning his alleged investigation of the fatal shooting by G-men in 1934 of Eddie Green, a member of the Dillinger gang.

Treasury officials, conducting the inquiry, have admitted that the secret service has no authority to investigate another department of the government. It was reported that the department of justice, under which Hoover's men operate, has demanded strong disciplinary action against any secret service agents found to have taken part in the inquiry into G-men activities.

German engineers are reported working on a 1,000 horse power steam turbine that will run at 20,000 revolutions per minute. It weighs only five ounces per horsepower. Steam pressure is 600 to 1,200 pounds, and the exhaust is in a half-atmosphere vacuum. The magazine Power states that such a power plant for aircraft is not entirely impractical if a lightweight boiler can be built to go with it.

Take the word of Dr. Fred L. Whipple, of Harvard college observatory, Cambridge, Mass., that Peltier's comet, recently discovered member of the solar system, may be seen by the naked eye. But—very good eyesight is necessary, atmospheric conditions must be most favorable, there must be no moonlight, and there's no use looking from a large city or suburb where light is radiated into the sky. The comet is about 50 million miles away. It is a mere point of light in the constellation Cepheus, about 30 degrees from the north pole. It will increase in brightness until Aug. 4, but never will be conspicuous.

Sea Crash

Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland and 250 others, including many high state officials, were having a merry time Tuesday night aboard the passenger steamer State of Virginia in Chesapeake bay. In one of the public rooms of the ship a floor show was in full blast. Passengers were dining, dancing, and drinking. A sudden, deafening crash changed the merriment to terror.

The freighter Golden Harvest, loaded with steel, had rammed the passenger vessel amidships. The prow of the freighter was driven into the side of the other ship several feet. All of the passengers had been severely jolted, some of them bruised, but there were no serious injuries. Before dawn the ferry boat Pittsburgh had taken all of them to Baltimore. The two ships remained locked together. Their crews remained aboard.

As an official inquiry into the accident was begun officers of the two ships were quoted as saying the accident was the result of a mixup in signals.

CIRCUS "MAGIC."

Indictments were returned in federal court at New York charging six persons, including government employés and officials of Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey combined shows, with a conspiracy to defraud the government of income taxes, penalties and interest amounting to about 7 million dollars. The charges cover an alleged fraud over a period of 18 years, during which the circus is accused of obtaining tax deductions on fictitious animals and circus equipment.

"QUEEN" IN TROUBLE.

The giant new British liner Queen Mary was towed to drydock at Southampton, England, for a thorough engineering overhaul. Although the big liner has maintained her designed speed of 28½ knots, it was reported turbine trouble developed, making it necessary to use an extra 100 tons of fuel oil daily to maintain average speed.

PRECIPITATION FOR 1934 AND 1936 WITH GAIN AND LOSS IN INCHES OR FRACTIONS THEREOF

Fair and continued hot — that weather prediction continued to bring despair during the week to farmers in the middle and northwest states. Yesterday was the sixteenth day of searing heat and drouth, which already has done nearly as much damage to crops as the drouth of 1934. A chart comparing the rainfall in the drouth area in 1934 and this year, shows that six states have had less rain to date than fell in 1934.

Scattered showers early in the week in the northwest and throughout the week in portions of the middle west brought a measure of relief from the heat, but gave no aid to withering crops. A current of cool air approached from the northwest Monday, but when it reached the superheated air over Montana and the Dakotas it was dissipated. Chicago and other areas near the lakes fared better. Cool air from northern Canada reached here the middle of the week.

Crop damage due to the drouth began to reach serious proportions. Losses were estimated by farm authorities as follows: South Dakota, $140,000,000; Missouri, $100,000,000; Illinois, $30,000,000; Indiana, $12,000,000; Ohio, $10,000,000, and Montana, $5,000,000.

Government agencies acted early in the week to speed up the relief program for the stricken farm population. By the end of the week the four point program was in operation. The following steps were being taken:

1. Immediate relief was offered needy farmers and they were given opportunity to work on Works Progress administration projects after receiving subsistence grants.

2. Arrangements were made to provide feed for live stock with loans or grants for maintaining foundation herds. Limited loans were available for transporting live stock to other pastures.

3. Emergency rehabilitation seed loans were made available to farmers for fall planting and a program for seed loans for spring planting was being prepared.

4. A long time program for the retirement of submarginal land by government purchase or otherwise, and relocation of families now residing on such lands was announced.

5. Packers acting as government agents continued to buy for processing cattle shipped in from waterless ranges.

It was reported at Washington that 22,074 destitute farmers already had been employed on WPA projects.

Suffering from the broiling heat reached an acute stage during the week in Michigan. At Detroit hospitals were taxed to capacity with heat victims, many of whom died. According to a survey made early in the week the toll of deaths attributed more or less directly to the heat reached 7,626 in the nation. This total was swelled as the heat continued unabated through the week. In Chicago the number of fatalities was close to 200.

Temperatures reached new record high marks in many cities of the nation. In the middle west some of the extreme all-time high marks were registered as follows: Moberly, Mo., 116; Fredonia, Kas., 113; Davenport, Ia., 112; Aurora, Ill., 111; Bloomington, Ind., 110; Terre Haute, Ind., 109; Adrian, Mich., 108; Elgin, Ill., 107; Columbus, O., 106; Toledo, O., 104.

A steadily falling water stage paralized navigation on the upper Mississippi river late in the week. Many river boats were stuck fast on sandbars. The great river, army engineers reported, has never been so low this early in the season, and is near the all-time low set in 1865.

Effects of the drouth were felt vitally during the week by farm implement manufacturers. Scores of orders for farm machinery were canceled and some plants were forced to lay off many employés.

Labor

A crisis was reached during the week in the internal war between factions of organized labor. On Wednesday at Washington the executive council of the American Federation of Labor cited John L. Lewis and twelve "rebel" unions associated with him in attempting to organize steel industry workers into one industrial union, for trial on Aug. 3. Those cited were formally charged with "fomenting insurrection and rebellion" within the ranks of labor.

The "rebel" group, known as the committee for industrial organization, broke with the federation on the issue of union organization. The committee favors one big union for each industry. The federation insists on the traditional craft union system.

On Thursday William Green, president of the federation, expressed hope that a settlement might be reached before Aug. 3. Observers could see little hope of any agreement. Lewis, who is president of the United Mine Workers of America, and the others associated with him, represent about one million members of organized labor. They have openly defied Green and the federation and have gone ahead with their intensive drive to organize the steel industry. This drive has had the tacit approval of President Roosevelt. Lewis, a supporter of the New Deal, long has been a White House favorite.

Administration leaders, fearful that the internal labor fight would split the labor vote in November, have become apprehensive. Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward McGrady was assigned as a peacemaker between the opposing factions. He is credited with having prevented the outright suspension of the "rebel" unions by the federation council.

It was apparent by the end of the week, however, that unless the federation backs down or compromises, the suspension is inevitable. Lewis and his followers became more defiant following the action of the federation council.

ARCTIC RESCUE.

How the Rev. Father Bernard Hubbard, famous Alaskan explorer, was rescued from a rock in the icy rapids of Twin Glacier river, Alaska, through the aid of a party led by Mary Joyce, Alaska's noted "lady musher," was disclosed by the clergyman. He said he managed to jump on the rock after his boat smashed against it. His companion, Ken Chisolm, University of Santa Clara football player, swam to shore. After he had been on the rock several hours the Rev. Father Hubbard was sighted by Miss Joyce, who was in a motorboat.

Reports from China indicated a renewal of civil war as a result of Canton's declaration of war against Japan and its attempt to force the Nanking national government to resist Japan. The government on Monday rejected Canton's proposal for resistance. Next day, however, Generals Li Tsung-jen and Bei Tsung-hsi of Kwangsi province decided to support Canton. Fighting broke out on Wednesday between the Cantonese and Nankingese. Missionaries had to flee. In some places rail service was halted. One important bridge was destroyed. By Thursday and Friday Nanking troops were reported advancing, and finding little resistance. [See main news section.]

Brazil's long coast line and nine international borders were guarded carefully all last week to prevent the entry of Bela Kun, former communist dictator of Hungary. Police Chief Filinto Mueller of the Rio de Janeiro federal district, said he had reports that Bela Kun had been ordered to Brazil by the communist international. He also said he had heard that "another dangerous agitator," Otto Braun, was headed for Brazil. Bela Kun became president of Hungary when that country fell under bolshevist control after the world war. He was forced to flee from Hungary in 1920. Then he returned to Russia where he had been a commander of the Red army.

Spy Scandal.

John S. Farnsworth, 43 years old, a former lieutenant commander in the United States navy, was placed in jail in Washington, D. C., Tuesday, under $10,000 bail, on a charge of selling naval secrets to a Japanese officer. He is accused of disposing of a pamphlet telling about scouting, screening, and strategy. Farnsworth asserted the only documents he handled were obsolete, not secret and his personal property. Admiral William H. Standley denied this, and said that it might be necessary now to revise naval strategy. Washington officials are proceeding cautiously with the case since a friendly nation, Japan, is allegedly involved.

Flying

Work was begun Thursday on a $400,000 project to improve the Joliet airport by the Works Progress administration. When the improvements have been completed the field will be an alternate air terminal for Chicago. "Our airport has been used many times by air liners for emergency landings in bad weather," said Glenn G. Paul, secretary of the Joliet park district, "but since air liners have become larger and faster it is imperative that landing facilities be improved and expanded."

The bureau of air commerce announced Thursday in Washington a new set of airway "trafic control" regulations, to become effective Aug. 15. The new rules provide that only pilots who have demonstrated their ability to navigate entirely by instruments and radio will be permitted to make "intentional instrument flights on civil airways." Ninety-eight such airways have been designated by the department of commerce. Eastbound aircraft on civil airways must fly at odd thousand foot levels, such as 1,000, 3,000, 5,000. Westbound aircraft must fly at even thousand foot levels. Planes crossing a civil airway must fly at an altitude 500 feet above or below the prescribed odd or even thousand foot levels.

Navajo Thunderbird, giant new air liner of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., was about to leave the Los Angeles terminal of the line. Chief Willowbird, Indian artist, had finished painting the picture of a thunderbird, a rain omen among Indians, inside the ship's cabin door. Shortly after take off the plane flew into a rain, which continued until the air liner reached Pittsburgh. The maiden flight was completed Thursday at the Newark, N. J., airport.

Orville Knapp, orchestra leader, was killed Thursday at the Beverly, Mass., airport when a plane he was piloting crashed. His motor stalled just after a take off and the plane plunged 150 feet to earth. On the same day Ensign O. W. Lowmaster and Machinist's Mate A. J. Yassay of the naval aviation reserve station at Grosse Isle, Mich, were killed when the navy plane in which they were flying crashed during an electrical storm near Murfreesboro, Tenn.

BARNEY'S DEBUT.

Barney, 350 pound orang-utan of the Lincoln park zoo, now has a public. For the last ten years Barney has been confined in a cage of the zoo hospital because there was no exhibition cage available which was strong enough to hold him. Recently such a cage was vacated by the death of Sunny, another ape, and Barney was brought out to see the public for the first time since his arrival from Borneo in 1926.

LESS DRINKING.

The United States Brewers' association reported that the per capita consumption of liquor in the United States now is two-thirds less than it was in 1917.

Crime

Contrary to a statement she once made—"They don't convict women for murder in Cook county"—Mrs. Mildred Mary Bolton, 46, was found guilty and her punishment fixed at death in the electric chair by a jury Thursday in the Criminal court of Judge Robert C. O'Connell. The jury of eleven married men and one widower took only thirty minutes to decide that Mrs. Bolton was guilty of killing her husband, Joseph, an insurance broker, in his Jackson boulevard office on June 15.

Testifying in her own defense Wednesday Mrs. Bolton surprised the packed courtroom by admitting that she had killed Bolton because he called her an abusive name. Previously she had maintained her husband was killed accidentally as both struggled for the revolver. The defense attempted, unsuccessfully, to show that Mrs. Bolton was mistreated by an unfaithful husband. The prosecution proved these allegations false and also proved that Mrs. Bolton had attacked her husband many times.

Sitting stolidly throughout the trial the pudgy defendant became emotional only once or twice. She heard the death verdict calmly. In her cell at the county jail after the trial she maintained a stony hauteur, refusing to talk to reporters. "I won't talk, I've talked too much already," she said.

A sensation developed Friday at St. Paul in the trial of Jack Peifer, night club owner accused of participating in the $100,000 kidnaping of William Hamm Jr. Byron Bolton, a government witness in the trial, who previously pleaded guilty, testified that $25,000 of the ransom money paid for Hamm's release was for Thomas Brown, former St. Paul police chief and recently head of the police auto theft division.

Brown was suspended immediately and an investigation of his activities was begun. Earlier in the week Alvin Karpis, leader of the Barker-Karpis gang accused of the kidnaping, entered a plea of guilty, as did Edmund C. Bartholmey, former postmaster at Bensenville, Ill., where Hamm was kept a prisoner. [See main news section.]

Helen Clevenger, 19, blonde New York university honor student, was shot to death in a hotel room at Asheville, N. C., Thursday. Her assailant mutilated her face with a knife and attempted to rape her. The crime was discovered by the young woman's uncle, Prof. W. L. Clevenger of North Carolina State college at Raleigh, with whom the young woman came to Asheville for a vacation. She was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Clevenger of Great Kills, Staten Island, N. Y. Asheville police held Joe Urey, colored bellhop, for questioning. [See main news section.]

A gigantic interstate stock swindle in which investors were swindled out of 10 million dollars over a period of fifteen years was revealed in an indictment returned Tuesday in federal court at Gainesville, Ga., which named five defunct Illinois brokerage houses and twenty-four individuals. These men, it is charged, operated a network of bucket shops with headquarters in Chicago.

Operations of the ring extended into more than half the states of the Union, however. Ten of the men accused surrendered immediately in Chicago. Of them three are regarded as ringleaders in the swindle. They are Joseph R. Mendelson, Leonard L. Sutterman, and Joseph N. Sherman. Their bail was set at $5,000 each. By the end of the week several others of the accused had surrendered or been taken into custody.

The second woman to die this year on an English gallows, Mrs. Charlotte Bryant, mother of five children, was hanged Wednesday at Exeter, England. A crowd of 1,000 persons milled about outside the prison walls as the time for hanging drew near. As expected, Mrs. Violet Van der Elst, militant crusader against capital punishment, appeared in her cream colored limousine and attempted to address the crowd. She was arrested and later fined $25. Mrs. Bryant was convicted of the poison murder of her husband.

Religion

Parishioners and clergymen of the Church of England were discussing one of the most unusual incidents of recent church history. On Sunday the Bishop of Chichester, the Rt. Rev. George Bell denied communion to James Bunting, young scenario writer. The bishop charged Bunting had violated the fifth commandment: "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Bunting's parents died recently in a gas filled bedroom. A letter left by the father, curate of Camelsdale parish, said his son had the bulk of his fortune. A coroner's jury, in a rider to its verdict, criticized young Bunting for not helping his parents when they needed money. Bunting admitted he had between $15,000 and $20,000 of his parents' money, but asserted he had begun to help them before they died.

POLLY'S TRAGEDY.

Neighbors of Polly Moran, film comedienne, in private life Mrs. Martin Malone, were aroused early Wednesday by a woman screaming, "Don't kill me! Don't shoot!" The neighbors summoned police, who said that on their arrival they saw Malone, a pistol in his hand, struggling with Miss Moran near an upstairs window. Malone turned his pistol toward the policemen and ordered them away. Polly ran downstairs and opened the door. Malone followed and was handcuffed after a struggle. At the police station Malone was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. It was discovered that a cartridge had jammed in the pistol, preventing it from firing. Police said Malone was intoxicated. He was freed later in $500 bail. Miss Moran said she intended to file divorce proceedings.

MISS LIBERTY IS 50.

For the first time in fifty years the tricolor of France was flown Monday and Tuesday from the Statue of Liberty on Bedloe's Island in New York harbor. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the statue, a gift of the people of France to the people of the United States.

Medicine

"Go to the ant thou sluggard, learn his ways and be wise," is a bit of Biblical advice to man.

And now comes the American Osteopathic association with a new bit of advice that may be paraphrased as follows:

"Go to the cat, thou 20th century man, learn his ways and relax."

The association, in its Osteopathic magazine, out last week, says that "man has much to learn from the cat, who has never lost the art of relaxation. Man forgets that it is the periods of relaxation that keep him in trim for activity." The annual vacation, the weekly holiday, fishing or other leisurely pursuits are not enough rest for the average man, says the magazine.

"It is the daily habit of letting down for a few moments between times of closing the eyes for a bit of a snooze, of looking out the windows at nothing, that every one needs," continues the magazine. "Constant tension, whether one is working at work, or working at play, tears down. Bodies need their cat naps.

Children in North Carolina are being taught mouth health through employment of a puppet show. Dr. Ernest A. Branch, director of oral hygiene in that state, told about it before the American Dental association convention in San Francisco, Monday. The puppet show has to do with a boy whose aching tooth kept him from a circus. The boy goes to a dentist. The dentist cures the boy's fear, treats his tooth painlessly, and gives him a good talking to on care of the mouth. The show has been presented to nearly 250,000 school children during the last twelve months.

Robert Pershing Wadlow of Alton, Ill., measured himself Monday. He found he had gained 1¼ inches since Feb. 22, his eighteenth birthday, making him 8 feet 5 inches tall. If the young Alton giant's measurements are correct, he will supplant the famed Irish giant, Charles Byrne [O'Brien] as the tallest person in medical history. Byrne was slightly more than 8 feet 4 inches when he died in 1783.

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—A steady to firm undertone characterized routine trading in bonds today on the New York Stock exchange. The absence of many traders was reflected in the moderate turnover for the two hour trading period, sales amounting to only $4,521,000, compared with $5,608,000 last Saturday.

The moderate recovery in most of the long term United States government loans stood out as the most conspicuous group movement and brought to a halt the steady decline in those issues which began early in the week following the announcement by the federal reserve board in lifting member bank reserve requirements.

U. S. Low Yield Bonds Rally.

The recovery in the treasury issues was most pronounced among the lower coupon bonds—namely: the treasury 2¾s and 2⅞s, and the guaranteed loans. Net gains of 1-32 to 7-32 point were shown in those issues, while several of the higher coupon issues eased off 1 to 3-32 point. The turnover in treasury bonds was only $36,000, against $154,200 a week ago.

A comparatively restricted group of pivotal corporate liens provided about the only movements of more than nominal fractions in the corporate department. Kansas City Southern 5s moved up 1½ points following publication of the June net operating income figures.

Pure Oil 4¾s advanced 2 points and Parmelee Transportation 6s gained 1⅞.

Others making some progress included Allis Chalmers 4s, International Papers 6s, Nickel Plate 4½s, Missouri, Kansas and Texas adjustment 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s, and Utility Power and Light 5½s. Losers included International Telephone 5s, Baltimore and Ohio 4½s, St. Paul 5s, North Western 4¾s, and Chesapeake 5s.

Bank Stocks.

Investors wishing to eliminate the speculative element as much as possible long have pursued the policy of placing their funds in high grade corporate bonds or in government obligations.

The present abnormally low interest returns, fears of drastic inflation, and a belief that money rates are bound to rise in the next few years have sent this type of person seeking other channels of investment.

A few investors, including insurance companies and investment trusts, have purchased bank stocks. Those who bought at the depressed market prices of 1933 and early 1934 have obtained sensational paper profits—in some instances the stocks are quoted at more than double, or even quadruple, the figures of two and three years ago. Some banks not paying dividends at that time have resumed distributions. Others have approached the stage where resumption of dividends soon may be justified.

Few banks, however, are paying dividends equal to a yield of much more than 2 per cent at current prices.

Nor are bank stocks looked upon as particularly attractive from the standpoint of near term appreciation in market value. The sharp rise in prices during the last two years is believed to have discounted most of the improvement in banking conditions.

What attractiveness there is in bank stocks lies in the possibilities presented by the long term outlook.

It is difficult to conceive of bank earning power at a lower ebb than in recent years. A major part of bank funds is lying idle because of lack of demand for loans.

The logic used by those urging bank shares as a desirable form of investment is that demand for money will increase sooner or later, more loans will be made, and rates of interest naturally will increase. All of this, they point out, should be reflected in much higher bank earnings, larger dividends, and higher prices for the shares, while fixed interest bonds, under such circumstances would probably be depressed.

The men and women who held stock of banks that failed in recent years not only lost their entire principal but were held for "double liability" assessments. The added hazard of double liability, however, has been eliminated in all new national banks and can be removed on other national bank shares after July 1, 1937, by action of individual boards of directors. A similar change has been approved for New York state banks, and other states are expected to follow suit sooner or later.

THREE UTILITY BOND ISSUES ARE EXPECTED SOON

Several Other Companies Plan New Loans.

Three bond offerings of 10 million dollars and more may be made this week on passage of the required twenty day period since registration with the Securities and Exchange commission. They include those of the Indianapolis Water, Wisconsin Michigan Power, and Arkansas Louisiana Gas companies.

The $13,875,000 first mortgage bonds to be issued by the Indianapolis company will bear 3½ per cent interest, and will be due July 1, 1936. Net proceeds will be used to redeem outstanding obligations of higher interest rates and for general corporate purposes. Morgan Stanley & Co. is expected to underwrite the issue.

Plans 3¾ Per Cent Issue.

Wisconsin Michigan Power of Milwaukee, Wis., plans an offering of $10,500,000 of first mortgage bonds, 3¾ per cent series, due 1961. Net proceeds with other treasury funds will be used to redeem on Sept. 1, first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, amounting to $5,000,000, and the same amount of 4½ per cent first mortgage bonds.

Arkansas Louisiana Gas, located at Shreveport, La., plans to issue 10 million dollars of first mortgage 4s, due 1951. Proceeds together with $10,000,000 principal amount of 5 per cent debentures, due July 1, 1952, and soon to be issued, are to be applied to the discharge of the company's obligation to Arkansas Natural Gas corporation, parent company, and for working capital. Edward B. Smith & Co., New York City, is the principal underwriter.

Chicago Company Represented.

A Chicago concern will be represented in the week's list of scheduled offerings, inasmuch as North American Car corporation will become eligible tomorrow to issue $2,500,000 of 4½ per cent equipment trust certificates, series O. due serially 1936 to 1946. The certificates are redeemable at the principal amount plus a premium of 2 per cent if redeemed prior to June 15, 1941, and plus a premium of 1 per cent thereafter to maturity.

Proceeds will be used as follows: $540,000 to convert 300 live poultry cars into refrigerator cars; $575,450 to retire outstanding equipment trust certificates; $430,000 to retire purchase money obligations; $450,000 to retire bank loans; and the balance for working capital.

Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., New York, plans to issue 103,866 shares of $10 par common stock to present stockholders of record July 28 at $50 a share in the ratio of one new share for each four shares held, with rights expiring Aug. 17.

COTTON PRICES DEPRESSED BY GOOD WEATHER REPORTS

Favorable weather conditions had a depressing effect on cotton futures yesterday. Leading American markets closed with net losses of 7 to 14 points. [A point is equal to 1-100 cents.] Central Georgia received much needed rain, with some showers in the Carolinas.

Spot cotton closed 10 to 15 points lower. New Orleans, 12.80 cents; Galveston and Houston, 12.70 cents; New York, 13.10 cents per pound. Prices follow:

FURNITURE SALES RISE, FACTORIES RUN AT CAPACITY

Chicago's Two Shows Set New Records.

Furniture manufacturers throughout the country were gearing operations to full time production yesterday as Chicago's two furniture shows, which have been under way for two weeks, closed with new records established.

At the American Furniture Mart 9,250 buyers were registered, more than a thousand in excess of any previous exposition. At the Merchandise mart attendance totaled 9,005 persons, a gain of 34 per cent over last year's show, and also a new peak.

Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the Furniture Mart, estimated business originating from the show will exceed $100,000,000, of which $60,000,000 was closed in the last two weeks and $40,000,000 will consist of repeat or follow up orders. Percy Wilson, managing director of the Merchandise mart, said orders for home furnishings approximating $16,000,000 were placed during the period with his organization's exhibitors.

Whiting said that the firming of prices which were 5 to 8 per cent above last winter, attributed to higher taxes and material and labor costs, provided no resistance to buying. A survey of exhibitors showed that sales gains over the last market event ranging as high as 78 per cent were recorded, while the average increase was 25 per cent.

He said most exhibitors were forced to turn down orders for delivery within sixty to seventy-five days. This policy was adopted a few days after the exposition opened, when buyers swamped manufacturers with orders.

Wilson said that based on expressions from leading manufacturers the furniture industry, as the result of heavy ordering done during the current markets, can look forward to the longest period of sustained full strength production that it has known in seven years.

John H. Jennings Retires; Served Bank for 47 Years

John H. Jennings, 5948 North Hermitage avenue, yesterday retired from his position with the First National Bank of Chicago after forty-seven years of service with the institution. Mr. Jennings became associated with the bank in 1889 and has been active for many years in the management of the messenger and in-mail department.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In the chart which appeared on this page yesterday it was shown that four leading meat packers do 82 per cent of the meat packing business of the country. These percentages were calculated by comparing the total sales of the companies as shown by their annual reports with the total value of products for the industry as reported by the United States census bureau.

This method exaggerated the extent of the concentration in the industry for the reason that the sales of the companies as shown by their annual reports include many products other than meat, and the statistics of the census bureau for industry include only meat products.

The Institute of American Meat Packers has supplied a table prepared by the United States department of agriculture which shows that the four leading companies handled only 38.3 per cent of the meat supply of the country in 1929.

Net profit of the Caterpillar Tractor company for the first six months of 1936 was $4,481,091 before provision for possible surtaxes on undistributed earnings, compared with $2,908,153 for the same period last year. The figures were incorrectly carried in these columns a few days ago as June quarter profits.

CHICAGO BANKS' SHARES FIRMER IN LAST WEEK

Chicago bank stocks last week were steady to higher, sharp gains being recorded in several instances. Among these were a jump of $7 a share in First National stock to $280 bid, $284 asked, after ranging between a low of $273 and a high of $283. Northern Trust soared $35 a share during the week to reach $835 bid, $845 asked. Merchandise Bank and Trust company rose $30 a share in a light turnover to close at $270 bid, $280 asked.

Continental Illinois closed unchanged for the week at $164 bid, $166 asked, after a low price of $162 and a high of $165. Terminal National was also unchanged at $28 bid, $30 asked. Harris Trust was up $5 a share at $400 bid, $415 asked.

City National was in better demand and closed $3 a share higher at $125 bid, $129 asked. Lake Shore Trust and Savings was unchanged at $65 bid, $70 asked. Chicago Title and Trust rose $6 a share to $172 bid, $175 asked.

CHICAGO STOCKS MOST ACTIVE SINCE LAST MAY

A turnover of 21,000 shares on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday boosted total trading for the last week to 261,000 shares, largest since the week ended last May 2. The close yesterday found the market irregular with 26 issues higher, 31 lower, and 17 unchanged for the day.

Abbott Laboratories continued to forge ahead to another all-time peak at 149, where it closed for a net gain of 2 points on the day. Cities Service was the most active issue, but closed unchanged at 4⅝. Zenith Radio rose ⅜ to equal its peak since 1929 at 31½.

The trend last week was distinctly upward. Of 176 issues traded, 97 advanced, 48 declined, and 31 remained unchanged.

Studebaker Export Sales Reported at New Peak

Export sales of Studebaker passenger cars and trucks reached a new peak during the first half of 1936, Paul G. Hoffman, president, said yesterday. He reported that 6,633 units were sold abroad during this period compared with 5,069 in the first six months of 1935. Deliveries of passenger cars and trucks by Studebaker dealers in the United States alone, totaled 1,754 during the first ten days of July compared with 1,345 during the corresponding period of last year.

BUILDING SHOWS GAIN IN ILLINOIS FOR SIXTH MONTH

Figures for June Continue Trend Over Year Ago.

BY AL CHASE.

For the sixth consecutive month building construction in Illinois as shown in the June totals, registered a gain in dollar value over the same month of 1935. Last month's figures, in both number and cost, also were larger than the preceding month of May. The first six months of this year showed a substantial gain both in number of projects and dollar value over the same period of last year.

From January to June, inclusive, there were permits issued in 96 Illinois cities for 9,821 building projects of various sorts, calling for an expenditure of $28,243,914.

Show Gain Over Year Ago.

These figures compare with 7,028 permits during the same period last year, with a dollar value of $15,040,745, which is a gain of 39.7 per cent in number and 87.8 per cent in estimated cost.

According to the building survey, made by the division of statistics and research of the Illinois department of labor, the largest gain during the first six months of 1936 was in new residential building. Permits in that classification jumped from 469 last year to 1,323 this year, a gain of 182.1 per cent, and from $2,856,388 to $8,750,696 in estimated cost, an increase of 206.4 per cent.

June Shows Large Increase.

The estimated dollar cost of construction for which permits were issued during June, 1936, was $6,065,322, compared with $2,832,468 in June, 1935, a gain of 114 per cent. The number of permits issued last month was 2,564, compared with 1,613 in June, last year, a gain of 59 per cent.

The principal gain was in residential construction, there being 369 permits, with a value of $2,462,222, against 136 permits, valued at $853,764. This is a gain of 171.3 per cent in number and 188.4 per cent in estimated cost.

There were gains all along the line in the June-May comparisons. The number of projects was 6.8 per cent higher and the dollar value 11.2 per cent greater.

Other States Show Gains.

Residential building in the 37 states east of the Rockies during June amounted to $73,604,600, a gain of 5 per cent over May and 48 per cent over June, 1935, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation, which said home construction activity at present is the most active since 1931.

Construction of all descriptions for June totaled $233,054,600, compared with $148,005,200 in June last year. Nonresidential building accounted for $79,078,900, against $59,035,800 last year.

Aggregate new construction in the 37 states during the first six months of 1936 amounted to $1,237,731,000, compared with $696,507,000 for the corresponding period of 1935.

FEDERAL WAGE RULES GO INTO EFFECT SEPT. 28

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—Secretary Perkins announced tonight that the Walsh-Healey act imposing wage and hour restrictions on firms contracting with the government would go into effect on Sept. 28.

At the same time the National Association of Manufacturers said in a bulletin to its members that the act "could be applied only within very narrow limits and cited the clause excepting goods which "may be bought in the open market" as a channel for numerous exemptions.

Among other things, the new law provides that manufacturers or dealers in bidding on government contracts must agree to establish an eight-hour day and 40-hour work week, ban convict and child labor, and provide sanitary and safe working conditions.

The act also requires the contractor to pay wages prevailing in the locality. Secretary Perkins said the rate of the minimum wages would be determined only after public hearings.

The Manufacturers' Association based its opinion that the act could be applied only "within very narrow limits" on various opinions handed down in interpretation of a 1912 law which, it said, sought to impose an eight-hour day on government contractors.

FOREIGN MONEY LITTLE CHANGED AGAINST DOLLAR

The foreign exchange market was dull and narrow yesterday, with little news of importance to influence rates. Most of the business was in the way of evening up operations for the week-end.

Not even the Spanish peseta was disturbed much by the reported military revolt in Morocco and possibly elsewhere. The Spanish currency in New York lost only 1 point to close at 13.73 cents.

The French franc softened ¼ point to 6.62¾ cents, at which level the American dollar was worth 100.09 cents, compared with 100.05 cents Friday.

Dutch guilders were unchanged at 68.16 cents, but the Swiss franc dipped ½ point to 32.75 cents. The pound sterling closed at $5.03⅛, a gain of ⅛ cent.

The Federal Reserve bank of New York reported the arrival of $118,500 in gold from India. During the week this country gained $942,200 in gold through import. Of this amount, $418,000 was received at New York—$373,100 from India, $40,100 from Russia, and $4,800 from Guatemala, and $529,000 at San Francisco, of which $290,000 came from Australia and $239,000 from China.

FRENCH SEIZURE OF BANK VIEWED INFLATION MOVE

Blum Regime Plans Vast Spending.

BY HOWARD WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Seizure of the privately owned Bank of France by the new French radical government is regarded by financial experts in the United States as another milestone in the steady progress of world wide inflation.

Peering behind the smoke screen of political bombast these experts see in the Blum government's move a definite breaking down of the restraints on government spending with a consequent increase in the supply of money and a prospect of gradual dilution of the quality of that money.

As was the case when the New Deal government tightened its control of the banking system in this country, the chief motivating factor is the need of an extravagant government to insure its ability to drain bank funds to cover its extravagances.

Control Follows Borrowing Needs.

It is regarded as significant that the political clamor for government grabbing of control of central banks intensifies in almost direct proportion to the government's borrowing needs and that England, the only leading nation which has been operating without a serious budgetary deficit, is now the only important nation whose central bank is not owned or controled by the government.

The Blum government in France accompanied its seizure of control of the Bank of France by strongly emphasizing abuses existing in the system of private control, which dates from the days of Napoleon. It has sought to give the impression that a need for "reform" motivated the government's "muscling in."

Abuses Not Chief Factor.

Certain abuses have been apparent in the system whereby 200 largest private stockholders controled the Bank of France, but these abuses are clearly not the big reason for the government's grabbing control. The real reason lies in the French government's string of deficits and its desperate need for a convenient source from which to continue its heavy borrowing to finance its rearmament program and the "social security" schemes of the Blum group.

Originally the statutory limit of the goverment's short term borrowings from the Bank of France was 10 billion francs. Early in 1935 this limit was pushed up to 15 billions and last March was boosted still further to 21 billions. Even this, however, was not enough. French investors, fearing inflation and currency debasement, hesitate to buy their government's bonds.

Can't Get Foreign Loans.

Desperate, the government has sought to borrow in Amsterdam and London and has even toyed with the idea of trying to float a loan in the United States. These sources, however, are not very receptive. France's only "out," therefore, is to pour more of its paper into the Bank of France. As long as the bank was under private control there was resistance to this scheme, which is definitly inflationary. Under government control there will be no resistance. The government will run the show and the lending policy of the bank will be dictated by its chief debtor.

Germany and Italy long ago set the pattern. In Germany the reichsbank is merely a department of the Nazi government. There is no resistance to government borrowing, no matter what amount. The condition of the reichsbank cannot be ascertained from the figures released for publication because the figures are tricky.

Nazis Juggle Borrowing.

One stunt recently adopted by the Nazis to conceal the true condition has been to cause the Gold Discount bank, a wholly owned subsidiary of the reichsbank to discount government paper, the figures not showing in the statement of the reichsbank itself.

In Italy, where a government budget already dangerously out of balance was further undermined by the cost of the Ethiopian war and by the effects of sanctions imposed by the league of nations, even control of the Bank of Italy was not enough. A few months ago Mussolini signed a decree taking over the privately owned commercial banks as well. The Fascists contend that this action was taken to insure the soundness of the big Italian banks, but if they were in bad condition it was because the government bonds which they held were unsound, because their assets consisted almost entirely of such bonds received in exchange for other assets previously turned over to the government.

U. S. Controls Reserve Banks.

In the United States the government did not wait to seize control of the twelve federal banks until encountering difficulty in the marketing of its securities. The commercial banks are still readily absorbing all government offerings, but as a precautionary measure congress in the banking act of 1935 took from the twelve reserve banks their power of deciding when to buy government bonds and in what quantities.

The decision, under the act, is now reserved to an "open market" committee, dominated by the board of governors of the reserve system. The reserve banks themselves enjoy only a minority representation on this committee and they do not even own the government securities they buy.

High Pressure Boys Working from Canada

BY HERBERT VEDDER.

The Tribune Investors' Guide today discloses that American investors are being subjected to high pressure, long distance telephone salesmanship of securities from across the Canadian border.

Several months ago a representative of the Investors' Guide department noticed that H. M. Carruthers & Co., stock and bond brokers of Toronto, was distributing literature about little known mining stocks and had his name placed on the company's mailing list.

Immediately he began receiving H. M. Carruthers' Surveys each week, with occasional personalized form letters about specific opportunities for profits.

Reported "Up and Coming."

Two successive issues of the surveys contained articles commenting on Lamaque Contact Gold Mines, and it's "now obtaining general recognition with the investing public as an up-and-coming gold mine-in-the-making" with a "notable and well merited enhancement in the value of its properties and shares."

Then a follow-up letter about Lamaque Contact arrived.

Finally, came a long distance phone call from Toronto last Wednesday.

"This is H. M. Carruthers," announced a big, friendly voice. "So far you haven't availed yourself of our service, so I am calling this morning to get you started off right with a stock that will give you a real profit.

Suggests Immediate Purchase.

"Lamaque Contact is at 39½ to 40 cents a share this morning. You recall our Survey reported it at 35 cents only a few days ago and at 28 the first of the month. I suggest that you buy right away."

A protest was smothered.

"You want to get in immediately. The market is moving now and it's really going places. I'm telling you you'll make enough money on this to make you a lifelong customer of ours.

"The same people—the Lucas group—are handling this that sponsored Red Lake Gold Shore which has gone from 25 cents to $2 a share in a few weeks.

"I know definitly you will make a lot of money on Lamaque Contact. I'll let you know when to sell. All you need do is promise you will sell when I give you the word.

"Just let me handle this—I'll tell you what I'll do. I was fortunate enough to get a block at 39 cents this morning, and I won't charge you a penny commission because I want to start you on the road to profits. Could you take 1,000 shares? That would be just $390. You can pay me when you get the bill."

"Just Leave It to Us."

Another protest drew from Carruthers:

"Just leave it to us. You can't go wrong or I wouldn't phone you long distance. All I ask is that you let me have the names of two or three of your friends if you are satisfied. I know you'll decide to take the stock by the time our statement arrives."

Investors' Guide has turned over samples of the literature and a report of this telephone conversation to the Chicago office of the Securities and Exchange commission. Thomas A. Reynolds, regional administrator, has promised an investigation to determine whether H. M. Carruthers & Co. may be subject to prosecution for violation of United States security legislation or sending through the United States mail literature containing misrepresentations.

And Here's the Bill.

Yesterday the following letter was received from the Carruthers company:

Herbert E. Vedder, Esq.,
435 N. Michigan avenue,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Vedder:

Enclosed herewith find confirmation covering your purchase of 500 shares of Lamaque Contact at 39c per share.

Upon receipt of your remittance, certificate will be forwarded to you by registered mail.

Thanking you for this business and assuring you of our desire to be of service to you, we are

Yours very truly,
H. M. Carruthers &
Company, Limited,
By H. J. Mooney.

Enclosed in the letter was a statement for 500 shares at 39 cents a share, totaling $195.

COMMODITY PRICES SHOW NARROW RANGE DURING LAST WEEK

Commodity markets moved within relatively narrow limits last week, with the exception of grains, although price fluctuations were erratic. Cocoa sold at a new high level for the season and since 1933. Butter eased ⅝ cent per pound but was only a major fraction under the best level of the season, with prevailing prices the highest since 1930. Liberal quantities of Polish, Latvian, Siberian, and Holland butter are due to arrive at New York later this month.

Hide prices scored a good advance on prospects that liquidation of cattle in the range states would not be as heavy as anticipated. Rubber, coffee, sugar, and lard declined moderately. Wheat, oats, and rye in the Chicago market closed somewhat under the final trades of the previous week. Corn reacted after establishing a new high for the season and selling at the best price for this season of year since 1929.

Closing prices on a representative list of commodities during the last two weeks, with the high and low levels for the season, compare as follows:

GROWING TRAFIC PUSHES BUYING OF RAIL EQUIPMENT

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Expanding freight and passenger trafic of American railroads is taxing the carriers' facilities, it was indicated in reports of equipment buying and inquiries filtering into Wall street today.

Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company was said to have received orders for 50 covered hopper cars from the Aluminum Ore company and for six coaches and four combination passenger and baggage cars from the Seaboard Air Line.

Reports said the Union Pacific railroad had ordered a 3,600 horsepower diesel-electric locomotive from the Electro-Motive corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors. The engine, it was said, will be used as reserve power for the road's streamlined trains. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe is said to have ordered 10 hopper cars from American Car and Foundry company.

Inquiries reported to be in the market call for prices on the rebuilding of 1,000 hopper cars for the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and for six new caboose cars for the Lehigh and New England railroad.

INDUSTRY SETS NEW HIGH MARK FOR RECOVERY

New York, July 18. — (AP) — Rising another notch, industrial activity today registered its seventh consecutive thrust into the highest ground for the recovery move. Measured by the Associated Press index, activity stepped up to 93.1 of the 1929-'30 average, compared with 92.6 last week and 71.7 a year ago.

The index, its seasonally adjusted indices based on the latest available statistics, and with 1929-'30 as 100, follows:

Chicago Dredge Company Gets U. S. Harbor Contract

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—The war department approved today a $511,000 contract to the Fitzsimmons & Connell Dredge and Dock company of Chicago, for the dredging of Calumet harbor in Indiana and Illinois.

Produce Mart Fees Slashed by Court Rule

Fees of $67,750 for five attorneys and law firms for services in connection with reorganizing the management of the Chicago Produce District trust were allowed yesterday by Judge Joseph Sabath of the Superior court. They had asked for $185,000.

The largest fee went to Attorney Samuel P. Gurman of Olson & Gurman, who represented the original plaintif bondholder, Benjamin Weintroub, since named an associate trustee, in his action to oust the original trustees.

Gurman requested $100,000, and was allowed $40,000. The court said that Gurman's services would have been worth $100,000 in an ordinary case, but that in this case the bondholders had already suffered large losses from the depression and considerable expense in forming the trust. Gurman said 5,400 hours were spent on the case.

Seeks to Preserve Estate.

"The court feels that it is its duty to preserve the estate to the utmost and save every penny it can for these bondholders," Judge Sabath said in his order. "The court feels that lawyers as officers of the court bear this same responsibility and willingly give of their services when called on to do so for the common good."

The law firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann, Levinson & Morse, who represented the defendants, S. J. T. Straus, Melvin L. Straus, Sidney H. Kahn, Albert J. Weisberg, Henry R. Platt Jr., Hugh McLennan, and B. K. Goodman, were allowed $13,500 of a claim for $40,000.

Inasmuch as the trust agreement provided that the trustees could retain counsel in all controversies relating to the affairs of the trust, the trust estate must bear the expense of defense counsel.

"In allowing fees for the defense of the trust and the trustees the court feels that it is its duty to require the lawyers to make sacrifices for the benefit of the bondholders," Judge Sabath said.

Asks $25,000, Gets $6,750.

The law firm of Markheim, Parker & Miller which had also represented McLennan, who in addition to being an associate trustee was manager for the trust, had asked $25,000 but was allowed $6,750. Under the new set-up McLennan is retained as an associate trustee and is also co-manager.

Attorneys Samuel A. and Leonard B. Ettelson, who also represented Goodman, retained as an associate trustee, were allowed fees of $6,750. They presented a claim for $20,000. Edward Graff, counsel for Julius C. Shapiro, who joined in the action with other bondholders, was allowed a fee of $750.

The allowance of fees marks the end of litigation in the case with the exception of a pending accounting of $400,000 from several of the former trustees, which was referred to Master in Chancery Harry Smitz. The court yesterday also referred the question of accrued profits since the last hearing to Smitz with an order to report his findings by Oct. 30.

BRITISH FILM CONTROL GOES TO AMERICANS

New York, July 18.—(AP)—Negotiations giving American film interests control of Gaumont-British, Inc., the largest picture producing and distributing company in Great Britain, were reported today to have been completed.

An announcement is expected Monday giving details of the deal whereby Loew's, Inc., obtains an interest in the British concern. Twentieth Century-Fox already owns 49 per cent of the stock of Gaumont-British.

According to informed sources, a new company probably will be set up in England to handle distribution of Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. M-G-M is controled by Loew's. The American companies will distribute Gaumont-British films in the United States.

U.S. Steel Dividend Record Date Is Set for August 1

New York, July 18.—[Special.]—United States Steel corporation has notified the New York Stock exchange that the record date for the next preferred dividend, if declared, will be Aug. 1. Formerly the dividend was payable to stock of record Aug. 2, which this year falls on a Sunday.

SLUMP IN CORN PRICES FOLLOWS LIGHT RAINFALL

Market Breaks Day's Limit of 4 Cents.

Scattered rain over parts of the Illinois, Iowa and Indiana corn belt, combined with lower temperatures, started a general selling movement in corn yesterday by speculators who had handsome profits as the result of the sensational upturn in the market in the last two weeks.

Closing prices were at the bottom with net losses of 4 cents per bushel, the maximum permitted for one day under exchange regulations. July corn, which was in demand at 92⅞ cents at the close on Friday, was offered freely yesterday at 88⅞ cents without interesting buyers.

The reports of rain were generally regarded as greatly exaggerated and too light to be of material benefit except in a relatively limited area.

Commission House Buying Lacking.

Aggressive commission house buying, which has been so much in evidence lately, was lacking and bullish sentiment was further tempered by sales of 341,000 bushels of cash corn for deferred shipment from the country.

Yesterday was the eighth time so far this month that the limit of 4 cents per bushel on one day's advance or decline in corn had been reached, establishing a new record on the Chicago Board of Trade since the regulation was imposed several years ago.

The decline in corn yesterday was in the face of sensationally bullish weather and crop reports from the states west of the Missouri river. Messages from Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma told of record breaking temperatures, which were rapidly destroying the crop. The weekly weather forecast held out little hope of relief.

Only Scattered Showers Expected.

While a few scattered showers are expected, temperatures above normal, especially in the southern portion of the great plains states, are anticipated. Only the Great Lakes area is expected to receive any moisture of consequence.

Official reports to the weather bureau up to 7 a. m. yesterday showed only nine points in the main grain producing states had received one-tenth inch or more of rain during the preceding 24 hours out of over 200 stations which make daily returns.

Closing prices on the September delivery of leading grains, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk.ago.	Yr.ago.
Wheat ….	$1.01¾	$1.05	$1.04½	$0.95⅝
Corn ……	.85⅝	.89⅝	.82⅜	.65⅞
Oats ……	.37	.38⅝	.38⅛	.30⅞
Rye ……	.69⅝	.72⅝	.70⅝	.64⅝

Weakness in corn had considerable influence on other grains. Wheat closed with losses of 3¼ cents, while oats and rye lost 2 cents or more. There was some selling of wheat by traders who were hedging against a further recession in corn, being unable to dispose of their holdings of the latter grain.

Winnipeg wheat was firm at the start in sympathy with an advance to a new high level for several years in Liverpool, but the Canadian market weakened later and closed about 2 cents lower.

CORN RISE NEAR RECORD

Record breaking heat and dry weather in the corn belt lately has resulted in one of the most sensational advances in prices ever witnessed in the history of the Chicago Board of Trade, according to official records. On July 1 the July option sold as low as 66⅝ cents per bushel and touched 93 cents on July 17, an advance of 26⅝ cents and 32⅝ cents above the low figure on June 15.

Only a few times in the history of the exchange have there been wider price movements. In May, 1927, corn futures showed a maximum fluctuation of 23⅛ to 26⅛ cents per bushel. In March, 1925, the range was 31 to 34⅝ cents. The greatest monthly range in the price of any future was in September, 1919, when the September delivery sold between $1.30⅛ and $1.77½ per bushel, after having touched $1.95 in August.

Three cargoes of Argentine corn, or about 750,000 bushels, are understood to have been bought for shipment to the United States during the last week at a price of around 86 cents per bushel delivered at the Atlantic seaboard, duty paid. This is about 10 cents under domestic grain. Leading Chicago cash handlers, however, say Argentine corn normally sells below domestic grain on account of the less favorable quality.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Corporate Earning Power Recovers—Some Profit Reports Best Since 1928 and 1929—Long Period of Gain Predicted—"Business All Right," Says Ford—Stock Prices Advance.

Evidence of the recovery of the earning power of American industry piled up last week when a dozen or more representative corporations placed in the hands of their shareholders reports on operations during the second quarter and the first six months of 1936. The statements provided the most pleasing reading that the shareholders of many corporations have had since 1930, the first depression year. In some instances it was necessary to go back to the peak earning years of 1928 and 1929 to match the results shown in last week's interim statements.

A. T. & T.

To its thousands of stockholders and to the public generally the report on operations of the American Telephone and Telegraph company for the second quarter of the year was the most significant earnings report of the week. Earnings for the three months ended June 30 reached the highest level in five years. At the same time the corporation reported that profits of the Bell system for the three months ended May 31, $2.42 a share, exceeded the current dividend rate on the parent company's stock for the first time in several years. Stockholders of the company have been receiving dividends at the rate of $9 annually throughout the depression, but earnings for several years have fallen far short of this figure. Once again the corporation is in a position to pay its dividend out of earnings instead of drawing on the surplus that has made possible the maintenance of the payments at the full rate when other corporations, almost without exception, were curtailing or omitting their disbursements to their shareholders.

Others Gain.

On Thursday General Electric corporation informed its stockholders that its sales, bookings and profits for the second quarter and first six months of the year were the largest since 1931. The six month profit was $16,592,000, equal to 58 cents a share on the outstanding stock, against $11,541,000, or 40 cents a share in the corresponding period of 1935. Westinghouse Electric company with a second quarter profit of $4,206,000 had the best results since the like period of 1929. United Fruit, Johns-Manville, United corporation, Southern Pacific railway, and Owens-Illinois Glass were among the other concerns whose earnings for the quarter and half year registered sharp increases.

A compilation of earnings of the first 45 corporations to make public their second quarter statements showed an aggregate expansion of approximately 37 per cent over the corresponding 1935 period. The same companies reported an increase of approximately 36 per cent for the 6 month period.

Forecasts.

With such definite results as a basis, optimistic forecasts for the second half of the year were forthcoming. Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland bank economist, averred that the last six months of 1936 should be equally as favorable as the first half, despite political uncertainty and prospective labor disputes. Production is back to the 1930 level, and the steady improvement in the durable goods industries augurs well for the future, he said.

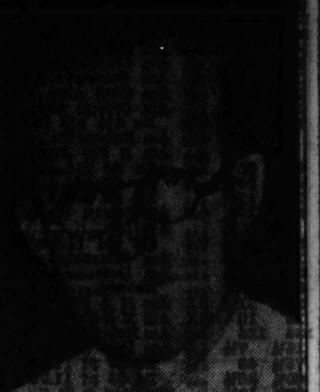
Basing his prediction on the results of a study made for Paramount Pictures, Inc., Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange commission, said: "A long period of general business gain seems definitly ahead. The foundation of genuine recovery laid by enormously increased operating efficiency of industry, unprecedented excess bank reserves, and vast accumulations of deferred demands in the heavy industries, all indicate long life to the period of business improvement and continued increase in the purchasing power and spending ability on the part of the public which supports the motion picture industry."

Kennedy's advice cost the directors of Paramount Pictures $50,000. He had been retained to find out what was wrong with the company and the motion picture industry generally. When his report became public other motion picture companies were free to take advantage of his recommendations.

Paramount.

For one thing, Kennedy told the Paramount board, the executive salaries of the company were too high. The industry should adopt, he said, the "bonus-salary compensation basis" which has been happily applied in the motor industry. He admitted that there was little that could be done about the salaries of movie stars. "Intense and uncontrolable competition" for the "peculiar talents" of the stars makes it virtually impossible to cut down such expenditures," he said.

Kennedy was particularly pointed in his recommendations that producers be curbed in their urge to bring about a "super-colossal" production every time the camera crank was turned. The box office successes among million dollar pictures are too infrequent to justify reckless spending on every production, he said.



JOSEPH P. KENNEDY.

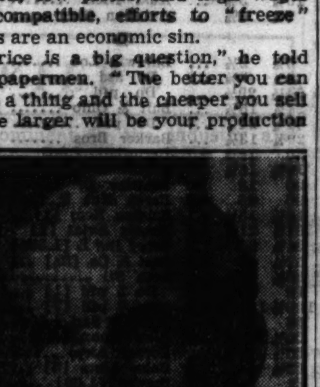
Ford.

"Business is doing all right. Business will continue good in spite of what they do."

So interviewers were told in Detroit on Wednesday by Henry Ford. The persons referred as "they" by Ford were "international bankers" and government burocrats who have long been held in low repute by the motor manufacturer.

When bankers get control of a company, Ford said, they emphasize only the financial side and are mainly interested in the price that the company's product commands. To Ford, who has demonstrated that large production, low prices, and high wages are compatible, efforts to "freeze" prices are an economic sin.

"Price is a big question," he told newspapermen. "The better you can make a thing and the cheaper you sell it, the larger will be your production and the higher the wages you can pay. That has always been my principle in business—big production, low prices, and small profits.



HENRY FORD.
[Harris & Ewing Photo.]

"Of course you can't expect politicians to understand that. They think low prices mean a loss. But all our losses and hindrances are caused by high prices."

Ford singled out the farm implement industry as an example of the wrong approach to the price problem.

"Farm implements," he said, "cost more now since the industry came under the control of financiers. The minute the financiers get hold of anything, they raise the prices. Their only idea is to get in and make money. They are not much interested in production at lower cost."

Indices.

Indices of industry and business showed that the high level of activity is being maintained. There was a moderate tapering off in production in the country's steel mills. Demand from automobile, tractor, and farm implement industries slowed up but orders from other consumers took up most of the slack and no sharp recession was anticipated. The industry was operating at an estimated 68½ per cent of capacity as the week closed, 1 point under the rate of a week earlier.

Statistics on power production disclosed that output for the week ended June 11 had reached an all time peak. The production of 2,029,704,000 kilowatt hours was the highest weekly total ever recorded. Accelerated industrial consumption was largely responsible for the expansion.

Railroad trafic for the fifth consecutive week was maintained at a five year seasonal peak. Car loadings

PROFITS IN COMMODITIES

A profit of 210 points in N. Y. Oct. Cotton in 36 trading days . . . 10½ cents in Sept. Wheat in 4 trading days . . . 4½ cents profit in Oats . . . a 9 point profit in Rye . . . total net profits of 16½ cents in Wheat since June 15. These are some of the profit opportunities that have been available to clients of TECHNIGRAPHICS during the past few weeks.

TECHNIGRAPHICS first recommended the purchase of Cotton while it was still selling below 10.40. Additional purchases were advised at 11.70. When it reached our objective of 12.50, profits of 210 points were available to clients.

Purchase of Wheat, based on threatened drought, was first recommended by TECHNIGRAPHICS on June 16 at 87. On July 1, anticipating the worst effects of the drought, TECHNIGRAPHICS telegraphed clients as follows:

"CANADIAN WHEAT DAMAGE REPORTS SENSATIONALLY BULLISH BUY SEPT. WHEAT FOR MOVE TO $1.10."

The market for September Wheat made a top at $1.10½, then broke nine cents.

What action is indicated now? Do present high commodity prices fully discount bullish factors?

STOCKS CLIMB, LED BY STEELS AND UTILITIES

Favorites Advance 2 to 3 Points.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 18. — Industrial shares were bid up to new high prices for the year on the average in a moderately active week-end market on the stock exchange today. Gains ran as high as 2 and 3 points in more favored issues. Turnover was 557,170 shares.

Traders committed to the advance were pleased by the market's performance, especially in view of the absence of many operators from their posts for the week-end holiday, and a more or less bearish item or two in the day's news, especially that from abroad.

Steels and Utilities Lead.

Trading started slowly, but gradually worked up a little steam and by the time the second hour opened prices were pointing definitly upward under the leadership of the steels and utilities. United States Steel common, which had opened a fraction lower, showed a substantial gain, and Bethlehem, Republic, and other steels also did better.

In the carrier division, Pennsylvania, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, and New York Central were in active demand. Brokers said recovery in car loadings and attendant improvement in railroad earnings were making a distinctly favorable impression on traders, some of whom believe that the rails are behind the industrials.

An outstanding exception to the showing of strength among the leaders of the group was Norfolk and Western which dipped 4½ points on a single sale.

Aircraft Issues Dull.

Publication of figures showing Douglas Aircraft company's unfilled orders totaled $27,000,000 failed to rally any appreciable buying in the aviation issues. Douglas, itself, eased fractionally, and Wright Aero dipped more than a point.

North American was prominent in the utilities division. Motor shares adhered to the upside despite selling in some of the leaders. Both Chrysler and General Motors being up plus signs.

Philip Morris was a bright spot, rising nearly 4 points at one time in a continuation of its steady march into new high ground. Kennecott Copper, United Fruit, and Westinghouse were others to set new price peaks for the year.

The break in grain prices offset whatever good effect the news of rain in the drouth belt might have brought to the farm implements, Case Threshing sliding off some $2.50 a share.

ELECTRIFICATION ON 20 RAIL LINES IS ADVOCATED

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—The federal power commission today published a list of 20 railroads "showing the best possibilities for electrification."

The commission said that electrification now is feasible on an additional 12,000 track miles [covering 5,429 route miles] on the twenty railroads, estimating this would add 4,973,100,000 kilowatt hours to the nation's annual power consumption.

"All of the proposed electrifications are on principal main lines where the greatest density of freight or passenger trafic occurs," the commission said.

The majority selected are eastern roads and coal carriers, the commission said, but electric power was judged feasible for others because of "coordinated operations with existing sections" and the steep grades and tunnels encountered.

Railroad lines on which electrification was considered "feasible" included the Pennsylvania, 351 miles; Baltimore & Ohio, 443 miles; Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, 212 miles; Great Northern, 85 miles; Union Pacific, 483 miles; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, 542 miles, and Southern Pacific, 310 miles.

ACME STEEL'S QUARTER PROFIT SHOWS INCREASE

Other Gains Reported; Rail Results Vary.

Acme Steel company yesterday reported net profit for June quarter was $513,774 after charges and taxes, equal to $1.57 a share on 328,108 capital shares outstanding. This compared with first quarter net of $391,883, or $1.19 a share, and $333,348, or $1.01 a share, in the second quarter of 1935. The figures are given before possible deductions for surtaxes on undistributed profits, the statement said.

Profit of the Sutherland Paper company for the second quarter was $242,047, or 84 cents a common share, against $156,333, or 54 cents a share, in the corresponding 1935 period.

Larger Dividend Indicated.

In reporting the earnings L. W. Sutherland, president, said that provision has been made for normal federal income taxes, but that surtax has not been estimated as increased earnings warant increased dividends which will be announced after the directors' August meeting.

On March 31 and June 30 the company paid quarterly disbursements of 25 cents and an extra 5 cents, or a total of 60 cents for the year to date.

American Chicle company, chewing gum manufacturer, reported profit for the second quarter of $792,516, equal to $1.80 a share on capital stock, compared with $667,319, or $1.50 a share, in the preceding quarter, and $697,918, or $1.57 a share, in the second period of 1935.

Spicer Manufacturing company, automotive accessory firm, had profit for the first six months of $694,716 before federal taxes, against $249,449 for the same half year of 1935.

Rail Earnings Mixed.

Railroad earnings reports were highly mixed, some showing larger profits, other declines, and still others larger losses. An outstanding increase was shown by the Kansas City Southern which had June net operating income of $306,290, or nearly three times the $103,957 earned in the same 1935 month.

The Chicago Great Western has net income of $5,404 for May, against net loss of $33,172 last year. This brought net loss for the first five months of the year to $695,688, against loss of $820,062 a year earlier.

Net of the Louisville & Nashville for the five months ended May 31 was $2,592,121, or $2.21 a share, against $1,075,535, or 92 cents a share last year.

Profit of the Texas & Pacific for the first half year was $525,752, equal to $2.22 a share on 5 per cent preferred stock, against $106,606, or 45 cents a preferred share, in the first half of 1935. June net was $75,346, against $63,165.

Some Report Losses.

May net income of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern was $52,125, against $97,440 in May, 1935, while five months' profit was $167,629, against $38,714.

The Baltimore & Ohio reported a loss of $2,182,671 for the first five months, against a loss of $2,570,144 a year ago. Net loss of the Ann Arbor in May was $27,624, against a profit of $2,772 last year. Its five month loss was $69,760, against profit of $11,988.

The Wabash reported a loss of $247,413 for May, against a loss of $95,021 a year ago. Five month loss was $1,004,879, compared with a deficit of $996,691.

Sherwin-Williams Grants Employes Paid Vacations

New York, July 18.—(AP)—The Sherwin-Williams company of Cleveland, O., manufacturers of paint and varnish, announced here today that factory workers would receive vacations with pay under the same conditions as "white collar" workers. The holiday plan was in line with a movement in steel and other industries. Employés with one year of service will get a week's leave, and those connected for five years will get two weeks. The company's employés number 2,000.

Farm Mortgage Financing 900 Million in Last Year

Washington, D. C., July 18.—(AP)—The Farm Credit administration said today that farm mortgage financing from all sources in this country totaled $900,000,000 for the year ended May 31, compared with $1,440,000,000 for the previous year. The total represented loans by all institutions and individuals, the administration said. Federal land bank and land bank commissioner loans totaled $313,000,000, topping the list.

EARNING POWER OF COMPANIES IS RECOVERING

Some Profits Are Best Since 1928 and 1929.

for the week ended June 11 aggregated 724,324, the second time this year weekly trafic has been above 700,000 cars.

Trade.

In some parts of the country retail trade volume receded with turnover expanding in other sections. Wholesale trade was generally larger, according to estimates.

Failures.

Business failures reported were the smallest since 1920 for the third successive week. The period covered by the report included the five days ended July 9.

Autos.

Automobile production for the week declined moderately with American and Canadian assemblies estimated near 97,500 as compared with approximately 100,500 in the preceding week. The Automobile Manufacturers association on Tuesday estimated that 1936 production would reach 4,600,000 cars and trucks. In only one previous year, 1929, has production topped that figure.

Stocks.

Many stocks advanced to new prices for the year on the New York exchange. A composite price index on industrial shares reached the highest point since 1931, while similar averages for utility and railroad issues were the highest since 1933. All groups closed the week with substantial gains over the preceding week. Basis for the advancing market was the favorable news from business and industry and the outlook for the balance of the year. The turnover in the market was the heaviest since the week ending March 21.

Reserve.

On Monday the board of governors of the federal reserve system announced its decision to raise the reserve requirements of banks belonging to the system by 50 per cent, effective Aug. 15. The action is expected to reduce by approximately one-half the 3 billion dollars of "excess reserves" which the members now have on deposit with the central banks of the system. These idle funds have been regarded as the potential source of an unsound expansion of credit. The effect of the board's belated corrective action was uncertain. Most banks were in a position to comply with the increased requirements with ease. Moderate liquidation in the government bond market after announcement of the ruling indicated some banks were preparing to meet the new requirements by cutting down their investments.

France.

Devaluation of the French franc was believed to have been brought a step nearer on Thursday when the chamber of deputies [see Foreign: Review section] adopted a bill placing the Bank of France under government control. The present council of 15 regents who manage the bank was replaced by a board of 30 counselors, a majority of whom are appointed by the cabinet. Under the setup the bank, heretofore in the control of the shareholders, is placed under political domination. Despite protestations from members of the Blum cabinet that the government is opposed to inflation, developments in France appeared to be heading in that direction.

On the day the deputies acted the Bank of France issued its report showing a gain in the gold reserve for the third consecutive week. The franc was steady in the foreign exchange market.

100% Nichols.

J. M. [100%] Nichols, president of the First National Bank of Englewood on Chicago's south side, has long been a caustic critic of New Deal banking policies. When Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, last week announced the decision to raise the reserve requirements of member banks, it was the occasion for another blast from Nichols.

"There was a time," he said, "when the federal reserve bank was a tower of strength in our financial structure, but today, so far as I can see, it is little more than a waste basket, into which are thrown the laundry checks of one of the most powerful political machines ever devised—a mere clearing house through which to finance the party's squandering and perpetuate its daydreams. That is why we have charged our stock in that institution down to ten cents."

Du Pont Plans to Operate Subsidiary as Department

New York, July 18.—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. plans to dissolve its wholly-owned subsidiary, the du Pont Viscoloid company, and operate it as a department of the parent company, it was reported in Wall street today. Another subsidiary, du Pont Cellophane, Inc., recently was taken into the parent organization. The moves were seen as being in line with those of other large companies which have been simplifying their corporate setups for tax economy purposes.

Put Iron Ore Consumption at 40,000,000 Tons for 1936

Cleveland, O., July 18.—(AP)—The Daily Metal Trade today says: "Judging from the rate at which iron ore is being brought down the great lakes and from the number of vessels in commission, a 40,000,000 ton ore year is rapidly becoming a probability. Ore is being consumed this year at the heaviest rate since 1930 and prospects of still greater consumption are expanding with the rise of scrap prices. Of the 318 ore and coal carrying vessels on the great lakes 247 now are in commission."

RESERVE BANK HERE CUTS STAF AS WORK EASES

Performs Less Service for Federal Government.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago is effecting a readjustment of personnel in connection with its absorption of the work formerly done by the federal reserve agent, whose position has been abolished in all the reserve districts, George J. Schaller, president, said yesterday.

A shrinkage in the volume of work done by various temporary units set up by the bank for the federal government has also resulted in a reduction in the number of employés. Despite the adjustments, however, the bank's staf now numbers 1,323 persons, compared with 1,194 in 1929.

The bank added 200 temporary employés to handle the distribution of veterans' bonus funds for the federal treasury in June. The staf has since been cut to about 150 and will be further reduced as the volume of work declines.

Consolidations Reduce Staf.

About seventy-five persons were formerly employed by the federal reserve agent, who functioned independently of the bank and acted as laison officer with the reserve board in Washington. The absorption of this work by the bank has resulted in some consolidations with the elimination of some employés. Most of the agent's staf was taken over by the bank.

The custodian work handled by the bank for the Reconstruction Finance corporation at one time required 200 employés. The staf has since been reduced to about 100. This work was the heaviest during 1933, when the RFC was making numerous loans to banks which entailed the handling of a great deal of bank collateral. The corn loan program of the RFC during 1933 and 1934 also involved heavy emergency work.

Denies Wholesale Reductions.

"We are not making any wholesale readjustment in personnel," President Schaller said. "Certain temporary workers are being dropped and some other changes are being made in the permanent staf."

The reserve bank is reimbursed for the temporary work handled for the federal treasury. The fiscal agency department handled a large volume of work when the treasury was carrying on its large refunding and financing programs in 1935. At the present time the fiscal agency work is slack.

Member banks are not borrowing from the central bank at the present time. The record peak of member bank borrowings in the Chicago district was 500 million dollars. Departments of the banks which are the busiest at present are the transit, collection, and cash departments and others which furnish service to the member banks.

TIN AND EXPORT COPPER PRICES RISE IN WEEK

New York, July 18.—(AP)—A further sharp advance of 1⅜ cents per pound in tin last Monday, which was completely lost in a sagging market later in the week, stood out in the metal market trading the last week. With buyers resisting the advance, the business placed by American consumers was very small.

Improving foreign and domestic demand for copper was coupled with a favorable view of the June statistics showing decreases in world refined stocks and good distribution. Actual sales of export copper were reported as high as 9.325 cents a pounds, c. i. f. European base ports, a new high for current move—other transactions were reported at the equivalent of 9.30 and 9.275 cents. Domestic copper market was quiet with price firm at 9.50 cents a pound.

No further price changes developed in zinc following declines in the previous week. Demand for lead was sustained at unchanged prices. American antimony grades were advanced ¼ cent.

FIND PRINCETON GRADUATES EARN LESS THAN IN '31

Princeton, N. J., July 18.—(AP)—Princeton university graduates of the class of 1921 are earning an average of $64 less a year than they did five years ago. The figures are contained in a volume published today in conjunction with the fifteenth reunion of the class.

Answering a questionnaire, 274 of the 377 members of the class reported their present average earnings at $5,620. In 1931 they were $5,684 and in 1926, $3,466. Income from investments and other sources, amounting to $2,432, brings the total annual average income to $8,052, according to the compilation.

Brokers lead in the amount of salary earned, 24 reporting average earnings of $9,550. Next in the salary scale are nine members of the class engaged in publishing and editing, their average salary being listed at $7,600.

TRADE MEASURED IN CHECKS SHOWS DECLINE IN WEEK

Measured by the use of checks, business in the Chicago federal reserve district decreased slightly last week, banking statistics indicated yesterday. Debits to individual deposit account totaled $1,099,485,000 in the week ended July 15, compared with $1,120,697,000 a week earlier. A gain was registered over last year, however, when volume amounted to $980,788,000.

In Chicago debits aggregated $623,081,000, compared with $585,686,000 last year.

Bank clearings in Chicago for the week ended yesterday amounted to $309,200,000, compared with $313,600,000 in the preceding week and $252,100,000 in the same 1935 period.

Part of Three Million Capital Pact.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Regional coöperatives have voted to subscribe for $720,000 of stock in the Farmers National Grain corporation under the terms of the refinancing agreement recently concluded by the corporation with the federal farm credit administration, officials said yesterday. Subscriptions for another $500,000 are expected to be approved soon.

Total capital to be provided by the member coöperatives under the terms of the agreement is $3,000,000. Additional capital will be furnished by new credits by the FCA.

The new policy under which member units are to put up part of the capital of the parent coöperative differs from that heretofore followed when the federal government supplied all the working funds for the corporation. The terms on which the regional units are to subscribe are extremely generous, however. The FCA lends the regional unit the money with which to buy the stock. The loans are to be repaid by setting aside a fixed amount of the proceeds of the grain marketed by the national coöperative which will be remitted every three months to the federal government.

Paid in Ten Years.

Under this plan the federal loans would be paid off over a period of 10 years. The "tax" on marketing proceeds is levied on a graduated scale ranging from ⅛ to ½ cent a bushel. Similar plans have been followed heretofore in coöperative financing.

The effect of this method of financing is to reduce the cash return of the country elevator on grain marketed through the coöp. In compensation the regional coöperative gets stock in the parent coöperative and the country elevator gets a corresponding amount of stock in the regional.

Private grain interests believe that the tax imposed on the marketing proceeds will offset the competitive advantage that the coöps are said to have had in the past by reason of their government subsidies. This claim is disputed by the coöp leaders who assert that the person marketing his grain under the new system will be adequately compensated by his increased stock interest in his marketing organization.

Payments Termed Rebates.

The grain coöp has distributed "patronage" dividends in the past to member units in stock, but not in cash. Cash remittances were made to member units for "field and educational" work. Competitors assert that such payments are actually rebates which the coöps are enabled to make because of their financial backing by the government. Such payments, say the coöp leaders, are operating expenditures and are absorbed as part of the expense of doing business. The payments, they say, cannot be regarded as "dividends."

To refute the contention that the new method of "taxing" marketing receipts will kill its business, the Farmers National cites the volume of grain handled since the system was adopted July 1. In the first ten days of July the coöps received 7 million bushels of grain in the Kansas City market as compared with less than 2 million bushels in the corresponding period of 1935. Receipts during the period represented 20 per cent of all grain received in that market, officials said.

DROUTH CAUSES WIDE SWINGS IN ALL LIVE STOCK

Prices Rally as Heavy Liquidation Ends.

Weather conditions during the last two weeks caused some of the sharpest price fluctuations of the year in live stock and meat. Extreme heat and soaring feed costs in the country sent many thousands of meat animals to market prematurely, increasing the volume of slaughter in packing houses throughout the nation at a time when consumer demand was lowest of the year.

The resulting glut in meat distribution channels forced retail prices of some meats down several cents a pound within a few days, but the amount of meat sod during the hote spell was the smallest in a long time, packers reported.

Heavy Liquidation Halted.

The heavy liquidation of live stock from the country was halted late in the week and there was an immediate recovery of the markets at the stockyards, but sufficient meat was carried in coolers from earlier in the week to stave off any material upturn in costs to consumers. At the close most live stock had recovered all of the losses sustained early in the week, many bringing substantially higher rates than a week ago.

Corn fed steers and yearlings closed 25 to 40 cents higher than a week ago. Grassy "drouth stock" showed little improvement, with the spread between grassy and corn fed cattle wider. Inferior thin drouth steers anged down to $3.75, while the week's top for highly finished corn feds was $9.65.

Beef Cows and Hefers Higher.

Beef cows and hefers closed 25 to 35 cents higher. Calves fell mostly $1.50 in sympathy with the severe break in lambs. Farmers obtained stockers and feeders steady to 15 cents lower.

Hog prices tumbled 50 cents to $1 in less than a week, when the intense heat wave visited Chicago, but the market reacted last week, and finished unevenly 5 cents to 50 cents higher than a week ago. Current prices still average 30 to 40 cents under the high spot of twelve days ago, however. The six day average at $9.35 was lowest since the week of May 16, comparing with $9.70 the previous week and with $10.15 two weeks ago.

Lamb Prices Weaken.

Lamb prices maintained a comparatively strong position during the first week of hot weather, but in the last six days recorded declines of $1 to $1.50. Top sales at the close at $9.75 compared with $10.90 the preceding week. The six day lamb average at $9.40 compared with $10.20 a week ago.

Following are Chicago wholesale quotations for meat at the close of last week, with comparisons for the period directly before the extreme heat wave struck the city. [All prices in dollars per hundred pounds]:

LARD DECLINES SHARPLY BUT PRICES RALLY LATER

Lard futures declined rather sharply yesterday in sympathy with the recession in corn, but buying by trade interests and investment purchases of the distant deliveries caused a rally. Final trades were at net losses of 12½ to 20 cents. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed nominally unchanged to 12½ cents lower. Cash lard was quoted at $10.77½; loose and leaf, $10.25, and clear bellies at $12.87½ per 100 pounds. Prices per 100 pounds follow:

NEWS AND VIEWS

The growing demand for Graham motor cars in foreign countries has resulted in an increase of 48 per cent in the number shipped overseas during the first six months this year, compared to the first half of 1935, and the volume for the period this year has exceeded that of any similar period during the last six years, according to Robert C. Graham. In commenting on the situation, Mr. Graham said, "The notable gain in Graham export volume so far this year over last year is, we feel, a direct reflection of the fact that motorists the world over realize that the supercharger is revolutionizing automobile efficiency just as it did air travel a few years ago."

John C. Felli has been appointed assistant treasurer of General Motors. Mr. Felli is a graduate of Dartmouth college, class of 1922, and of the Amos Tuck school of administration and finance at Dartmouth college in 1923, having previously graduated from the United States Military academy.

The promotion of Fred J. Lamborn to the office of vice president in charge of manufacturing has been announced by William J. O'Neil, general manager of the Dodge division of Chrysler corporation. Mr. Lamborn began his service with Dodge in 1911, three years before the company's founders embarked on the production of an automobile bearing their own name and trademark. He began his career with Dodge as toolmaker.

The Nash Motors company will be 20 years old on July 29, the company having been incorporated on that date in 1916. Public observation of the anniversary has been planned by Kenosha business and civic organization and the committee in charge has announced that a number of individuals prominent in the industry and distinguished in its history will be invited to attend ceremonies to commemorate the occasion.

"No matter which way you look at it, we have had the best six months since 1930," reported Victor C. P. Dreiske, general manager of the Chicago branch of Cadillac. "The number of units registered has increased 70.8 per cent over the same period of last year, we have bettered our position in the high priced field, selling more than all others in that field combined. Our used car position is stronger than it ever has been and our service department has also enjoyed a similar increase in volume."

One million, two hundred thousand motorists have joined Standard Oil's mileage test in 14 states, according to an announcement by Edward G. Seubert, president of Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

That is four times as many participants as were counted on at the beginning of the test. The first lot of 300,000 record books and red crown gold-winged emblems was exhausted almost before the test was well started, and dealers and motorists were clamoring for more. These were supplied until a total of 1,200,000 kits had been given out.

At 600 northern Illinois gasoline stations this summer horses will be regular and welcome visitors, as the result of a brief conference in Chicago last week between officials of Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, Inc., and George A. H. Scott, secretary of the Illinois Humane society.

By official edict, horses now are endowed with full rights and privileges to stroll into any Socony-Vacuum Mobilgas station and receive a bucketful of cool fresh water on the house.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 18.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Bleachable was easier under scattered local and commission house selling today. The better weather in some of the drouth areas and the decline in cotton and lard were factors. Final prices were 12 to 17 points net lower. Sales, 29 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; July closed 9.60c per lb; September, 9.65c; October, 9.63c; December, 9.55c, and January, 9.54c.

HERE ARE SOME TIPS ABOUT HOT WEATHER DRIVING

BY HAL FOUST.

Motorists are learning a lot about hot weather driving this summer. Some are learning from the advice of service mechanics. Others are receiving lessons from unhappy experiences.

With the pavements between 100 and 120 degrees in midday, it was a common sight during the last two weeks to see automobiles parked beside the highways with a flat tire. And changing a tire in those temperatures is no slight hardship.

Most of these blowouts could have been avoided by watching the pressure in the tires. As everyone knows, air expands when it is warmed. In tires heated by friction on scorching pavements, pressures become so high that the air bursts through any weak place in the casing.

Reduce Cruising Speed.

Some motorists were also having trouble from overheated engines. It was a strain on the cooling systems of an automobile in good condition to drive fast during the worst of the heat wave. To protect his machine, thoughtful drivers reduced their cruising pace on the open road.

For long trips, the smart owner used a slightly heavier engine oil than normally. The excessive heat increased the viscosity. Oils became thinner with high engine temperatures.

Some car owners are so careless that they are driving this summer without having had the cooling systems of their engines drained and cleaned since removing the winter's anti-freeze. Their radiators boiled when the thermometer reached 100 degrees.

Another cause of over heating was bugs clogging the vents of the radiator. There have been an unusually large number of insects in the air during the drouth. You've seen them on your windshield but perhaps you haven't realized that they were also hitting the radiator and blocking the circulation of air. Bug screens for the radiator are cheap.

More Greasing Necessary.

Grease throughout the chassis dissipates quicker during high temperatures. Your car will need a lubrication in this weather more often than the manufacturer specifies.

A higher test of gasoline is a hot weather aid in most automobiles. Some lubricant in the gasoline for the upper cylinders is also a help.

Caring for a motor car is not a great deal different from caring for your own health during the strain of hot weather. Don't work the machine so hard and give it more than ordinary attention when the mercury is high.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

WESTERN AVENUE.

Chicago, July 9.—Every day it rains the casualty list continues to grow on the stretch of Western avenue from about 5100 to 6000 north. This particular stretch has claimed a vast toll of human lives over recent years for which the street car company officials surely are morally, if not criminally, responsible. Because of the fact that the bricks on either side of the car rails rise to a height of two to four inches, the resulting trough means probable death to the unsuspecting driver who happens to land in it.

Until such time as the street car company can be compelled to put this stretch into a safe condition, it would seem that Mayor Kelly's safety commission could do something worthwhile in the matter of saving lives by demanding that "caution" signs be erected to warn strange drivers of the extremely dangerous condition of the car rails.

Yours very truly, J. M. C.

ANENT STATE POLICE.

Chicago, July 13.—There has been a lot of talk of elevated highways and grade separations in the papers lately, and there is no doubt but what they are the only thing, especially for the large cities, but what about the rural districts?

The papers say there never have been so many accidents as there have been the last few years. Why hasn't your paper noticed that since the present administration there have been very few people that have seen the state highway police on the highway. Surely if they were to patrol the roads at irregular hours on their motorcycles, not in a car, and in a friendly way would try to educate the driving public in the art of good driving it would do much to prevent accidents. The people should be made to feel the highway police are their friends and they would be more willing to coöperate.

It is possible that few of the replacements knew anything about riding motorcycles, but they should know by now, and also know that a wheel, being more mobile, can handle trafic better, and that trafic violators are not found in taverns.

In our county when an accident happens the sherif's office is called because after trying to locate the state police several times authorities realized it was useless. The funeral directors used to call the state police in the nearest town but now they have to call headquarters and give 24 hours notice, so they don't rely on the state police any more.

RURAL MOTORIST.

ADDISON STREET.

Chicago, July 11.—One of the worst streets in the city of Chicago is Addison street; yet it is among the leading thoroughfares of the city. It is virtually one bundle of bumps, holes, and patches; but there is one particular spot on this street which I think requires immediate attention, for it is a menace to life and property and provides no little amount of nerve-wracking noise to residents of this location. The place I am speaking of is at Addison and Lincoln streets. At these corners there are terrific bumps and dips which cause automobiles to bounce as if they were rubber balls if they cross this intersection at even a moderate rate of speed. It would not be a very difficult matter for a motorist to lose control of his car when he hits this hazard, with the consequent damage to life and property.

I don't see why something isn't done about it. Will the city wait until lives are lost before they decide to act, or don't the taxpayers deserve any protection?

Announce $1,500,000 Residential Building Program for Highland Park Subdivision

WORK TO START TOMORROW ON FIRST 4 UNITS

Erection of 100 Houses Is Contemplated.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Inauguration of a $1,500,000 home building program, involving the erection of 100 residences, was announced yesterday for forty acres of land just west of the Woodridge station of the Chicago, Milwaukee and North Shore, in Highland Park. Work will start tomorrow on the first of four houses which will cost $10,000 to $20,000.

Although the purchase contract calls for the erection of at least fifty homes by Dec. 31, 1937, by the owner, the Lake Shore Home Builders, Inc., it is understood that this date may be anticipated and that the full quota of 100 may be completed by that time. Mayo & Mayo, Chicago architects who have been active along the north shore for several years, will design the first four residences.

Part of Subdivision.

The building sites comprise part of the original North Shore Forest Ridge Home addition, a heavily wooded subdivision at the intersection of Clavey and Ridge roads, where twelve residences have been built. All of the winding roads are paved and all improvements are in.

The 109 lots were purchased recently by the Highland Park special assessment bondholders' committee from the Skokie Valley Realty association through one of its trustees, C. E. Thompson, vice president of the North Shore Electric lines.

Prior to the completion of the purchase, the bondholders' committee, through a subcommittee consisting of Harold Florsheim, chairman; Benjamin F. Lewis, B. W. Cooke, and their attorney, Bowen E. Schumacher, negotiated a resale of the property for home building purposes, with the Lake Shore Home Builders, Inc.

No Vacant Lots to Be Sold.

R. S. Hambly & Co. of 4701 Sheridan road, which for years has specialized in Highland Park properties, has been appointed agent for the offering of all homes built by the Lake Shore Home Builders. It has just completed a modern, air conditioned office on the property on Clavey road, west of the Skokie line and Skokie road.

According to Doak Norwood, sales director for Hambly, no lots will be sold except in combination with a home erected under certain restrictions in architecture and price. Many of the home sites have 75 feet or more of frontage, with depths up to 200 feet.

"Because of the character of the deal made with the Highland Park special assessment bondholders' committee, all assessments will be fully paid at time of delivery of a deed to a home," said Norwood. "This is said to be the first instance wherein any special assessment committee has effected a means of liquidating the interests of depositing bondholders without recourse to usual legal proceedings."

Has Sixty Other Lots.

In addition to the forty acres acquired by the Lake Shore Home Builders for its 100 residences, there are sixty additional lots which were bought when the Forest Ridge subdivision was put on the market prior to the completion of the Skokie Valley line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and North Shore.

These sixty lots are all paid for and it is understood that a majority of them may be improved with residences when the Lake Shore Home Builders get their construction program under way.

Food Market Is Planned at Halsted and 35th Place

Work has started on complete modernization of the one story building and the erection of an addition at the northwest corner of Halsted street and 35th place, from plans by Karlin-Simpson, Inc. The owner, Mrs. Sylvia Kiras, will operate the completed building as a food mart, several concessions already having been leased. A red and brown porcelain front will be installed on both streets. Store fronts will be of white metal.

Baird & Warner Report Gain in Realty Sales

Real estate sales for the first six months of this year increased 65 per cent in dollar volume compared with the same period in 1935, according to Baird & Warner. The number of parcels sold registered a gain of 100 per cent.

Motor Freight Line to Build Big Terminal

What is claimed to be the first use of the cantilever type of reinforced concrete for heavy duty and warehousing is at the new terminal warehouse of the Interstate Motor Freight system, being erected at 18th and Canal streets. Designed by the MacMillan system and being erected by the Robert G. Regan company, the new building will cost a reported $175,000. It will serve as the terminal depot for the Interstate system, which operates throughout the middle west to the Atlantic seaboard.

The new building is 200 feet long, forty feet wide, and two stories high. The second floor will be occupied by the executive offices of the western division of the Interstate system.

According to Harry Bylenga, president of the system, facilities and equipment are being extended to care for increasing trafic. New terminals will be erected in a number of the central state terminal cities, he said.

75 HOMES BUILT AT WONDER LAKE SO FAR IN 1936

Seventy-five residences have been erected so far this year at Wonder lake and 200 home sites were purchased, according to W. A. Wood, director of sales for the Wonder Lake syndicate, owners and developers of the project. Last year 180 sites were sold and 95 homes erected. Even in 1934, one of the slackest real estate years in history, close to one hundred parcels of land were sold and 46 homes erected at Wonder lake.

"Wonder lake was planned at the height of the boom, in 1929," Wood said. "A group of approximately seventy individuals, including leading business and professional men and clergymen of Chicago pooled their finances and raised a fund of nearly a million dollars to buy the property that now comprises Wonder lake and surrounding land. While real estate in Chicago and practically the entire country remained stagnant, Wonder lake steadily was developed. Homes erected ranged in cost from $1,500 up to $10,000. One residence completed this spring is completely air conditioned."

Wonder lake, nearly four miles long and about a mile wide at its widest spot, is in McHenry county, about five miles west of McHenry, on highway 59A. It was made by erecting an $80,000 dam and flooding a large area formerly used for farming.

KOHLHAAS CO. RENTS FLOOR AT 506 SOUTH WELLS

The Kohlhaas company, for the last five years at 204 North Dearborn, has leased for five years the entire fifth floor of the 506 South Wells street building. Arthur Rubloff & Co. represented all parties. The new quarters will be modernized and the lessees will take possession about Aug. 1.

M. A. Thometz, head of the concern, said the move to larger quarters was prompted by the constant increase in the card index business. For twenty-two years the Kohlhaas company has been in the vicinity of Lake and Dearborn, having occupied space in the old Tremont house for seventeen years.

Building Material Prices Higher than a Year Ago

Building material prices for June were up one-tenth of a point as compared with the preceding month, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards. This element of construction costs, now back to the price levels of 1929, has shown little change over a period of the last two years. Home builders, it was pointed out, should note that the general trend is a slight rise. The index for June, this year, is 85.8. This is two points higher than the index stood in June, 1935. They are less than 15 points lower than they were in 1926 at the height of the greatest building activity we have ever known.

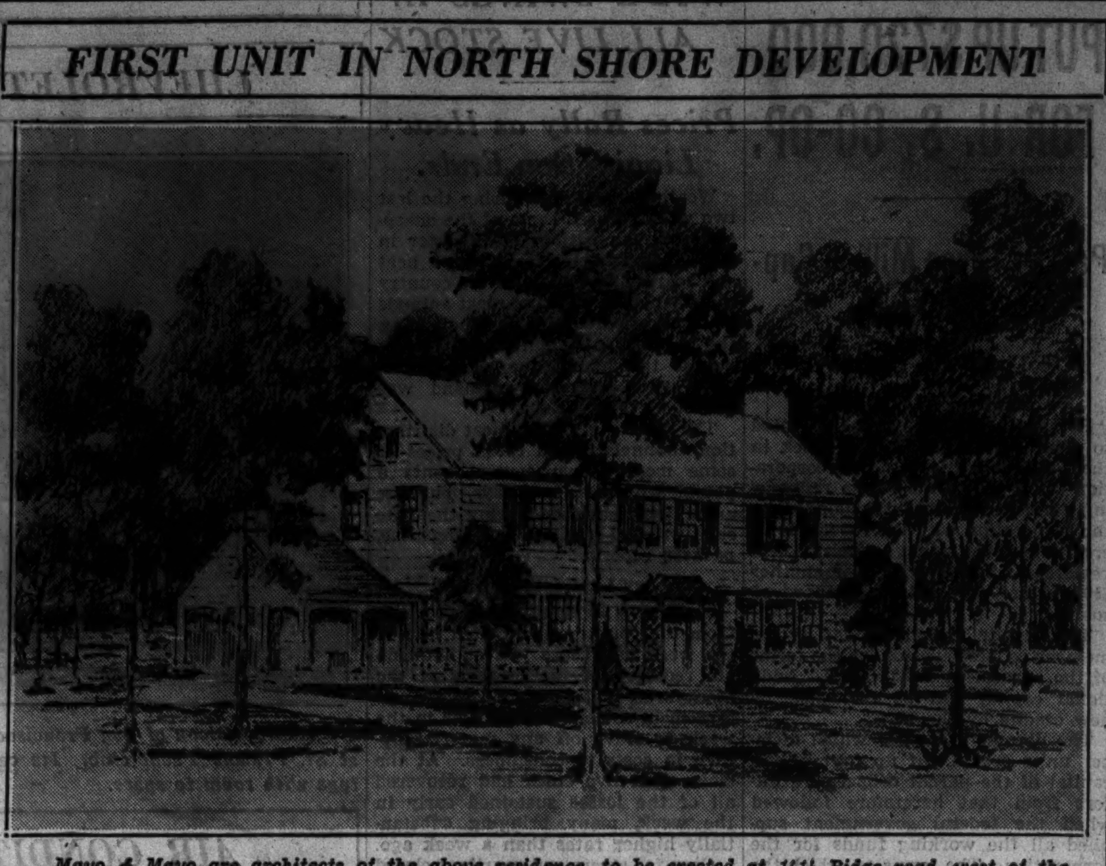
Two Apartment Buildings Are Sold for All Cash

Two all cash purchases of apartment properties were reported yesterday by John J. Kern. Mrs. Emma S. Schotte bought the six flat building at 2326 Farwell avenue from Amalgamated Properties, Inc., of New York, for an undisclosed consideration. Miss Florence Harrington sold the two apartments at 5028 North Lawndale to Norman S. Udkoff for a reported $7,500. John J. Kern, Inc., will continue to manage the properties.

C. Roy Kindt Appointed West Central Secretary

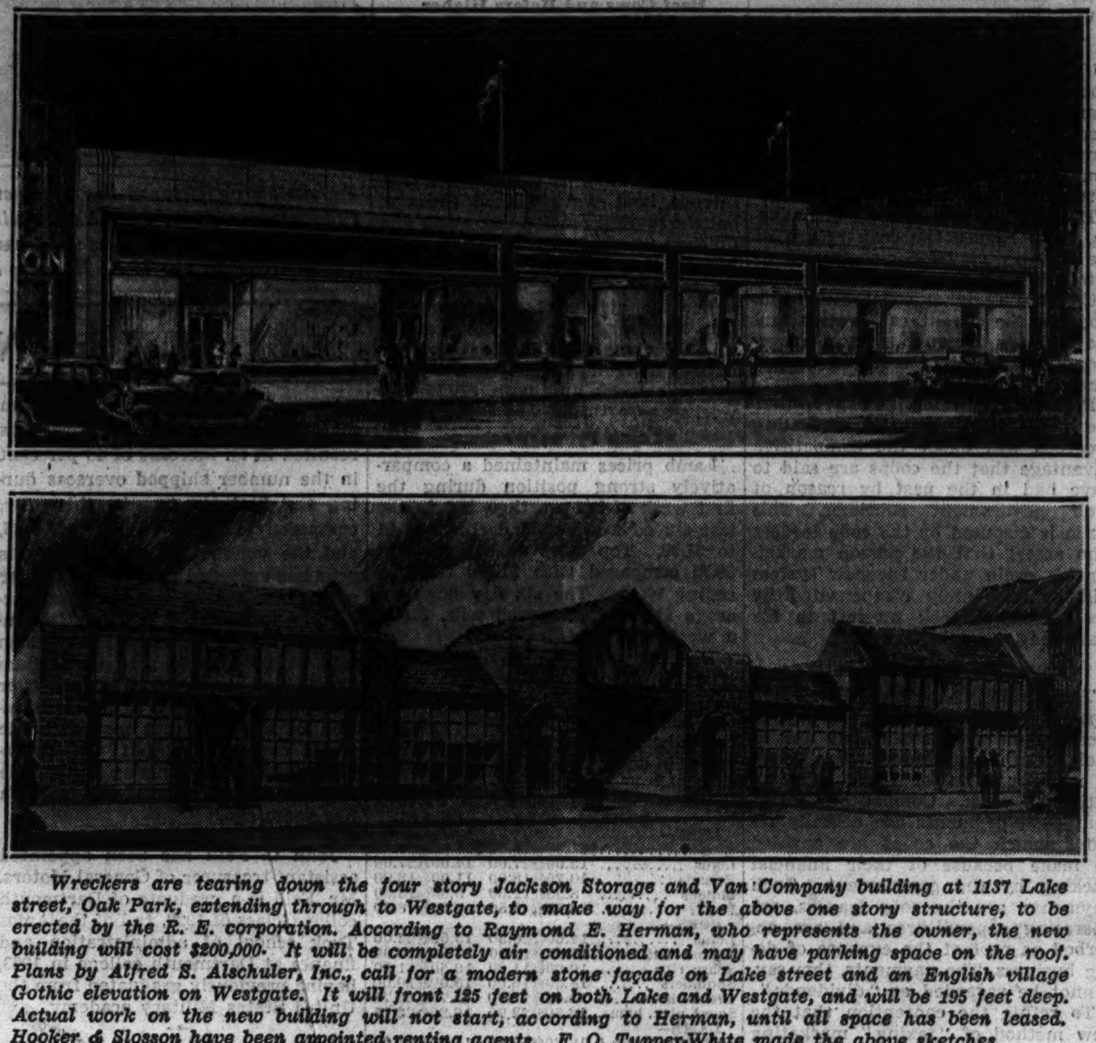
C. Roy Kindt has been appointed executive secretary of the West Central association, according to Charles A. Snyder, executive vice president. He will handle membership contacts. Kindt was active in North Michigan avenue development for several years and more recently was in San Francisco directing the organization of a terminal area.

FIRST UNIT IN NORTH SHORE DEVELOPMENT



Mayo & Mayo are architects of the above residence, to be erected at 1414 Ridge road, west of the Woodridge station of the Chicago, Milwaukee and North Shore Skokie valley line, by the Lake Shore Home Builders, Inc. This house and three others are the first units in a home building program calling for 100 residences. Details are given in another column on this page.

$200,000 IMPROVEMENT FOR OAK PARK



Wreckers are tearing down the four story Jackson Storage and Van Company building at 1137 Lake street, Oak Park, extending through to Westgate, to make way for the above one story structure, to be erected by the R. E. corporation. According to Raymond E. Herman, who represents the owner, the new building will cost $200,000. It will be completely air conditioned and may have parking space on the roof. Plans by Alfred S. Alschuler, Inc., call for a modern stone façade on Lake street and an English village Gothic elevation on Westgate. It will front 125 feet on both Lake and Westgate, and will be 195 feet deep. Actual work on the new building will not start, according to Herman, until all space has been leased. Hooker & Slosson have been appointed renting agents. F. O. Tupper-White made the above sketches.

WEST SIDE REAL ESTATE BOARD PLANS OUTING

Ray McCarthy, president of the West Side Real Estate board, announced that the annual picnic and outing of that organization will be held on Thursday, July 23, in Thatcher woods, Thatcher and Chicago avenues. The dance pavilion has been reserved and in addition there will be contests, games and refreshments. Arrangements are in charge of James J. Curtis.

Gray Goose Stores Lease Space for Two New Units

The Gray Goose Self Service Stores, Inc., operating a number of shoe stores in the Chicago area, have leased the entire building at 6136 South Halsted for a term of years from Catharine M. Lyons, and the store at 6328 South Ashland from Gustav Weischedel. J. E. Ehrenhalt & Co. were brokers.

Leases Clark-Van Buren Corner for Shoe Store

Roy Logan has leased the northeast corner of Clark and Van Buren from the John R. Thompson estate for use as a shoe store. J. E. Enrenhalt & Co. were brokers.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Otto Damgaard, who recently purchased a 190 acre farm on River road, north of Des Plaines, was not the landscape architect for the Ford building at A Century of Progress, as THE TRIBUNE was informed. Marshall L. Johnson of Ravinia, landscape architect for the Ford Motor company, did that work. The Damgaard-Meyer Landscape Construction company did the actual landscape work at the Ford Century of Progress building.

Brokers' Notes

W. T. Tangney, head of W. T. Tangney & Co., announces that his son, William F. Tangney, who has been in the real estate business for ten years, has been added to the staf of that concern in charge of the maintenance and insurance departments.

Mellicent Martin has opened a new real estate office in the Diana court section of the Michigan Square building. She was located for several years at 612 North Michigan.

Frank R. Karst, formerly with John Heim, and M. E. Joachim, have formed the real estate firm of Joachim & Karst, using the former offices of Joachim at 2756 Southport avenue.

Wittrock & Co., for a number of years at 806 Harrison street, Oak Park, has leased the southeast corner of Home avenue and Garfield street, Oak Park, where it will have larger quarters.

An increase in first mortgage business and real estate management activities has caused H. F. Philipsborn & Co. to enlarge their quarters in the Borland building. This is the second time during the last twelve months that additional space has been required.

State Street Jeweler Leases Dearborn Shop

The Martin company, retail jeweler, which has operated an upstairs store at 31 South State street for several years, yesterday leased the air conditioned store at 117 South Dearborn for a term of years. After alterations the lessee will occupy it on Sept. 1, according to W. H. Ames of Aldis & Co., broker for the lessor. H. H. Stringer of Varty & Co. represented the lessee.

Majestic Construction Buys New Yard Location

The Majestic Construction company, founded by M. Calper, now at 6526 South Ashland avenue, has purchased the property at 4118-24 South Wentworth avenue. It will be modernized for use as offices, display room and material yard.

DE MET'S LEASES E. 71ST STREET SHOP LOCATION

De Met's, Inc., yesterday leased quarters at 2334 East 71st street for its fifth candy store outside the loop. After a modernization program, the new store will be opened in about thirty days, according to C. N. Johnson, president of De Met's.

The premises were leased from Peter Tutules for three years. According to Gilbert Keebler, who represented the lessees, negotiations are under way for several more outlying De Met stores to be opened in the fall. The company has eleven loop stores.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of July 10 to 16, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 30, with a combined cost of $378,800. For the corresponding week last year there were 28 contracts totaling $248,835. So far this year the total cost of contracts is $22,113,911, compared with $12,106,252 for the same period last year.

STEVENS PUTS COOLING UNITS IN GUEST ROOMS

With the mercury continuing to loiter round the 100 degree mark, air conditioning remained one of the liveliest features of both business and conversation throughout the week. Completion of several more important installations of temperature control and expansion of air conditioning into new fields were announced.

The world's largest hostelry, the Stevens hotel, which already has air conditioned all of its dining rooms, lobbies and other public spaces, yesterday completed the installation of air conditioning units on its new de luxe floor—the twenty-third story.

First of a New Type.

According to General Manager Otto K. Eitel these ten units are the first of a new type of self contained air conditioner made by the Carrier Engineering corporation. They were the entire present output of the company obtainable this month. They require no water and are placed by the window, pulling in the warm air, which is dehumidified and cooled as it passes into the room. A $1 additional charge to guests is made for suites with air conditioning units.

"The de luxe twenty-third floor also is a new idea in hotel accommodation," said Eitel. "It is composed of fourteen suites, of three, four and five rooms, all equipped with new furnishings and decorations, suitable for use by executives and heads of convention gatherings who want to have their associates close at hand.

May Install More.

"The installation of air conditioning will be the last luxury touch for this type of suite. We are contemplating converting the twenty-second story also into a de luxe floor. If the air conditioning units meet with the favor of the public that we expect, next year probably will see a large number installed throughout the hotel guest rooms."

The Stevens is the third Chicago hotel to put temperature control in guest rooms. The Palmer House and the Harding hotel both are trying out air conditioning units in sleeping rooms. The Hotel La Salle is contemplating equipping one entire floor as a test of the public's attitude toward artificial cooling.

All Units Air Conditioned.

Pixley & Ehlers are completing the installation of their thirteenth air conditioning system in the restaurant at 68 East Lake street. All their eating places are now temperature controled. M. G. Harbula of Wheaton was engineer for their installation.

A. Boyd Pixley, vice president, who recently completed a five months' world tour on the Empress of Britain, and who is an air conditioning enthusiast, said only one temperature control system was found on the entire voyage—in the dining room of a Bombay hotel.

He said Pixley & Ehlers are the first chain of self-service restaurants in the United States to have all their units air conditioned. Approximately a quarter of a million dollars have been spent in temperature control for the thirteen units. The Lake street installation cost in the neighborhood of $30,000, Pixley said.

The Walgreen company during the week completed installation of an air conditioning system in its store at State and Washington. It now has temperature control in three loop drug stores—at State and Jackson, Michigan and Adams, and the one just completed. All of its five new stores in Florida are air conditioned.

Buy 77 Acres for Cash; Land to Be Marketed

Seventy-seven acres of wooded property, half a mile west of Highland Park, on both sides of Waukegan road and on the south side of Half Day road, have been purchased for all cash by two north shore men from McGuire & Orr and John Griffith. According to Lewis T. Dodds, who negotiated the sale and who will market the property, the land will be sold in home sites of one acre and more. It has been named Bannockwood, as thirty-three acres are in the village of Bannockburn.

Dodds also reports the sale of the first three home sites in MacFarlane's woods, on Sunset road near Willow road, to Wade Fetzer Jr., Gerald Grant, and Kenneth Hawkins. This property is restricted to home sites of 2½ acres or more and houses to cost at least $15,000.

Recent purchasers of acreage in the Sunset Ridge district include Jerome T. Atkinson, Dean Dodson, Hugo Pick, and Edward Ottman.

INSURANCE CO. PLANS 25 HOMES ON SOUTH SIDE

Twenty-five modern, brick two story residences for colored families will be erected by the Supreme Liberty Life Insurance company on the west side of Loomis street, between 60th and 61st streets, it was announced yesterday. An investment of close to a quarter of a million dollars in land and buildings will be involved, it was said.

Plans have been completed by Karlin-Simpson, Inc., 64 East Lake street, for twenty-five buildings, all of different design. Work is scheduled to start on Aug. 1 with completion set for Nov. 1.

All will have six rooms and one bath, with complete basement, but the arrangement and size of rooms will vary. Some will have a full sized dining room and some dinettes. All will have three bedrooms. They all will be heated by hot water, with oil for fuel.

In addition to having different designs, the brick used in the front elevations also will vary. Some will be of common brick, some face brick and some of the clinker type. Half timber effects will be used in some of the exteriors.

The houses will cost $5,700, with lots selling at $2,000 each, it was announced. The sites have thirty feet frontage.

SURVEY SHOWS STEADY GAIN IN MORTGAGES

Number and Value Both Show Increase.

MISS MARIAN LOCKE.

Steady gains in both number and volume of mortgages recorded in Cook and Lake counties during the first half of 1936 disclose an increasingly healthy condition for the mortgage business, according to a survey just completed by the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association. Cook county alone had $106,572,418 worth of trust deeds filed for record, compared with $76,815,841 during the first six months of 1935.

"In order to determine accurately the amount of private money that is now being expended in regular types of mortgage lending," said Miss Marian Locke, executive secretary of the association, "we have eliminated from our figures $29,500,000 of public utility mortgage financing in 1935 and $100,000,000 of industrial mortgage financing in 1936. The result still is a net increase for the first half of 1936 of 38.7 per cent."

1936 Mortgage Figures.

The figures on private lending in Cook county during the first six months of 1936 are:

	Number.	Amount.
January	1,764	$ 31,688,478
February	1,810	10,947,258
March	2,048	12,424,996
April	2,293	20,540,000
May	2,521	13,255,558
June	2,359	17,715,228
Totals	12,595	$106,572,418

For the same period of 1935 the following private loans were recorded:

	Number.	Amount.
January	1,646	$ 8,575,419
February	1,437	7,571,911
March	1,759	5,929,723
April	2,029	9,315,526
May	1,938	12,134,579
June	3,072	33,288,083
Totals	11,881	$76,815,841

"Federal Housing administration insured mortgages, which are also made through private lending sources, but which we have segregated," said Miss Locke, "show a marked increase during this period, equivalent to approximately 396 per cent in the amount of consideration and 351 per cent in transactions.

Loans Show Large Increase.

"For the first six months of 1936 there were 820 loans aggregating $4,139,810. This compares with 175 loans, totaling $833,800, negotiated for the same period last year.

"Taking into consideration the steady gain in the volume of mortgage lending in both Cook and Lake counties, and the marked decrease in the amount of foreclosures being filed, one may safely conclude that the mortgage business is in a healthier condition today than it has been for a long time."

M'HENRY PLANS CENTENNIAL FETE

OLD SETTLERS WILL HAVE 62D PICNIC ON AUG. 8

Change Outing Day to Saturday.

Old settlers of Chicago and Cook county, many of whom date their residence to long past decades, again will have the opportunity to revive their reminiscences of early days and to compete for gold medals when they assemble for the 62d annual Old Settlers' picnic to be held Saturday, Aug. 8, in the grove at Riverview park.

For the first time, at least in recent years, the picnic will be held on Saturday in order to permit many to attend who had been unable to be present when the event was on the first Monday in August.

Arrange for 10,000.

L. O. Greiner, chairman of the executive committee, announces that arrangements are being made to entertain at least 10,000 participants. A. V. Lathomus is vice chairman of the committee; R. P. Stover, secretary; Frank Pfustler, assistant secretary, and A. W. Rayner, treasurer.

An extra medal will be awarded this year to the oldest retired veteran of the Chicago fire or police department, residing in Chicago and Cook county.

Gold medals will be awarded:

To the old settler present, who has resided continuously in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

To the woman settler present, who continuously has resided in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

Prizes for Long Residence.

To the old settler present, foreign born [Germany excepted] who has continuously resided in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

To the woman settler present, foreign born [Germany excepted] who has continuously resided in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

To the old settler present, born in Germany, who has continuously resided in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

To the woman settler present, born in Germany, who has continuously resided in Chicago and Cook county for the greatest number of years.

To the old settler, who has longest been in the employ of the same business concern in Chicago and who is still employed there.

To the old settler, man or woman, who has resided longest continuously in the same residence and still resides there.

Greatest Combined Age.

To the married couple of old settlers, whose combined ages will give the greatest number of years.

To the head of the family who has the largest number of children and grandchildren living, and if possible present at the park.

To the oldest veteran of the United States army or navy living in Chicago and Cook county.

To the oldest retired veteran of the Chicago fire or police departments living in Chicago and Cook county.

At 1:00 o'clock the registration stand will be opened. Settlers, both men and women, who have continuously resided in Chicago and Cook county since 1911, and are more than 40 years old, may write their names. To all those registered, a silk badge will be given, showing the year of their settlement in the area.

Concert and Games.

A two-hour concert will start at 2:00 o'clock. There will be singing, and games and races for the children. The evening will be given over to dancing by the younger picnickers.

During the afternoon, there will be a prize dancing contest at which the ten oldest couples will be awarded bouquets.

A Prairie Girl Hitches Wagon to Music Star

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

To the populace that gathered at the lake front last Friday night, she was the high priestess who worked an hour of magic, the magician who wrought in golden sound beauties comparable to those of the city itself—the Chicago that, viewed from the vantage point of Grant park, hung, a heroic tapestry studded with glinting gems, on the wall of the deepening sky.

Echoes of warm applause following her resolve into a "bon voyage" as, now the reverent pilgrim setting forth for the shrine of her art, Ebba Sundstrom, conductor of the Woman's Symphony orchestra, sails this week for Europe and the Salzburg music festival.

A Significant Journey.

In the story of this young artist—she might be the heroine of a Norse myth, so tall, fair haired, and blue of eye she is, so coolly serene of spirit—sequence following sequence in orderly progress toward her goal, the journey to Salzburg assumes portentous significance. There is a symbolism to be read in the horizon's gates swinging open to her for the first time upon the world.

To this point, from the day that she drew a bow across the strings of her child-size fiddle, and heard the voice of destiny, to these Chicago years of the wielding of the baton, the scene of her career has been, almost without variation, middle western.

The first chapter of her story opens in a pioneer Swedish settlement on the plains of Kansas.

Daughter of Builder.

It was to Lindsborg, small community of high artistic aspirations, that her grandparents immigrated, establishing the family on a farm. Ebba was the youngest of seven children—three sons, four daughters. Her father was a carpenter. He built his home in town. Literally, he practically built Lindsborg.

If, as a frontier town, it had its drab aspects of toil and struggle, they scarcely touched the life of the child Ebba. Nor did they give the community its ultimate color. For the Swedish settlers had brought from the old world to the new their cultural heritage, and in their scale of values, practical and thrifty race though they were, the wealth that took precedence was that of intellectual and artistic achievement.

Bethany college was the center about which Lindsborg's deepest interest revolved. From it sprang the Bethany Oratorical society that, with its Messiah festivals, given three times each year, won for the prairie settlement a place in the musical sun.

Parade of Seasons.

The seasons, as they walked across the Great Plains—spring, fresh and fragrant, bringing the wild flowers and a silvery jubilee of bird song; summer, intense and violent, beating the fields with torrential rains, parching them under a burning sun, loosing tornadoes that, shrieking past like mad harpies, left a trail of destruction; autumn, that was a troubadour playing his ballads in color; winter, who moved regally under a canopy of cold, white stars—left their images and moods impressed upon the child's sensitive imagination. Later they were to be reflected by talents singularly at home in descriptive music.

But these were of the essences of life absorbed unconsciously. The young years had also their shining objective moments.

The great of the musical world had discovered Lindsborg. And thither they came, the Metropolitan's darlings, to fraternize with the prairie singers. Small Ebba thrilled to her town's legend of the brothers De Reszkè—Jean, whose genius an older generation held, surpassed Caruso's; Edouard, the baritone, almost as great an artist.

Glory of Sound.

Beauteous Nordica was the first whom Ebba heard. Her voice is remembered as "a glory of sound filling the auditorium." Later came dark Gadski, and Schumann-Heink, whom Lindsborg held in deep affection. These, and many others.

At the age of four, Ebba's favorite game was to climb onto the piano stool and, in imitation of her grown sister, play "by ear" all the family's favorite songs. But life really began at seven. That year her brother gave her a violin.

Father and Mother Sundstrom and the older brothers and sisters were all singers in the Messiah festival. But, before she was ten, Ebba was in the violin section of the orchestra. How her heart soared, and how her fiddle sang to the fervent strains of Handel's masterpiece! The sweeping climax, the Hallelujah chorus, brought the orchestra to its feet. Ebba played ecstatically from memory. She was not tall enough that first season to read the score from the music rack.

Teacher at 12.

Ambition burned. With three other youngsters she organized a quartet, a highly creditable ensemble. The best hotel in town engaged it. Before she was 12 years old she was giving lessons, to grownups as well as children.

Those days of youthful exuberance were recalled graphically in a letter of congratulations received recently from a former Bethany college student whom the hospitable Sundstroms had made a place for in their home.

"Even then we felt that you were destined for great things in music,"

Stepping Out of the Past for Roles in McHenry Centennial

The years gone by have come back again. The old-fashioned albums are opened today in McHenry and out of their pages step young women with the same smiles that won the eligible beaux of the late 1800s. Here in this old house they will re-create the scenes of friendship and happy times that it once knew. The home was built in 1885 just before the village had reached the half century mark. When the city of McHenry celebrates its centennial on July 31, and Aug. 1 and 2 Miss Lorraine Englen, at the left, who has a part in the historical pageant to be given each evening, will wear this graduation dress, which was worn in 1855. Lorraine is the granddaughter of Mattias Englen, who came to McHenry from Germany in 1898. The girl in the poke bonnet is Miss Ruth Reihansperger, all dressed in her great-grandmother's wedding dress. Miss Kathleen Justen, right, is the great-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Justen, who came to the village when it was just a few years old. The old homestead is located across the street from the Community High school.

Martha Fish Ends 35 Year School Career

Bells, books and children's voices for 35 years have filled the life of one of Chicago's veteran teachers who resigned recently from her position in the Portage Park school in order to spend the coming years on world travel and writing. She is Miss Martha Fish, 5400 West Montrose avenue, known throughout the four communities in which she taught not only as an educator but as a philanthropist.

Miss Fish is beginning immediately on a self conducted course of study in preparation for her trip abroad. She plans to study languages and foreign art and culture for a year before leaving for a round the world trip when she will make extended visits in South Africa, Tibet, India, Egypt and other remote places.

"Human nature has interested me far more than the facts given out in my work," said Miss Fish, "and I plan to continue this study of human nature in new places in addition to seeing all the beautiful things there are to see."

Aided Needy Pupils.

In the depression years Miss Fish had ample opportunity to turn to philanthropic work. When teachers were being paid in tax warant, she bought clothes and food and paid rents for families of her pupils with the little cash she could procure.

Of the work of the Chicago schools, Miss Fish said, "The school system does not pay enough attention to the adjustment of students and the teaching of fundamentals." However, she does believe in project work although this is often regarded by educators as the opposite of the teaching of rudimentary facts. This is evidenced by the work of her geography class which gave the school 77 stereopticon slides for future class use. The materials for each project throughout the years were purchased at her own expense when school funds were not available.

Taught in Porto Rico.

At the end of the world war, Miss Fish accepted a teaching position in the University of Rio Piedras, Porto Rico. Thirty earthquakes added to the excitement of this two-year experience. Her home was a tent for there was a building shortage at the time. Beside her regular work she contributed a paper each month to the university magazine.

Between the two years at Porto Rico, Miss Fish taught in a summer school in the Virgin Islands. "The experience," she said, "was like living two years in a garden. The Caribbean sea, like a huge sapphire shining in the distance, outlined the island."

Miss Fish is a graduate of the Chicago Normal school and the University of Chicago. Her first teaching experience was in the Cameron school and she taught next at the Skinner school when William Smyser was there as principal. Her next move was to the Norwood Park school and for the past four years she has been at Portage Park.

ST. PHILOMENA'S CARNIVAL WILL BEGIN TUESDAY

St. Philomena's Catholic church, Kedvale avenue and Cortland street, one of the oldest churches on the northwest side, will hold a 10 day open air carnival this week and next to raise funds to defray parish expenses. The festival, which is an annual event, will begin Tuesday evening and will conclude Thursday evening, July 30.

Each society has pledged its services in planning one night of the carnival. The first night will be under the jurisdiction of the Holy Name society, which also will sponsor the corn game every evening. The second night belongs to the Christian Mothers. This organization is also in charge of refreshments. The Young Ladies' sodality will take charge of the doll booth, in addition to planning the Thursday night activities.

Others are the Leo court of the Catholic Order of Foresters, who have charge of the electric booth and the Friday night plans; the sixth night and the miscellaneous booth, the Women's Catholic union; the bar and the seventh night, the St. Philomena court of the Catholic Order of Foresters; the blanket booth and the eighth night, the Dorothea court of the Lady Foresters; the milk bottle and penny pitch contests and the ninth night, the young men of the parish, and the tenth night, the Catholic Guards.

PALATINE LEGION WOMEN TO GIVE BIBLICAL PLAY

Jealousy raging over the tousled head of a little boy named Joseph—a young clairvoyant interpreting a Pharoah's dream—a frightened mother hiding her son in the bulrushes safe from an angry king—these and other scenes in the course of the Old Testament history will be presented by members of the American Legion auxiliary of Palatine in the pageant "The First Commandment" on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Seip's hall in Palatine.

The play will be divided into three stories. Biblical costuming will be used in the interpretations. The first part will consist of scenes that tell the story of Joseph beginning with the time when he was sold into slavery to the Ishmaelites by his brothers to the time when these same brothers came pleading for grain.

Eight episodes in the story of Moses and Aaron, his brother, will make up the second part of the pageant. The last part will be a scene on Mount Sinai.

3 DAY PROGRAM OF CELEBRATION STARTS JULY 31

Pageant to Review City's History.

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Log cabins springing up like small brown mushrooms—this was the first town of McHenry—the McHenry of 1836, a place where pioneers founded humble homes on the fertile banks of the Fox river, where duck hunting around the marshy swamp of Pistakee bay was a sport and a necessity, and where Indians for years put clouds of fear over the rugged huts and the tiny log school.

A church steeple rising 95 feet above a planned city of modern schools, large quiet residences and grassy parks, this is the McHenry of today, with its large lumber company, its flour mill, and its factory.

One hundred years of growth separate these two dates. And the citizens of McHenry dressed in the best bib and tucker saved from each decade will trace the story of a still growing city in their centennial pageant at 8:15 o'clock Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings, July 31, Aug. 1, and 2. The pageant was written by and is under the direction of Miss Marie Agnes Foley and Irving Vendig, of the Jack and Jill players of Chicago.

Plan Varied Program.

Twenty-five committee chairmen have planned a program that will cover all kinds of activities including visits to historical and antique exhibits, horse pulling contests, excursions to local places of interest, picnics, concerts, ball games and golf matches. At 7 o'clock Friday evening, the McHenry queen of popularity and beauty will be presented. Songs popular from 1836 to 1936 will be sung and stories of pioneer life will be written by the historical committee and read by descendants of the first settlers.

McHenry was given its name in honor of an American Indian fighter who gave it the first legends, but in 1836 the new settlement banished the Indians from its boundaries after repeated uprisings and bloodshed. The town was built by three strong pioneer families, the Wheelers, the Bishops, and the McOmbres whose descendants live there today.

The first white family to settle in McHenry was Dr. Christy G. Wheeler, his wife and two children. He purchased a small store and kept the first postoffice in the county. He was later recorder and paid for a survey, when in May, 1837, a stake was driven locating the county seat there.

Next Era of City.

The next era was the young city with its wooden sidewalks daily swept by the trailing skirts of the housewife market-bound, with its outdoor carts of merchant's wares and with its hitching posts, the anchor of many a patient Dobbin. Men wore derby hats on Sundays and women competed with each other to procure the most complete flower garden on parasol and "picture" hat. The length of a man's beard measured his distinction and the slimness of a woman's waist could be regulated by her modiste.

Many a pickle emerged from its bath of brine in McHenry. J. F. Welsh built a pickle factory there in 1874. The second season of its existence 225 acres of pickles piqued the appetites of surrounding citizenry. John McOmbre, his picture reveals a stern determined face, was literally the builder of the city. In 1837 he came from the east with his carpenter equipment and his descendant, Mrs. Mattie McOmbre Smith, a resident of the city today, has his day book, which is a complete record of every bit of carpentry work done in the town beginning with a coffin costing $1.50.

Richard Bishop was a banker and lawyer. He had his office on the north side of the public square. Between 1880 and 1890, Bishop attempted to make McHenry a great furniture manufacturing center. He built a dam to use Fox river power but the farmers feared it would flood their lands. Bishop proceeded with his work. One night a band of riders with their wives' best pillowslips over their heads for masks, blew up the factory.

Inspired Famous Song.

When the old grist mill, a white framed building, filled with finely ground flour, murmured on with activity, a local boy often sat on the banks of the river in the shade of the trees near by. This boy, now 60 year old Tell Taylor, as a result of his reveries in days gone by, wrote in 1910 "The Old Mill Stream," a popular song, and dedicated it to McHenry.

In 1837 the Rev. Joel E. Wheeler, the first minister of the gospel to locate in the county, built a house for himself and family, reserving the best room as a church school. In 1838 he opened the first boarding school in the northwest area. The Rev. Wheeler preached, plowed and pedagogued there for more than a half century.

A railroad built to Gagetown, which is now a part of McHenry, brought an influx of new settlers. Before that time a steamboat made regular

POLISH SCOUTS TO BE HONORED AT BIG FESTIVAL

Celebration to Start at Noon Today.

Boy and Girl Scouts, their principals and ideals, will be honored today in a Polish day celebration beginning at noon in Riverview park under the direction of the 35 Chicago councils of the United Polish Roman Catholic Union of America. Proceeds will be used to purchase uniforms for Polish Scouts and to assist their needy families.

Riverview will be turned into a Scout camp for the day and Scouts of the Polish union are preparing the program, which will include contests between the troops. Two orchestras and a band will play and there will be Polish dances and songs and a display of Polish costumes and art. Girl and Boy Scouts have arrived from Poland to take part in the festivities.

Three major talks will be on the program. Mayor Kelly, Gov. Horner, and Joseph L. Kania, president of the Polish Roman Catholic union, have accepted invitations to address the 75,000 who are expected to attend.

The program will begin with a marathon race from the Polish Roman Catholic union building, Augusta boulevard and Milwaukee avenue, to the park. At 1 o'clock there will be a concert by the Polish band, followed by Polish and American hymns by a united choir of the Polish churches. At 2 o'clock Mr. Kania will introduce the speakers and Rafal Lepowski, attaché of the consulate general of Poland in Chicago, will address the assembly.

At 3 o'clock drills will be given by the Scouts and all of their handiwork made during the past year will be on display. There will be contests between seven drum and bugle corps.

M. C. Zacharias is chairman of the Polish day committee; Miss Mary Skoczylas is secretary and John Zitkus is treasurer. Mr. Kania is chairman of the advisory committee.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

SELDOM has loyalty to one's native state been more pleasingly demonstrated or more graciously rewarded than in the case of Mrs. Stella C. Twomey and Texas. In her capacity as director of dramatics at Joyce Kilmer school, 6700 Greenview avenue, Mrs. Twomey has won fame locally for her original dramatic presentations, but it was not until she wrote and recently produced "Creator of the Lone Star," a historical play inspired by Texas centennial, that she was sought out for a tribute by the state of her birth.

MRS. STELLA C. TWOMEY.

Now she is attending the Texas centennial exposition as "ambassador of good will" from Chicago. The commission, bestowed by Don L. Sterling of the contacts division of the exposition, provided for her transportation to Dallas as a guest of the Missouri Pacific railroad and for official receptions in Dallas and San Antonio. She is a guest in the latter city of her sister, Mrs. Celia Cox Rilling. Meanwhile railroad and exposition officials are considering taking the cast of "Creator of the Lone Star" to Dallas for Chicago day, in October. The members are seniors in the Kilmer creative drama class.

Our Town's recent golden wedding celebrants included Mr. and Mrs. John Huntowski, 2842 North Richmond street, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore D. Hausch of Glencoe.

A PICTURE and speech education book intended to amuse and instruct children of pre-school age has been completed by Miss Hazel DuCles of the Northwestern university school of speech, and will be published soon by Rand McNally company. The illustrations are reproductions of photographs taken at the National College of Education in Evanston by Legare-Loving of Winnetka. Dean Ralph Dennis of the school of speech wrote the foreword.

A daughter, Ellen Fay, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilson, 4145 North Hermitage avenue, at the Swedish Covenant hospital on July 9. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Ella C. Hoskins, 4237 North Paulina street, and of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fay Wilson, 4251 North Paulina street. Her father is a reporter in the metropolitan section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

ANNOUNCEMENTS of scholarships continue to collect in this department. Among the latest is one revealing that John E. Wichlacz has been awarded a full year's tuition at De Paul for his outstanding scholastic work as a junior at that university during the past year. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wichlacz Sr., 2121 Thomas street.

TOM WILDER of Ravina has been elected president of the Lake County Art league, succeeding Mrs. J. W. F. Davies of Waukegan, who organized it two years ago after serving for many years as a worker in the North Shore Art league. The election was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellison L. Ross in Waukegan.

Accompanied by their son, Warren, and Miss Rose Mary Ulrich of Berwyn, Mr. and Mrs. Ossa D. Brigham, 3721 North Spaulding avenue, left Wednesday to visit friends and relatives in Mesopotamia, O., and to attend the Great Lakes exposition in Cleveland.

SUBURBAN FIRE FIGHTERS PLAN OUTING SUNDAY

First Annual Field Day in Arlington Heights.

A baseball game between home town and visiting Chicago firemen and water fights will feature the observance of the first Fireman's day sponsored by the Arlington Heights volunteer fire department next Sunday at the new recreation park. Fire fighters of Palatine, Mount Prospect, Des Plaines, Long Grove, and Wheeling have been invited to participate in the ceremonies.

Opening with a parade of fire fighting equipment, firemen and the two teams, a varied program has been planned, according to Fire Chief George K. Volz, chairman. The center of attraction will be the contest pitting the local team against the Chicago group.

Plan Water Battles.

Following this, members of the different fire departments participating will engage in several water fights with the regular 2½ inch fireman's hose. The team that can stand the water barrage the longest will be declared the winner and will be awarded a trophy.

Chief Volz is being assisted by Richard H. Jahn, assistant chief, and Capts. Louis Clark and Oswald Meyer. Fireman Alex Lips has charge of the concessions. Proceeds will be used to purchase additional equipment.

Organized in 1894.

The local fire department has been in existence since 1894, having celebrated its 40th anniversary two years ago. Mr. Volz has been chief since 1905 and a member of the department since 1899.

The Chicago firemen's team is managed by Chester Sullivan and the home town nine by Charles Page and Joseph Brodman, captain.

WILLIE HOWARD'S CONTRIBUTION TO RADIO TWOFOLD

Popularized French Lesson, Rescued Vallee.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

WILLIE HOWARD.

Willie Howard's contributions to radio have been twofold: He has popularized the French professor by radio [without ever using a word of French] and he rescued Rudy Vallee the time he and George White battled it out backstage between acts of "The Scandals." [Willie and his brother Eugene are playing in "The Scandals here now.]

Willie's version of this affair, as recalled with gestures, is a honey. It seems that Rudy's wrath had been smoldering ever since he was making a "Scandals" picture. Rudy was posing atop a chandelier when somebody removed the ladder and there he stayed for hours—— But then that's a long story and can't be retold here. Besides it loses its flavor if you can't see Willie telling it——

That's what's wrong with Willie and Eugene Howard on the radio—if there is anything wrong. You can't see them. And the funniest aspects of the Howards are visual. The Howards are one more reason why television should be hurried up.

He Has the French Flavor.

Meanwhile listeners must get along with only their vocal tricks. Though Willie uses no French words he has a good French inflection. That he owes to a grandma who was an Alsatian. And his Parisian accent is so good that French teachers are urging their students to follow him on the air.

He got a letter the other day from the headmaster of a fancy French school somewhere up the Hudson in which the teacher revealed that he had asked all the pupils to follow the Folies de Paree show because Willie Howard has that French diction down pat.

That isn't the only kind of fan mail he gets! French postal cards. You should see them!

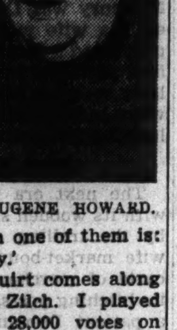
Willie confesses to a considerable enjoyment of his radio work.

"After all, why not?" he asks. "It's about all there is left of the entertainment business except the movies."

Resents Radio Amateurs.

Willie is plenty bitter about the "amateur" business in radio and he is no Maj. Bowes admirer.



EUGENE HOWARD.

"I have an idea for a little sketch in my next show," he declared. "It would show the reception room of a big producer, say, like Shubert. A lot of big men are waiting there for a chance to talk to the producer—fellows from the Lambs' club, we can't say George M. Cohan, but big fellows like him.

"The word to each one of them is: 'No interviews today.'

"Then a young squirt comes along and says, 'I'm Joe Zilch. I played the kazoo and got 28,000 votes on Maj. Bowes' amateur hour last Sunday night!'

"'That's the guy we want,' says the producer. 'Send him right in!'

"Why, we had a fellow singing with us in the Ziegfeld Follies last year—what was his name?—Frank Howe—a good singer, too. When the show closed up he went around to Maj. Bowes, changed his name, and said, 'I'm a butcher's delivery boy.' Of course, he got the big vote and started running around the country with his amateur gang for a few pennies."

Nope, Willie Howard has no use for the radio amateur business.

They Look Over Script.

The brothers Howard, having finished their luncheon, extract the scripts they have just received from New York by air mail from Billy K. Wells, who drafts the final version of their stuff. It's funny to watch a pair of comedians look over their continuity for the first time. They don't laugh. They don't even smile. Their chief concern seems to be how it can be cut so that they will have time to do it in the periods allotted them.

Kept at Safe Distance.

But they do get a kick out of reading their lines when they get to the studios. Willie likes to lean over the footlights on the stage. Thus in the studio he keeps on getting closer to the microphone until the metallic box can't take all of his vocal output. So they've rigged up a stand between Willie and the mike now, which keeps him at a safe distance.

By the time they get on the air the Howards are positively enjoying the show—especially that applause that's piped in from the New York portion of the show a thousand miles away.

Watching Willie's microphone antics you are suddenly reminded [for no explainable reason] of the story of his first big break in the show business. Willie was a boy soprano in New York. He got so good that they decided to take him to Washington with an Anna Held show. Trains were so slow then that by the time they got to the capital his voice had changed and they had to ship him back to New York.

That wrecked his operatic ambitions and he became a comedian. He made good on the vaudeville stage; then came plays, revues, movies, and now he dishes out those comic antics before the microphone every Wednesday night—and makes you like it.

ABOARD THE CRUISING SLOOP FLIGHT

OZZIE NELSON'S BAND TO OPEN AT PALMER HOUSE

Music to Be Aired Over W-G-N and Mutual.

To say that Ozzie Nelson is versatile is putting it mildly, no less, when a careful survey is made of the interesting background presented by the youthful band leader who is to bring his orchestra to the Empire room of the Palmer house and to W-G-N and the Mutual network next Saturday for an extended engagement.

Ozzie first achieved recognition when he sang for the late King Albert of Belgium at the Olympic games held in Antwerp in 1920. Then followed a few years while he was finishing his high school work and developing his vocal talents.

Entering Rutgers university, Ozzie prepared for law and actually obtained his degree, but won the admiration of the campus with his feats on the football field, his stirring oratory, and his humor as well as for his clever dance rhythms.

Ozzie organized his first dance band upon enrolling in the university in order to take care of the financial end of his education.

Nelson has played long engagements at the Park Central and New Yorker hotels and he has been heard on both NBC and CBS. He has an NBC commercial show from which he is vacationing for the summer.

Joy Hodges, lovely ballad and blues singer, who has replaced Harriett Hilliard as the featured vocalist with the band, is also heard in the duets with Nelson.

LANDON ADDRESS THURSDAY TO BE AIRED BY MUTUAL

The Mutual Broadcasting system is to broadcast the Republican notification ceremonies and acceptance address of Gov. Alfred M. Landon at 9 o'clock next Thursday evening, through coöperation of station WHB of Kansas City, Mo.

W-G-N and other Mutual stations will carry the ceremonies in their entirety. Congressman Bertrand Snell, following introduction by Chairman John Hamilton, will give the notification address. Gov. Landon's address is expected to be started at about 9:20 p. m.

John Schilling and Dick Smith, WHB announcers, M. H. Straight, continuity editor, and John Cameron Swayze, of the Kansas City Journal Post, news commentator, will handle the broadcast. Don Davis, manager of WHB, and Henry Goldenberg, chief engineer, will be in charge of details.

Comments of outstanding political personages who will be among the 100,000 spectators expected to attend the ceremony will be aired.

At 9 p. m. Thursday, July 30, the Mutual network will broadcast the acceptance speech of Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential nominee, from Chicago.

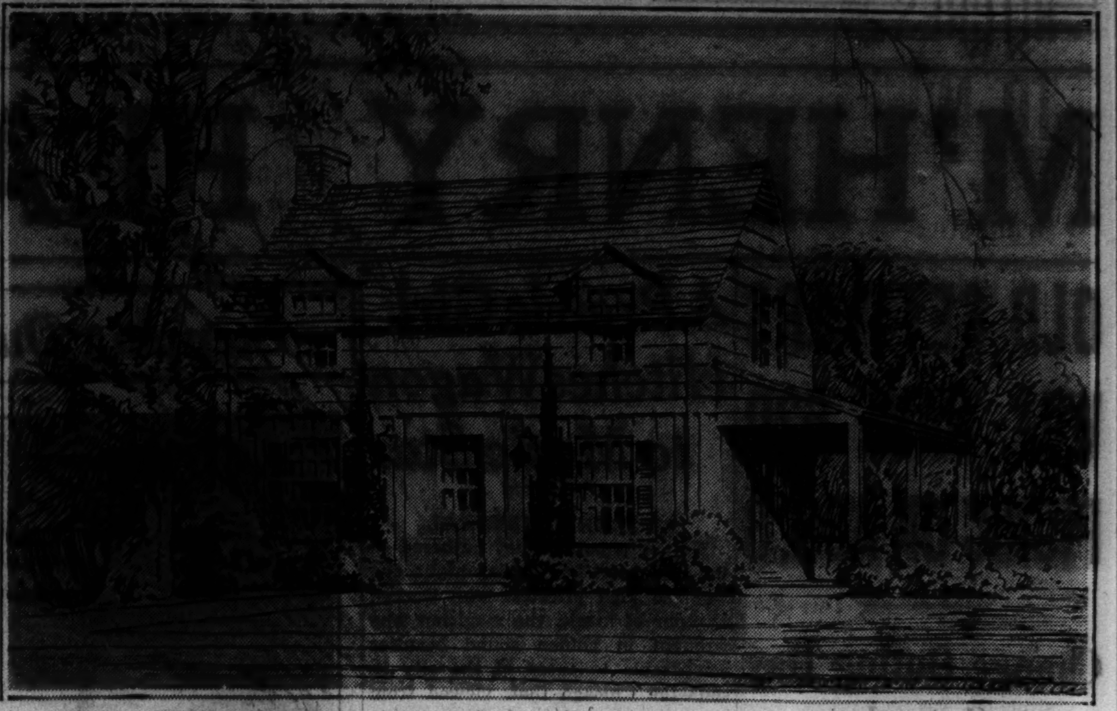
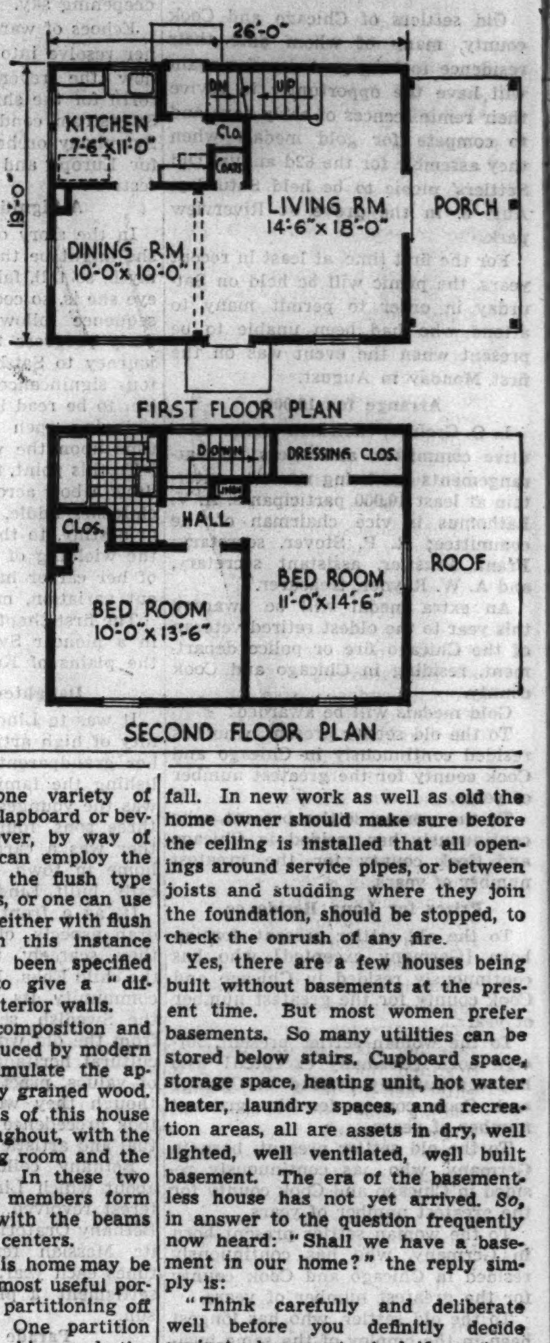
PLEASANT LITTLE BUDGET HOUSE



This home, in the $5,000-$6,000 class, has exterior walls of white siding on second floor, and vertical boards on first. There's a large basement, and cross ventilation in every room. Architect, Elmer Gyllick, A. I. A., 10 North Clark street.



Plaster is recommended on all interior walls. In dining room and living room ceilings of exposed wood, the structural members form a beamed ceiling.

In this second floor layout we find quite sizable bedrooms for so small a home. A maximum use of every square foot of floor space obviously has been effected.

FIVE ROOM HOME WELL DESIGNED FOR $5,000 CLASS

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

For the most part this last year we have shown in our home building and remodeling columns only actual instances of new and modernized homes. There is an ever increasing volume of these types of interesting dwellings, and we have confined ourselves largely to illustrations and stories dealing with real construction work.

However, now and again we find carefully planned house perspectives and layouts in the low cost bracket, perspectives which aim to show what is possible these days in the building field, at prices ranging from $5,000 to $6,000.

We have shown attractively designed homes in the above price group in concrete, in wood, in stucco, and in brick. We also have shown examples of houses in the prefabricated field, in designs moderne.

Some of these latter types of homes include houses which may be said to be wholly prefabricated; that is, houses which are furnished to the buyer as a complete job, with lighting, plumbing, heating, and appliance fixtures included. Again there are companies which build houses of steel framework for exterior walls, load bearing partitions and floor joists; houses which may be of different designs and varying exterior wall surfaces. These are not strictly prefabricated houses, since interior finish and walls are done "on the field."

Prefabricated Wood Houses.

Nor are steel houses the only prefabricated houses available today. There is the prefabricated wood house which now is being developed with sections of plywood of approximately the same size as the steel panels found in metal homes. And there also are the ready cut frame houses which we have had with us for some time, but which constantly are being improved, with the end in view of providing better houses for less money.

It still remains true, however, that the great majority of homes being built today are constructed by conventional and established methods, and in the traditional styles, rather than in the moderne.

Today's home shows a traditional type of architecture, and specifies conventional building methods. It is a quiet, conservative little house, so planned as to afford a five room home within a budget of $5,000 to $6,000. It is practical because of its extremely simple floor plan, and its rooms are as large as they possibly could be in a house of this type, with a cubic content of less than 14,000 feet.

Variety of Effects with Wood.

The exterior walls are of wood. Enclosing walls of wood siding usually suggest only one variety of wood, that is of the clapboard or beveled varieties. However, by way of further variety, one can employ the beveled V-groove, or the flush type with its smooth joints, or one can use the siding vertically, either with flush or batten joints. In this instance vertical boards have been specified for the first floor to give a "different" look to the exterior walls.

Also available are composition and synthetic sidings produced by modern machinery. These simulate the appearance of beautifully grained wood.

Plaster on the walls of this house is recommended throughout, with the exception of the living room and the dining room ceilings. In these two rooms the structural members form the beamed ceiling, with the beams 4 by 8 by 20 inches on centers.

The basement in this home may be made into one of the most useful portions of the house by partitioning off its different spaces. One partition can inclose the coal bin, and the space which remains may be divided into different service quarters, according to the needs of the family. These partitions may be of lumber or wall board. If a ceiling is built in the basement several useful purposes will be served at once. It will keep a great deal of dust from passing from the basement to the upper floors of the house, and if it is fire-resistant [which it should be!] it will retard the spread of fire from the basement upwards.

Ceilings in Basements.

Many ceilings will be put on modernized basements this summer and fall. In new work as well as old the home owner should make sure before the ceiling is installed that all openings around service pipes, or between joists and studding where they join the foundation, should be stopped, to check the onrush of any fire.

Yes, there are a few houses being built without basements at the present time. But most women prefer basements. So many utilities can be stored below stairs. Cupboard space, storage space, heating unit, hot water heater, laundry spaces, and recreation areas, all are assets in dry, well lighted, well ventilated, well built basement. The era of the basementless house has not yet arrived. So, in answer to the question frequently now heard: "Shall we have a basement in our home?" the reply simply is:

"Think carefully and deliberate well before you definitly decide against a basement. And, if you finally decide you do want it, you will be in good company, for most of the other present home builders are making the same decision."

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 8:15 p. m.

4 GRANT PARK CONCERTS TO BE AIRED ON W-G-N

The music of two outstanding symphonic orchestras and two well known Chicago bands will be heard on the W-G-N and Mutual broadcasts from the Grant park band shell on Chicago's lake front this week. All of the broadcasts will be presented at 8:30 p. m., with Pierre Andre as commentator and announcer.

The schedule follows: Monday, Dasch's band, conducted by George Dasch with Marjorie Dodge as soloist, who will sing "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from "Samson and Delilah."

On Tuesday the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra will be heard under the direction of Richard Czerwonky, with Jeanette Van der Velpen, soprano, singing "Queen of the Night" from Mozart's "Magic Flute."

Clarence Evans of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, in the absence of Dr. Frederick Stock and Eric Delamarter, will conduct that organization in the concert and broadcast Wednesday night when the Symphony in D Minor by Franck will be played.

Thursday night's concert will feature the Cavallo Modern choir, directed by P. A. Cavallo Jr. with the Cavallo's Symphonic band, directed by P. A. Cavallo Sr. "Love in Bloom" and "Some of These Days" will be sung by the choir.

A PRAIRIE GIRL HITCHES WAGON TO MUSIC STAR

Orchestra Owes Rise to Ebba Sundstrom.

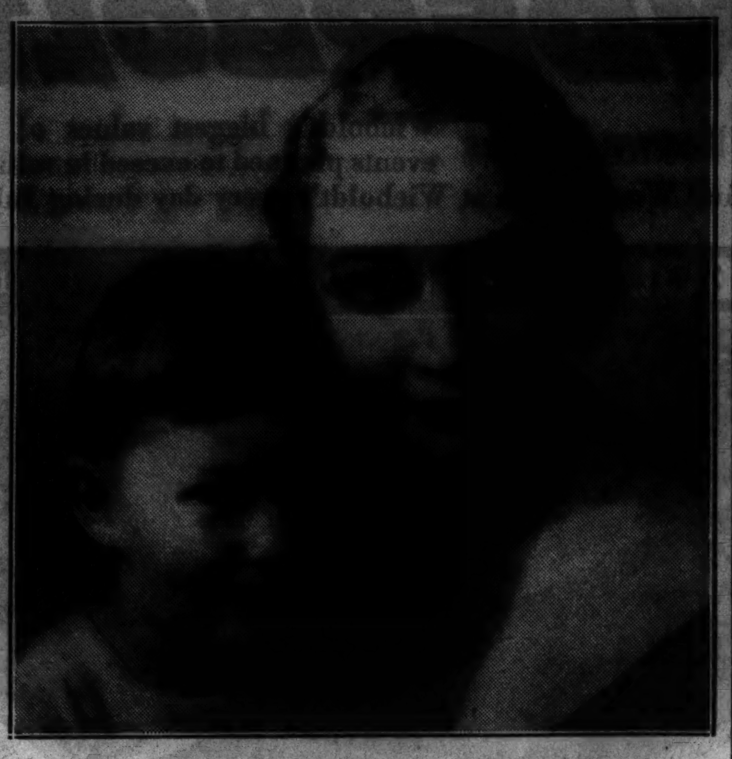
FAMED ARTIST AND SON



To the world of music she is known as Ebba Sundstrom, the tall, fair, slender young artist who conducts the Woman's Symphony orchestra of Chicago. But she takes her place in her north side community as Mrs. Nylander, wife of Dr. Victor T. Nylander, 4921 North Sawyer avenue, and mother of sturdy 5 year old Reinhold, who here proudly appears with her.

[Moffett Photo.]

she wrote, appending the humorous confession, "I must admit, though, that I was more appreciative of the Sundstrom's Swedish pancakes than of Ebba's endless scale practicing."

Test of Her Ardor.

To this point every important element in her life was one to encourage the child artist in her ambitions. Then came the test of fortitude. The family moved first to Oklahoma, later to Arkansas, into rural communities where violin instruction was an unknown luxury. Ebba was left to her own resources. Her ardor was that of a young crusader. She taught, organized music clubs and classes, played at every entertainment.

Her sisters and brothers, however, were determined that she should have her opportunity. The brother, who was on the faculty at Monmouth college, invited her to come to him in Illinois. Though she was 14 and in preparatory school before the year was out she was in her element again, a high school freshman happily playing in the college orchestra.

Finally came the great opportunity—the chance to enter the Minneapolis School of Music, the chance to study violin under the concertmeister of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, Carl Scheurer. This time it was Ebba's married sister, herself an accomplished singer and organist, who played the rôle of fairy godmother.

Student, then instructor. The design was becoming clear.

Wins Degree at 18.

Ebba Sundstrom was granted her bachelor's degree in music at the age of 18. For five years she remained at the school as a member of the faculty of the violin department. They were fruitful years, years destined to shape her future. Now she was studying with Richard Czerwonky, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony. More and more the orchestral classics were absorbing her interest. To each concert she went armed with the score of the symphonic work she was to hear. Beethoven, Bach, Brahms, Mozart, Dvorak—into her memory she gathered their masterpieces, little knowing how one day, exchanging the violin of the virtuoso for the conductor's baton, she would draw forth her hoarded treasure.

It chanced then that the sister whose home she shared fell ill, leaving Grace Lutheran church without a choir director. Ebba volunteered to take her place at the organ. It was destined that even romance was to enter her life by way of a song. The leading tenor in the choir was Dr. Victor Nylander.

She was wearing Dr. Nylander's engagement ring when Chicago summoned.

Another Step Upward.

Czerwonky was leaving the Minneapolis symphony to become head of the violin department of Bush Conservatory of Music. Would Ebba come as his assistant? It meant separation from her fiancé and perhaps an indefinite postponement of her marriage. Again opportunity was beckoning to a wider horizon, and for the artist there was only one answer. If confident, the Ebba Sundstrom who relinquished her secure place in Minneapolis in 1918 was not the eager, heart free girl of other adventures, but one who had learned the full meaning of dedication.

In those first months in Chicago she had need of the qualities of courage, patience, and resourcefulness bequeathed her by her sturdy Nordic fathers. While building up her class at the conservatory she found jobs at theaters substituting for absentee organists, gave concerts for various Swedish church societies, and searched for a choir opening, which eventually she found at the Epworth Methodist church, that had lost its regular organist to the army. Three other church choirs were added later to her sphere of activity.

Gains New Experience.

"Invaluable experience," she rates what she gleaned as organist and choir director. "Whatever I know about the way to deal with people of different temperaments in winning them to coöperative effort I learned in the choir loft." Certainly that knowledge is plenitudinous and has been one of the determining factors in her success with the Woman's symphony.

Also she was preparing diligently for the contest sponsored by the National Federation of Music clubs. She won in both the district and state.

At the conservatory, meanwhile, she had taken over the direction of the Bush Junior orchestra, and, in the symphony, which Czerwonky conducted, she was concertmeister.

A Woman's Symphony orchestra for Chicago was Czerwonky's idea. In his conservatory orchestra every major division had a feminine head.

Birth of an Idea.

"Surely in this great city there is room for a woman's symphony," he encouraged the student players. "You must form an orchestra of your own. I will help you."

The work of organization was undertaken by Adeline Schmidt, first flutist; Lillian Poenisch, first clarinetist; Lois Bichl, first 'cellist. Rehersals began in October of 1925. The new orchestra, with Czerwonky conducting, made its debut at the Goodman theater the following spring.

From thenceforth Ebba Sundstrom's career was to be linked with the Woman's Symphony orchestra.

In its second season the baton passed to the hand of Mme. Ethel Leginska. At Leginska's insistence, a first violinist, one admittedly reluctant to leave her concertmeister's chair, was advanced to the position of assistant conductor. Thus it transpired that when, after two seasons, Laginska was obliged to retire because of conflicting engagements Ebba Sundstrom took her place.

Moments of Artistry.

The orchestra has had its growing pains. There have been occasions when only the tact, fortitude, and foresight of its leader have staved off major difficulties. But in compensation there have been the moments of high artistic achievement.

Most noteworthy of these were its performances in the Floating theater and the Ford gardens at A Century of Progress exposition. Definitly, by its contributions to the Fair it raised itself from amateur to professional standing. Other triumphs appreciative audiences will not soon forget were those at the Swedish festival concert at the Civic Opera house and the one it shared with the Swedish Choral club at Orchestra hall.

Confirmed were its laurels last summer by the Grant park concert series. Its "adoption" this year by the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs as the music department's special project gives convincing evidence of the growing appreciation of the fact that in the Woman's symphony the city has an artistic organization worthy of encouragement.

Original Plan Realized.

At last the original plan of developing it into an orchestra entirely of woman players has been realized, and under Ebba Sundstrom's baton a standard répertoire of symphonic music has been mastered.

What is its clear eyed conductor's estimate of this feminine institution that has absorbed ten years of her artistic endeavor? And what does the future promise?

Miss Sundstrom recognizes the orchestra's virtues as the combined merits of its eighty players—brilliance, grace, delicacy, freshness, spontaneity. The music critics have been unanimous in applauding the wisdom that gives full value to these qualities in the building of programs. Otherwise—well, perhaps one might wish for a greater measure of masculine firmness and stability as a balance.

One Difficulty Past.

"But even in that direction we are making progress," the conductor, smilingly defending "the girls," asserts. "At first it seemed impossible to sustain a tempo. That's no longer a difficutly," she explains. "We are ready now to concentrate on nuance, phrasing, and interpretation."

There is, of course, another than the musical side to the story of Ebba Sundstrom.

Its setting is the pleasant home with rooms cool and spacious at 1421 North Sawyer avenue. In it Miss Sundstrom the artist yields precedence to charming Mrs. Nylander. Its chief character is not, however, as might be supposed, either Dr. Nylander, who shortly after she left Minneapolis followed his fiancée to Chicago, or Mrs. Nylander. That part is reserved to young Reinhold, who is 5, brown, sturdy, happy, and handsome, and who has a dimple in his cheek like his mother's.

AT HOME

Mrs. Harold Lebo, the former Miss Ruth June Speise, was recently married at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Speise, 2300 North Sayre avenue. The couple is at home at 1734 New England avenue.

YOUNG GYMNASTS TO HOLD CIRCUS ON WEDNESDAY

Peanuts, popcorn and pink lemonade—these are the accessories. Acrobats, scarf dancers and clowns—these are the performers for the gymnastic circus which will be put on by the 700 students of park gym classes in the northwest area at 8 o'clock on Wednesday evening at Portage park, Irving Park boulevard and Long avenue.

An arena has been constructed around the old swimming pool. The committee in charge of construction included M. J. George, Jack Rapper, and Edward Perry.

Among the acts will be an exhibition of skill and team work in ladder pyramiding, a demonstration of drills and exercises on gymnasium apparatus, a burlesque acrobatic number and a balancing act. The dances are under the direction of Miss Grace Peterson, Miss Frances Stewart, and Miss Mary Koelling.

The last part of the program will be given over to an adagio dance and a display of acrobatic accomplishments by 12 year old Renee Thompson. There will also be a tumbling act by the Free children, a troupe headed by Connie Free, 10 year old girl.

The closing number will be a scene depicting wild west days with a cast of 150 in a portrayal of Indian and cowboy dances. Tommy Evans will demonstrate his feats in handling a rope in this scene. Leonard Sterling will be the circus announcer.

A. W. Luchs has charge of the properties and is assisted by Walter Norman, William Sidor, and Edward Stift. The theatrical makeup will be supervised by Miss Frances G. Burke and William Shephard.

FLOWERS GIVEN TO THOUSANDS OF SHUT-INS WEEKLY

Guild Activities Greater than Ever Before.

Despite the late growing season the free distribution of flowers and plants among hospital patients, shut-ins, and underprivileged persons in Chicago this spring and early summer by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild has been greater than ever before, officers announced last week.

J. V. Purcell, president, and Mrs. William H. Schultz, general chairman of the share the flowers campaign, reported the response of flower growers has been steady and generous since the traditional May Lilac days, when the guild and THE TRIBUNE distributed lilacs among 20,000 unfortunates.

Each week day except Saturday quantities of flowers grown in outlying north, south, and west suburbs are brought by train to Chicago, where they are placed in trucks and delivered to their destinations in settlement houses, hospitals, and tenement homes.

Hundreds Aid Movement.

The flowers are contributed by hundreds of garden owners, a majority of whom are members of suburban garden clubs. Each club has a guild chairman, whose duty it is to assemble the flowers at a designated railroad station, where they are taken aboard trains and whisked to the city.

The guild chairmen work under the supervision of eight division chairmen, who in turn are directed by the general chairman. The latter is elected by the Illinois Garden club.

In Chicago the actual distribution is handled by members of the Visiting Nurses' association. Their services, as are those of the guild chairmen, the six railroads which transport the flowers, and, in fact, every individual and agency associated in the campaign, are voluntary and free. The delivery trucks are furnished by D. F. Kelly of The Fair store.

82 Garden Clubs.

Some idea of the vastness of the share the flowers enterprise may be had from the fact that 82 garden clubs with a combined membership of more than 3,000 women coöperate in the campaign.

The suburban area involved extends north to Lake Bluff, northwest to Crystal Lake and Woodstock, west to Aurora, Geneva, and St. Charles, and south to Flossmoor and Joliet.

The Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild was organized as a branch of the national guild in July, 1926.

Railroad Aids Work.

The North Western railroad will transport the flowers contributed by the northwest suburban garden clubs. The area is headed by Mrs. Fred A. Record of Barrington.

Persons wishing to contribute flowers may contact either Mrs. Record or the guild chairman of the garden clubs in their community. Members of the Wisconsin division which covers the northwest suburbs will assemble their flowers on Wednesday.

The clubs, with their guild chairmen, are Norwood Park Garden club, Mrs. John C. Pyles; the Home and Garden Club of Edison Park, Mrs. Oscar Loberg; the Garden Club of Edison Park, Mrs. H. W. Alberry; the founders group of the Garden Club of Edison Park, Mrs. O. E. Brown.

Other Clubs Listed.

Park Ridge Garden club, Mrs. R. W. Dotts; Des Plaines Garden club, Mrs. Herbert Renner; Palatine Garden club, Mrs. Elvis Foster; the Garden Club of Barrington, Mrs. H. G. Zander; the Countryside Garden Class of Barrington, Mrs. Robert P. Howland; Village Garden club of Barrington, Mrs. Maud Fleming; Fox River Grove Garden club, Mrs. Robert MacMaster.

Cary Garden club, Mrs. Frank C. Hubert; Cary Gypsy Maidens Junior Garden club, Miss Elaine Rasmussen; Crystal Lake Garden club, Mrs. Arthur Lloyd; Dundee Woman's club, Mrs. Less Bond; Algonquin Garden club, Mrs. William Wahlen and Woodstock Garden club, Mrs. Edward Becking.

Wicker Park Woman's Club Will Give Party Tuesday

The Wicker Park Woman's club will hold a card party at 1 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon at the Advent Church Parish hall, Logan boulevard and Francisco avenue. Mrs. Elberg N. Johnsen, philanthropy chairman, has charge.

TROTH ANNOUNCED

Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Friese, 6625 Oshkosh avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis Eda, to Robert Emerson Pitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Pitt, 330 Touhy avenue, Park Ridge.

trips along the river carrying passengers and freight. McHenry was made a village in 1872 and a city in 1923.

Characters in Pageant.

As the pageant unfolds the stories of these old places and people, young men and women of McHenry will characterize the early residents, dressed in the exact clothes they wore and which have been handed down from generation to generation. Mrs. Fannie Granger Thompson has given white dresses and sandals that were worn at the wedding of Alicia Smith and Sherman Chapell in 1896 in addition to a gray silk wedding dress worn in 1887.

Mrs. Charles Ensign has a two piece brown dress that was worn in 1881. Other ensembles are owned by Mrs. Emma Fay, Miss Anna Frisby, Mrs. Thomas Kane, Mrs. Cora Flanders, Mrs. Grace McCannon, Mrs. Millie Gwens, Mrs. Eleanor Nye and Wayne Foss Ringwood.

The centennial celebration is being planned by R. I. Overton, general chairman; A. H. Mosher, advertising; O. N. Justen, decoration; Mrs. Calla Perkins, old settlers picnic; C. H. Duker, pageant; Ray McGee, Mrs. C. W. Lkontz, Mr. Mosher, and Mrs. Lillian Sayler, program.

G. H. Johnson is in charge of McHenry day; Mrs. Ony Wheeler, Memorial day service; Edward Busse, Charles Lyons, and Roy Miller, parade; Mrs. Sayler, invitations; Mrs. Fannie Thompson and Mrs. Laura Hughes, historical committee; Mrs. Marie Schaefer, registration; C. W. Goodell, old train; Mrs. Barbara Krause, antiques; Walter French, boat committee, and Mrs. Goodell and Mrs. O. N. Justen, queen committee.

Trinity Lutheran Church Plans Sports Program

Basketball, volleyball, table tennis, gymnastics and other recreational activities will be made available to younger members of the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church with the appointment of a committee by the Rev. Carl Remboldt. Rehabilitation of an old section of the church to provide the necessary space will be directed by Walter Kolb.

TOURIST

MISS VERONA BECK.

All points west is the goal of Miss Verona Beck, 6845 Northwest highway, who is making an extended three weeks trip to the western, the southern states and Mexico. Her itinerary includes the Texas Centennial at Dallas, the Carlsbad taverns, El Paso, Los Angeles, Catalina island, Yosemite park, San Francisco, Portland, and Seattle. She also is taking a Pacific ocean cruise to Vancouver as a last lap on the journey. Miss Beck will return to Chicago next week-end.

15 BOOKS GIVEN TO LIBRARY IN ELMWOOD PARK

A shelf of 15 new books has been donated by Elmwood Park and by the John Mills Parent-Teacher association as the beginning of a rental collection for the new Elmwood Park library. They may be borrowed at the rate of 3 cents per day with a minimum charge of 5 cents, according to the librarian, Miss Ida M. Agruss.

The books represent such authors as Banning, Boleau, Grey, Marquand, Nordhoff, Wells, Wharton, and Zweig. The library story hour will be held at 10:30 o'clock on Saturday mornings in the children's room.

Donations for the new library also have been received from Mrs. J. C. Terry, John W. Murray, George Luhr, and various business men in the community.

TWO WEST SIDE CHORUSES ENTER MUSIC CONTEST

Both Groups Will Sing in Tribune Festival.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Two west side mixed choruses, the Plon and the Elmhurst societies, are entered in the choral contest of the seventh Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The forty-five men and women in the Plon organization are directed by Alexander Karczynski and the Elmhurst group of fifty-five by Clemens A. Hutter.

W. G. McGRANE.

The Plon chorus has been organized five years and in 1935 took first prize in the Polish Singers' alliance of America's national competition here. The director composed the music used for Polish day at the World's Fair.

The Elmhurst vocalists won second place in the 1934 festival mixed chorus contest. Victor H. Petertyl is president. Two hundred and fifty patrons sponsor the chorus, whose members live in Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard, Glen Ellyn, Des Plaines, Hillside, Lyons, and Chicago.

In Preliminary Contest.

The Plon chorus is entered in the Cook county preliminary contest which will be held at 7 o'clock Wednesday night, Aug. 12, in the Drake. The Elmhurst chorus will participate in the mixed chorus finals Saturday, Aug. 15, also at the Drake. Both groups will join the chorus of 1,000 voices at the festival concert that night in Soldiers' field.

West and northwest side festival followers are invited to attend the north side vocal preliminaries which will be held at 7 o'clock Thursday and Friday nights in the Edgewater Beach hotel. There is no admission fee. About 200 men and women will compete for the right to represent that section in the Cook county finals Thursday night, Aug. 13, at the Drake.

Nearly 200 west side girls held two rehersals last week at the Madison Athletic club, 4711 Madison street, for the festival dance pageant. Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, who has charge of rehersals, says students still may enroll and the next practice will be at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Northwest side girls who reside nearer the 202 Coast Artillery armory, 5875 Broadway, are invited to join the north shore group in its practices at the same time.

West Side Vocalists.

Among the vocalists entered in the west side competition are a C. Y. O. singing contest runner-up, president of the Young Artist auxiliary of the Chicago Woman's Musical club, a 35 year old woman who turned vocalist after studying piano, a student of operatic rôles, a dental supply house employé, and a last year's third place winner in the west side festival contest.

The C. Y. O. lad is Walter George McGrane, 17 years old, a baritone, 5032 North Natoma avenue. The auxiliary head is Loretta Todd, mezzo, 1134 North Mason avenue.

The pianist turned soprano is Joan Christiansen, 5620 School street. The student of opera is Miss Theresa M. Romano, 24 years old. The dental house clerk is Stuart A. Joransen, 22 years old, 2423 Ballou street. The young man who placed last year is Thomas A. Zurich, 25, of 3653 Wabansia avenue. He is a soloist with the Grieg Male chorus.

Lake Zurich Play Group to Open Season Tonight

"Meet the Wife," by Lynn Starling, will be presented by the Lake Zurich Summer theater opening its third season at 8:50 o'clock tonight in the theater near the sea wall. The production will be directed by John Driscoll. Members of the organization are amateurs.

TO WED AUG. 9

Miss Frieda Gerin Siegel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Siegel, 2547 West North avenue, who will become the bride of James Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cooper, 1837 North Austin avenue, Sunday, Aug. 9. Miss Siegel and Mr. Cooper are graduates of Northwestern university.

HINES HOSPITAL EXPECTS 25,000 AT REUNION AUG. 2

National Legion Chief to Attend Event.

Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion will be the speaker at the 16th annual homecoming of the Veterans Administration, Edward Hines Jr. center, Sunday, Aug. 2. Commander Murphy will be saluted by 30 planes through an arrangement by Aviation post. An attendance of 25,000 is expected at the hospital's "open house."

The program will start at 10 o'clock with ball games. The afternoon program will be in charge of J. B. Murphy, state commander of the Legion. In the evening, there will be a series of boxing bouts by C. Y. O. champions. The homecoming, with its bands and drum and bugle corps providing music, will be climaxed with a display of fireworks, according to John R. O'Connor, recreation director at Hines.

◆

The eighth annual picnic of Henry Honack post, No. 1583, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be held today at Marvel grove, 6873 Milwaukee avenue, Niles. Gates will be open at 9 a. m. The public is invited.

◆

Officers recently elected by Chicago chapter, No. 2, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, are Omar A. Cooper, commander; Charles Benson, senior vice commander; George A. May, first junior vice commander; Frank C. Laske, second junior vice commander; Joseph C. Marshak, third junior vice commander; Frank Zeman, adjutant; Henry Brauweiler, treasurer; Judge E. S. Scheffler, judge advocate; N. O. Isaacson, state executive committeeman; Walter Jasper and Charles Lewy, chapter executive committeemen.

The chapter, organized in 1921, has a membership of 468.

◆

Members of the drum and bugle corps of Marshall Field & Co. post, No. 11, will meet Tuesday night in room 907 of the Merchandise Mart for annual election of officers. Rehersals for competition in the Chicagoland Music festival, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, are being held by the corps every Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

Irving Park 'Y' Orchestra Will Have Picnic Today

A picnic will be held today at Round lake by the Irving Park Y. M. C. A. symphony orchestra. An open air concert will be given Thursday night at Paul Revere park, Irving Park boulevard and the river.

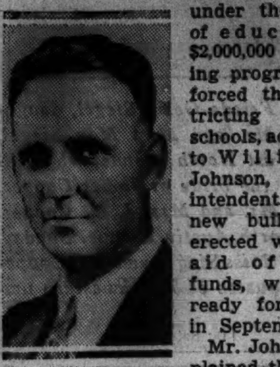
NORTHERN AREA SCHOOL DISTRICT LIMITS CHANGED

Shift Made to Increase Pupils' Safety.



W. H. JOHNSON.

Construction of seven north and northwest side elementary schools and additions, under the board of education's $2,000,000 building program, has forced the redistricting of ten schools, according to William H. Johnson, superintendent. The new buildings, erected with the aid of PWA funds, will be ready for pupils in September.

Mr. Johnson explained the designation of school boundaries is made by the bureau of building survey of the school board headed by Don C. Rogers. Mr. Rogers' recommendations are submitted to the superintendent for final approval.

He pointed out that wherever possible the redistricting conforms to the wishes of neighborhood civic bodies. "It is our aim to arrange the school boundaries so as few children as possible cross railroad tracks, busy streets or heavy trafic intersections," he added.

Locke School Addition.

Construction of the Locke elementary school addition, 2800 Newcastle avenue, costing $103,000, will relieve an overload now distributed in portables and neighboring schools. The Locke branch, three portables at Wellington and Nordica avenues, will be eliminated and the branch located at the Wright Junior college, 3400 North Austin avenue will be discontinued. Last year seventh and eighth grades from Locke and Lyon schools attended the Wright branch. Locke school will house all eight elementary grades.

Mr. Johnson pointed out that not only will the change benefit elementary school pupils but will increase the space available for college students at Wright Junior college.

The $95,000 addition in progress at the Lyon elementary school, 2941 North McVicker avenue, will relieve an overlead and permit elementary pupils attending Wright school to finish their work at the Lyon building. The Lyon school has 965 pupils and is using one portable and the library as classrooms. The addition will furnish eight more classrooms.

Will Cost $99,000.

The school under construction at Hiawatha and Kilpatrick avenues, at a cost of $99,000, is being erected on the site of a former branch of Palmer school. The branch consisted of four portables housing 145 pupils.

The new building will have seven rooms and a kindergarten and will house all eight grades, drawing many additional pupils who have been attending schools out of the district. The new school district boundaries are from Devon and Leona avenues, east to Pulaski road, south to Bryn Mawr avenue, west to the north branch of the Chicago river, northwest along the river to Leona avenue, northeast to the starting point.

Branch to Be Abolished.

The principal of Palmer school will act as principal of the new school. The Volta school branch at Peterson and Pulaski road will be eliminated when the new building is opened.

The west end of the Volta school boundary is to be annexed by Palmer school. The boundary will be the alley between Karlov and Keystone avenues. Volta school, which until now has had only seven grades, will have an eighth grade in September.

The Kilmer school addition, now under construction at a cost of $160,000, will relieve an eleven room overload. The Kilmer school, 6700 Greenview avenue, had 1,149 pupils last semester and used seven rooms in Sullivan High school. The addition, comprises twelve rooms. The boundary between Kilmer and Field schools is to be moved one-half block north to Farwell avenue.

Will Have Eighth Grade.

Peterson school, 5500 North Christiana avenue, which last year had grades from kindergarten to seventh, will have an eighth grade this year. Eighth grade pupils from Peterson school formerly attended an elementary unit in Von Steuben High school, 5039 North Kimball avenue.

Due to a decrease in attendance at Gray school, 3730 North Laramie street, eighth grade pupils no longer will be transferred to an elementary unit at Foreman High school, 5100 Belmont avenue.

The school under construction at Foster and North Oak Park avenues, at a cost of $131,000, will have seven rooms and a kindergarten and will draw pupils from Norwood Park school, 5900 Nina avenue, Hitch school, 5600 McVicker avenue, and Prussing school, 5650 North Menard avenue. It will operate as a branch of Norwood Park school housing kindergarten to sixth grades and will be built up to an eight grade school.

New School Boundaries.

Boundaries of the new school's district are from Harlem avenue and Higgins road, southeast to Norwood terrace, north to Catalpa avenue, east to Nagle avenue, south to Balmoral avenue, east to Mobile avenue, south to Berwyn avenue, east to Melvina avenue, south to city limits, west to Harlem avenue and north to the starting point.

The Lemoyne school addition, 851 Waveland avenue, will relieve an overload of ten rooms. The addition, costing $176,400 will have twelve rooms.

The new Grace street school, being erected at Panama and Grace streets at a cost of $263,700, will replace ten portables and will have fifteen rooms, including a kindergarten. The school board is considering the name of Alex Robinson, Indian chief, for it.

WILL GIVE POLISH DANCES

National Polish dances, the "mazur," the "krakowiak," and the "zbojecki," will be presented as a part of the Polish day festival this afternoon and evening at Riverview park by members of the Polish Roman Catholic Union of America. The three dancers in native costume are Miss Agnes Tabaszewska, left; Miss Rosalie Tabaszewska, right, and Miss Irene Fugiel.

HOW TO SUCCEED TOLD IN GUIDE TO PRINCIPALS

'Know Community' Handbook Advises.

BY EDWARD WILSON.

How a school principal can aid his school and pupils by dropping his pedagogical attitude and going into the school community to get acquainted with neighborhood business men, the local politicians and parents, was pointed out for the first time last week in a pamphlet published by a committee of Chicago principals. The committee, working under the authorization of the Chicago Principals' club, has spent more than two years preparing the treatise entitled, "Public Relations of the Principal."

Hermin Ritow, principal of the Boone elementary school and chairman of the public relations committee of the club, said last week: "We have compiled working information gathered from working principals, not gathered from books written by theorists in academies."

Tell "Facts of Life."

According to Arthur M. Nichelson, principal at Hirsch High school, and president of the Chicago Principals' club, the pamphlet will be distributed to all Chicago principals and probably will be used by the 2,000 applicants expected to take Chicago school principal examinations next fall.

"The candidates for principal's examinations have studied their subject in universities and colleges, but we are ready to tell them the 'facts of life' as seen by a principal," Mr. Ritow explained.

As an example of the attitude toward the educators' interests in politics, the book states, "It is vital to the future of our country and of our schools that educators take a more active and a more understanding interest in practical politics. Our aloofness is neither good citizenship nor good policy."

Should Know Party Leaders.

The pamphlet goes on to state that principals should acquaint themselves with the actual working of party management and party leaders.

A decided breakdown in the old-time aloof attitude of the educator is found in the statement, "There is a wealth of dependable helpfulness among public officials, of humanness and of humanity that would equally surprise us would we take the trouble to become acquainted."

The principals have struck a major point in the working of the political party system in the statement, "Public officials want to earn the good will of their constitutents and thus build up a following. They are anxious to be of help to as many as possible. From the office holder's point of view a chance to be of help to the school and community is a personal favor to him." Principals are encouraged, by the pamphlet, to show a courteous and friendly attitude toward men in public office.

Better Police Contacts.

The principals are advised to be in closer contact with the police of their district and to confer with them on major disciplinary problems.

Another chapter of the pamphlet advises principals to get acquainted with pupils' parents and to encourage education and youth weeks for the schools. The Parent-Teacher association is praised as a medium of contact with parents.

The principals are urged to work with community organizations and a list of typical local business, civic, educational, and philanthropic groups are included in the treatise. Six pages of the pamphlet are devoted to names, addresses, and telephone numbers of organizations in Chicago, both business and civic.

Must Look Ahead.

Summing up the work of the committee, Mr. Nichelson states, "It is not enough that the principal conduct his school in a way that meets the demands of a few years ago. Both the curriculum and the management of a school must be in step with successful educational experiments and with economic and social changes if it is to function properly in the lives of the children."

The committee which compiled the book stated, "We are convinced that much of a principal's success in a school can be attributed to successful public contacts."

RECENT BRIDE

[Nielsen Studio Photo.]

Miss Alice Elinor McLane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McLane, 1323 Mebford avenue, Des Plaines, became the bride of Lawrence Werner Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Anderson, 425 Meacham avenue, Park Ridge, at a recent ceremony in the First Congregational church, Des Plaines. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Edison Park.

NEW RIIS PARK PLAY FACILITIES READY AUG. 1

Former Golf Course Is Transformed.

The conversion of Riis park, at Meade and Fullerton avenues, from a sixty acre, nine hole golf course, into a playground and general recreation center is rapidly nearing completion, it was announced last week by H. K. Seltzer, Chicago director of the Works Progress administration. The park is being reconstructed by WPA labor under the direction of park district officials.

Mr. Seltzer said the park will be available to the public, with its new facilities, about Aug. 1.

A year ago the park was a public fee golf course, used by golfers from all parts of the north side and offering little recreational facilities to the people of the immediate neighborhood. Northwest side residents led a long fight to eliminate the golf course and construct a playground. Ald. George W. Robinson [36th] was active in the campaign for the playground.

Swimming Pool in Use.

The renovation of the park has included the installation of drainage and lighting systems, athletic fields, a swimming pool, a quarter-mile running track, parking areas, walks, picnic groves, a children's wading pool, sand pit and playground, shelters and comfort stations and a service building and yard.

The swimming pool, a "T" shaped natatorium, located at Fullerton avenue, just west of the park fieldhouse, was opened to the public July 1, and has already served several thousand adults and children of the neighborhood. The pool is opened at 12:30 each afternoon and available to children under 16 years old until 5:30 p. m. Adults may use the pool from 5:30 to 8:30 in the evening.

The park fieldhouse was the only permanent structure of the old Riis park that remained under the reconstruction plans.

Two Baseball Diamonds.

The recreational field, located east of the center of the park area, includes two baseball diamonds and four softball diamonds. Football and soccer will be played in season.

The parking areas are located just inside Fullerton and Wrightwood avenues near the center line of the park.

INSTITUTE WILL OPEN TOMORROW FOR MINISTERS

First of Three Conclaves for Church Leaders.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

PROF. WILHELM PAUCK.

Approximately 1,000 pastors from various parts of the country and representing many denominations will come to Chicago's three principal theological centers during the next two weeks for combined vacations and study.

While all these conferences are designed to provide instruction, fellowship, recreation, and spiritual refreshment for ministers in service, each of them in its individual evangelistic aspect will consider present day problems and review the latest materials related to theological education.

The first to open will be the third pastors' conference tomorrow through Friday, at Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, where six courses of lectures will be given on four consecutive days, Tuesday to Friday, by members of the faculty and visiting lecturers.

Forum Each Evening.

On each evening there will be a special address followed by an open forum. This has proved in former years to be the most attractive feature of the conference. The opening address will be by Prof. Henry Nelson Wieman on "How Prayer Works." On Tuesday, Prof. Wilhelm Pauck of Chicago Theological seminary will speak on "The Church and the World"; Dr. Douglas Horton of Hyde Park United church will deliver the institute sermon on Wednesday night.

The six lecture courses will be given by Harold A. Ehrensperger on "Literature Contributing to the Religious Life"; Dr. Edwin E. Voight on "The Place of the Old Testament in the Preaching Life of Today"; Prof. Murray H. Leifer on "The Church and Current Social Movements"; Prof. Paul S. Minear on "The Prophetic Religion of Jesus"; Prof. Harris Franklin Rall, director of the pastors' conference, on "A Study of Salvation, Individual and Social," and by the Rev. Harold C. Case, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Topeka, Kas., on "Pastoral Problems and Methods."

Presbyterian Conference.

The seventh annual conference for ministers conducted by the Presbyterian Theological seminary runs from July 27 to Aug. 1 with twenty-six courses of lectures covering the entire domain of the ministry.

Dr. John Timothy Stone will lecture on personal evangelism; the Rev. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, conference director, will consider current movements in Christian education; O. R. Sellers, in studies of the major prophets, will review recent archæological discoveries in Palestine; psychiatry and pastoral psychology will be treated by Karl R. Stolz and Frank W. Bible.

The fifth pastors' institute, conducted jointly by the divinity school of the University of Chicago, the Chicago Theological seminary, and the Disciples Divinity house, also opens on July 27 with a dinner at 6 o'clock, at which Prof. Charles T. Holman, chairman of the pastors' institute, will preside and the address of welcome, will be given by Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago. The institute will close Aug. 2.

A BROKEN-OUT skin is no help to any girl or boy who longs to be popular and have good times. But many young people are victims of this trouble.

After the start of adolescence — from about 13 to 25, or even longer—important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes disturbances throughout the entire body. The skin gets oversensitive. Harmful waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples break out.

Thousands have found Fleischmann's Yeast a great help in getting rid of adolescent pimples. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then, the pimples go!

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly each day—one cake about ½ hour before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin is clear. Start today.

The Shop Shows a Profit
LADIES, YOUR RENT IS LONG OVERDUE. I'M SORRY, BUT I'M AFRAID I CAN'T GIVE YOU MUCH MORE TIME!
HOW CAN WE PAY RENT, MR. BRADY - EVERY WOMAN IN TOWN OWES US MONEY... INCLUDING YOUR WIFE!
AW - HE'S JUST SORE BECAUSE YOU CAN'T MAKE HIS WIFE LOOK LIKE A MOVIE QUEEN!
BEAUTY SHOP
MR. COFFEE-NERVES
MY HUSBAND SAYS YOU GIRLS AREN'T DOING WELL. I'D LIKE TO HELP, SO I'M ASKING MY FRIENDS TO COME HERE!
WON'T THAT BE NICE, MRS. BRADY... IF YOUR FRIENDS CAN JUST PAY THEIR BILLS!
TELL THE OLD GAL SHE'S HOMELY! INSULT HER - MAKE HER MAD!
BUT RIGHT NOW I'D LIKE A PERMANENT - AND PLEASE HURRY, MARY ... I'M DUE AT MY BRIDGE CLUB AT 3 O'CLOCK!
SAY - IF A PERMANENT INTERFERES WITH YOUR BRIDGE, WHAT DID YOU COME HERE FOR, ANYWAY!
TELL THE OLD HAG TO GO AS SHE IS! - NO ONE WOULD NOTICE THE DIFFERENCE -
MARY - YOU INSULTED MRS. BRADY! SHE LEFT IN A RAGE, AND NOW PROBABLY SHE WON'T HELP US!
OH, WHO CARES? IF YOU HAD MY HEADACHES, YOU WOULDN'T BE ALWAYS WORRYING ABOUT BUSINESS!
WHAT RIGHT HAS SHE TO JUMP ON YOU? TELL HER SHE'S NOT SO SWEET HERSELF!
YOU OUGHT TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT THAT HEADACHE! WHY DON'T YOU GO SEE A DOCTOR?
OH, ALL RIGHT - I WILL! ANYTHING TO STOP YOUR NAGGING!
TELL HER YOU DON'T NEED A DOCTOR HALF AS BAD AS SHE WILL IF SHE DOESN'T PIPE DOWN!
- APPARENTLY A CASE OF COFFEE-NERVES! I SUGGEST YOU QUIT COFFEE, AND SWITCH TO POSTUM FOR 30 DAYS!
WELL - OF COURSE, IF YOU THINK IT WILL HELP!
CURSES! THESE DOCTORS ARE ALWAYS TOO SMART FOR ME!
WHY - THIS ICED POSTUM IS DELIGHTFUL! IT HAS ALL THE RICH DELICIOUS FLAVOR OF HOT POSTUM - AND IT'S SO REFRESHING!
30 DAYS LATER
THANK YOU FOR SENDING YOUR FRIENDS TO US, MRS. BRADY - WE'RE MAKING MONEY NOW - WITH SO MANY NEW CUSTOMERS!
OH, I'M SO GLAD! AND MY FRIENDS ALL SAY YOU HAVE BEEN SUCH A DEAR!
MARY'S BEEN SIMPLY WONDERFUL SINCE SHE SWITCHED TO POSTUM!
TAKE A TIP FROM ME - IF YOU'VE GOT COFFEE-NERVES... TRY POSTUM!

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffein in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?

If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly . . . caffein may be to blame.

Isn't it worth while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. Try Postum. You may miss coffee at first, but after 30 days you'll love Postum for its own rich, satisfying flavor. It is easy to make, delicious, economical, and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

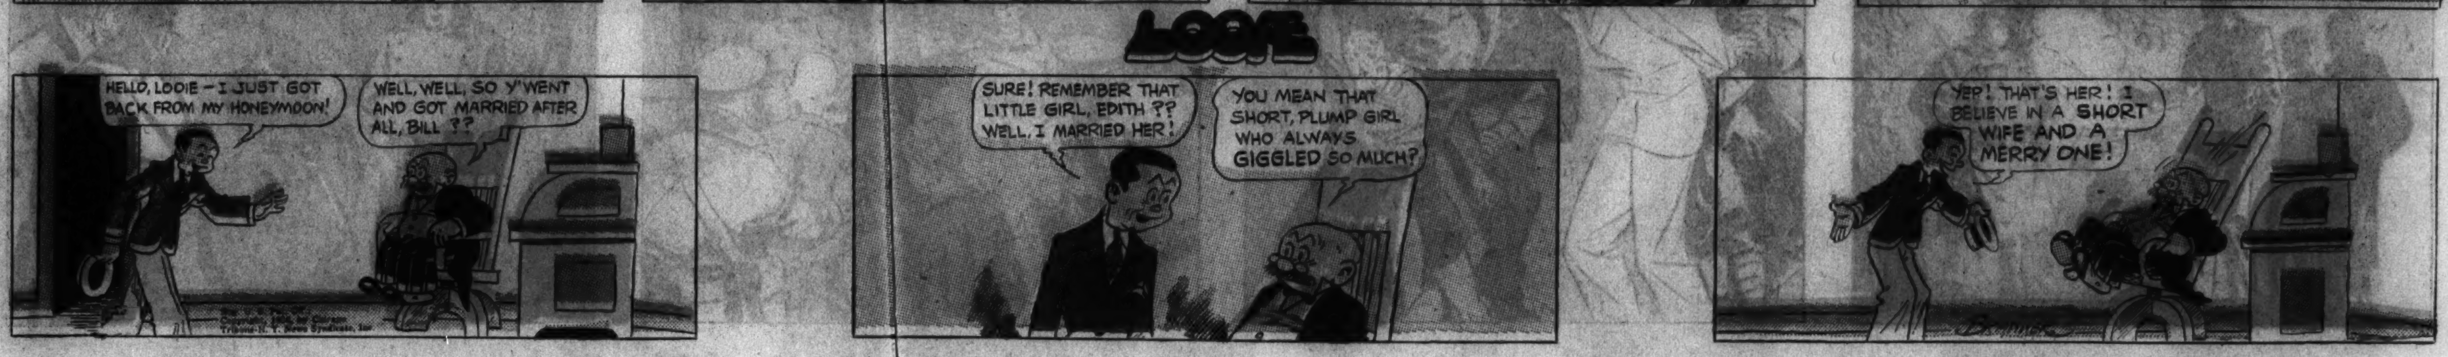
Winnie Winkle THE BREADWINNER
I CERTAINLY HOPE WE DIDN'T MAKE ANY MISTAKE LETTING PERRY GO OFF ALL SUMMER WITH MR. ROSEWOOD AND THOSE OTHER BOYS!
NONSENSE!! IT'LL TEACH HIM SELF-RELIANCE AND HE'LL LEARN A LOT ABOUT WOODCRAFT AND OUTDOOR LIFE!!
GEE, IT'S QUIET UP HERE IN PINE LAKE!
AIN'T THERE NO AUTO TO TAKE US UP TO YOUR LOG CABIN?
MERCY NO! WE'LL HAVE TO HIKE! IT'S ONLY 5 MILES UP THROUGH THE TRAIL!! COME ALONG, BOYS!!
GOOD GOSH! DO WE GOTTA WALK??
MY FEET ARE GETTIN' TIRED ALREADY!
WHY, WALKING IS THE BEST THING IN THE WORLD FOR YOU! HURRY UP, LADS!
JUST WAIT TILL YOU SEE MY LODGE, RIGHT ON THE SHORE OF THE LAKE, AND SMELL THE CRISP, MOUNTAIN AIR!! IT'S THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD FOR YOU!!
I THOUGHT YOU SAID WALKIN' WAS ??
NOW THIS IS WHERE WE LEAVE THE TRAIL AND ENTER THE WOODS, BOYS, SO YOU'D BETTER STICK RIGHT BY ME!!
WHAT'S THE MATTER- IS THERE ANY WILD ANIMALS IN THERE?
THE REAL TROUBLE IS THAT UNLESS ONE KNOWS THESE WOODS, ONE IS VERY APT TO GET LOST!!
WELL, WE DON'T HAFT A WORRY!! THERE'S FIVE OF US HERE!!
THERE'S ONE SURE WAY OF ALWAYS FINDING YOUR WAY BACK THROUGH A THICK FOREST!!
YEAH? HOW DO Y'DO THAT??
BY SIMPLY CARVING A CROSS ON THE TREES WITH YOUR HUNTING KNIFE AS YOU BEAT TRAIL THROUGH THE WOODS!
GEE! DID YOU EVER DO THAT UP HERE, MR. ROSEWOOD?
OH YES, MANY TIMES — DO YOU SEE THE BIG CROSS ON THIS PINE TREE, BOYS??
GEE - IT'S A BIG DEEP ONE
WELL, I CARVED THAT MARK IN THAT TREE EIGHT YEARS AGO WHEN I FIRST CAME THROUGH HERE!
OH, SO YOU'RE TH' GUY??
WELL, I'M TH' FORESTER UP HERE! I BEEN LOOKIN' FER YOU!! IT'LL COST YA $10 FER MARKIN' AN' DEFACIN' TH' TREES!



LOOIE
HELLO, LOOIE — I JUST GOT BACK FROM MY HONEYMOON!
WELL, WELL, SO Y'WENT AND GOT MARRIED AFTER ALL, BILL??
SURE! REMEMBER THAT LITTLE GIRL, EDITH?? WELL, I MARRIED HER!
YOU MEAN THAT SHORT, PLUMP GIRL WHO ALWAYS GIGGLED SO MUCH?
YEP! THAT'S HER! I BELIEVE IN A SHORT WIFE AND A MERRY ONE!

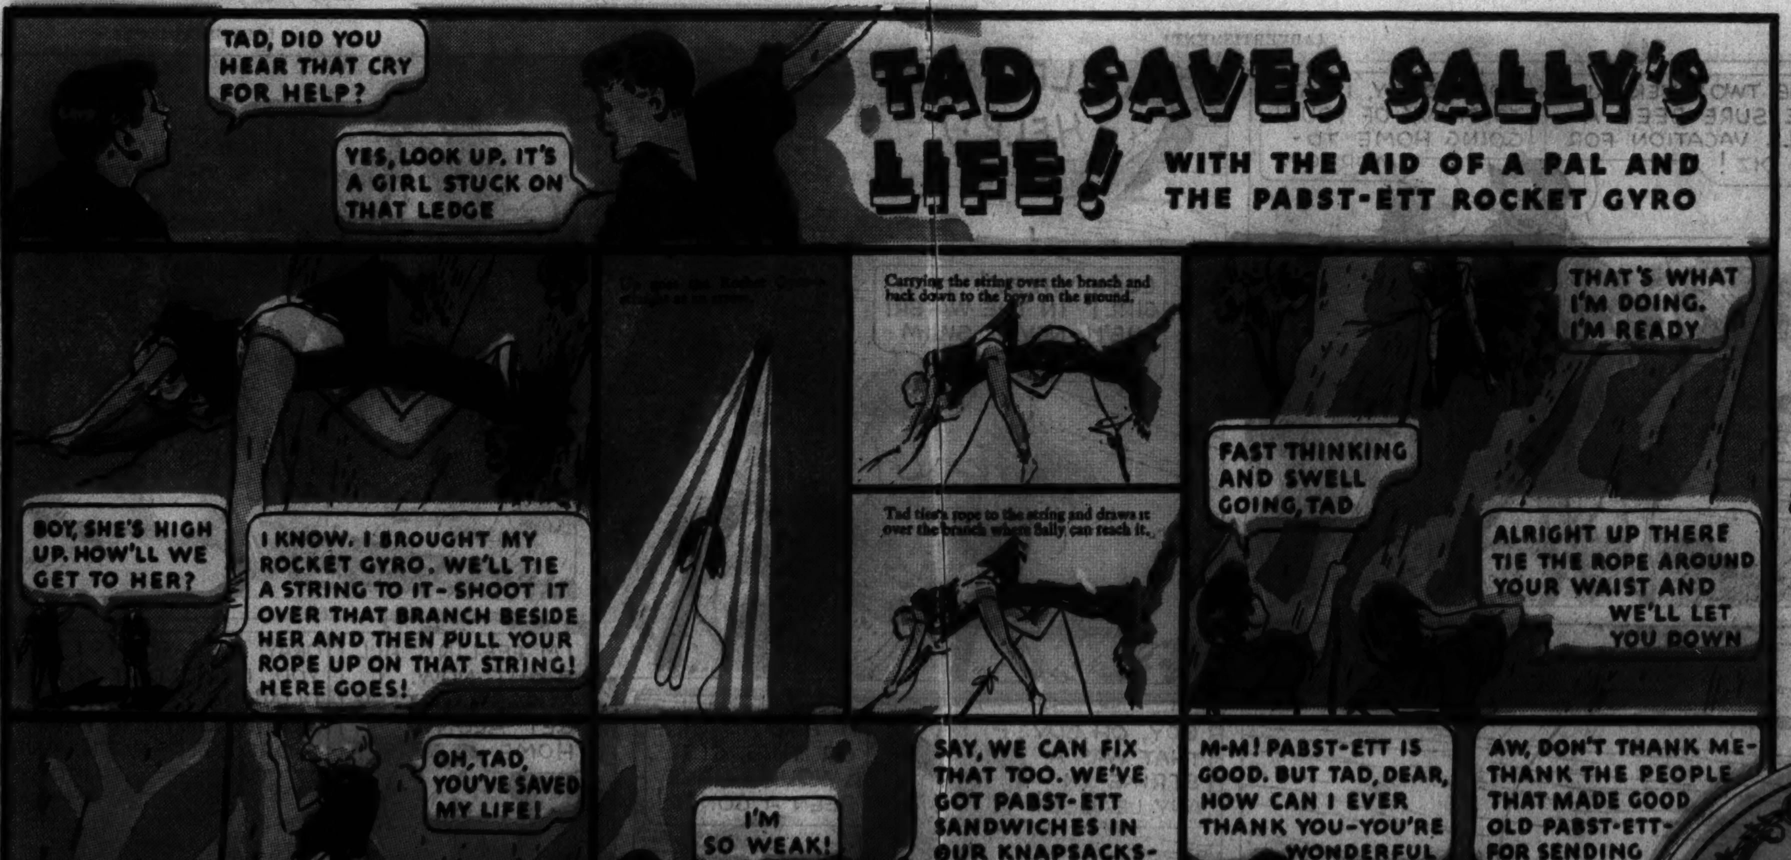
TAD SAVES SALLY'S LIFE!

WITH THE AID OF A PAL AND THE PABST-ETT ROCKET GYRO



TAD, DID YOU HEAR THAT CRY FOR HELP?
YES, LOOK UP. IT'S A GIRL STUCK ON THAT LEDGE
BOY, SHE'S HIGH UP. HOW'LL WE GET TO HER?
I KNOW. I BROUGHT MY ROCKET GYRO. WE'LL TIE A STRING TO IT - SHOOT IT OVER THAT BRANCH BESIDE HER AND THEN PULL YOUR ROPE UP ON THAT STRING! HERE GOES!
Carrying the string over the branch and back down to the boys on the ground.
Tad ties a rope to the string and draws it over the branch where Sally can reach it.
THAT'S WHAT I'M DOING. I'M READY
FAST THINKING AND SWELL GOING, TAD
ALRIGHT UP THERE TIE THE ROPE AROUND YOUR WAIST AND WE'LL LET YOU DOWN
OH, TAD, YOU'VE SAVED MY LIFE!
WHY TAD, IT'S SALLY
EASY THERE, BILL, SHE'S NOT DOWN YET!
I'M SO WEAK!
SAY, WE CAN FIX THAT TOO. WE'VE GOT PABST-ETT SANDWICHES IN OUR KNAPSACKS- AND BELIEVE ME, PABST-ETT WILL GIVE YOU STRENGTH AND PEP. THAT'S WHY WE TAKE IT ON OUR HIKES AND BOY-IT TASTES SWELL TOO.
M-M! PABST-ETT IS GOOD. BUT TAD, DEAR, HOW CAN I EVER THANK YOU-YOU'RE WONDERFUL
AW, DON'T THANK ME- THANK THE PEOPLE THAT MADE GOOD OLD PABST-ETT- FOR SENDING ME THAT ROCKET GYRO

Mothers! Read why so many DOCTORS recommend Pabst-ett!

Once your family has experienced the unique, irresistibly delicious flavor of Pabst-ett you'll never be without it again. For Pabst-ett is different—entirely unlike any of the cheese products with which you may be familiar. It is a remarkable health food containing all the valuable nourishment of cheese—but unlike ordinary cheese, extra important milk minerals have been added to Pabst-ett—making it an excellent food for children. Actually Pabst-ett digests faster and more easily than even milk or eggs and most other foods served in your home. Besides being a good source of energy—it is unusually valuable as a builder of muscle tissue—strong bones and hard teeth.

Try serving Pabst-ett in delicious cooked dishes (use instead of ordinary cheese)—in sandwiches—or as a spread with crackers.

For gifts address Pabst-ett Corporation, P. O. Box 1467, Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT

When you ask your mother to buy Pabst-ett show her this!

1. Recommended by leading doctors as an excellent food for children.
2. Pabst-ett is a nourishing cheese food that digests even faster than milk.
3. Pabst-ett helps make hard teeth and strong bones because extra calcium (as in milk) has been added.
4. Pabst-ett builds strong muscles because it is a good protein food (like meat).
5. Pabst-ett has extra quantities of vitamin A (as in cod liver oil and spinach).

Your choice of these 3 thrilling Gifts FREE!

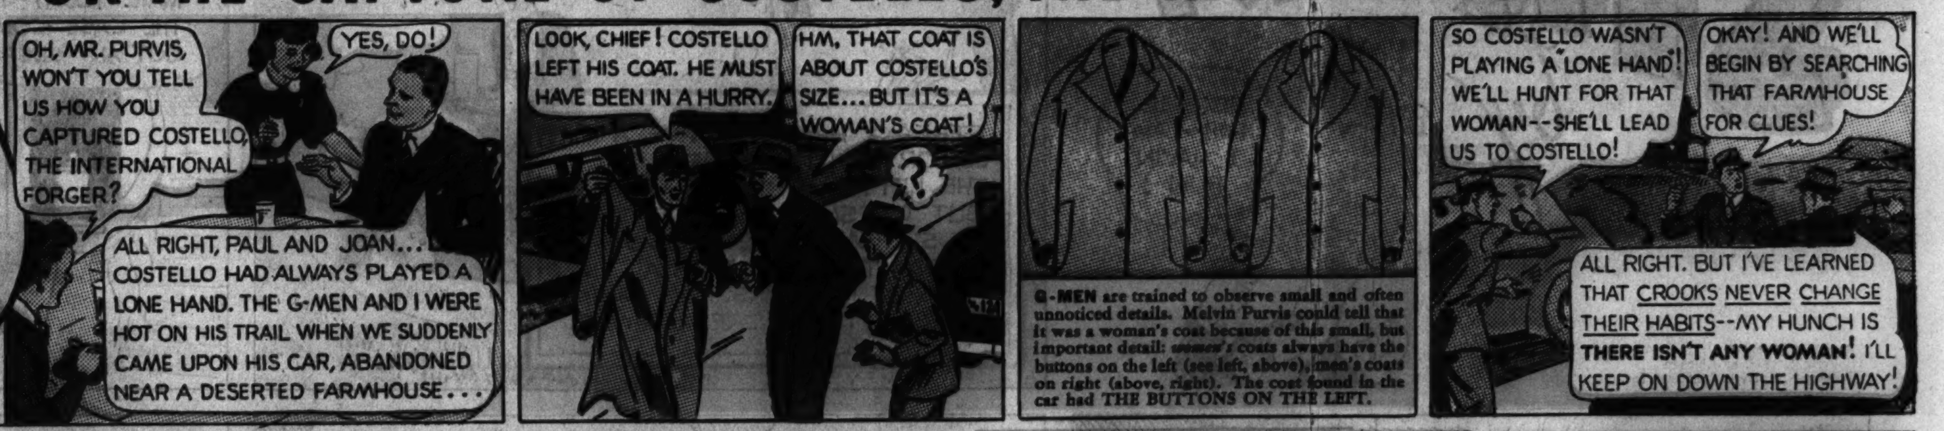
AN INSIDE STORY OF MELVIN PURVIS AMERICA'S No-1 G-MAN

MELVIN PURVIS, the young lawyer who became America's ace G-Man, who directed the capture of Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson, and many others. Mr. Purvis reveals here methods used in capturing criminals. Names have, of course, been changed. This inside story is published as proof that CRIME DOES NOT PAY!

★

THE COAT THAT SQUEALED

OR THE CAPTURE OF COSTELLO, THE INTERNATIONAL FORGER



OH, MR. PURVIS, WON'T YOU TELL US HOW YOU CAPTURED COSTELLO, THE INTERNATIONAL FORGER?
YES, DO!
ALL RIGHT, PAUL AND JOAN... COSTELLO HAD ALWAYS PLAYED A LONE HAND. THE G-MEN AND I WERE HOT ON HIS TRAIL WHEN WE SUDDENLY CAME UPON HIS CAR, ABANDONED NEAR A DESERTED FARMHOUSE...
LOOK, CHIEF! COSTELLO LEFT HIS COAT. HE MUST HAVE BEEN IN A HURRY.
HM, THAT COAT IS ABOUT COSTELLO'S SIZE... BUT IT'S A WOMAN'S COAT!
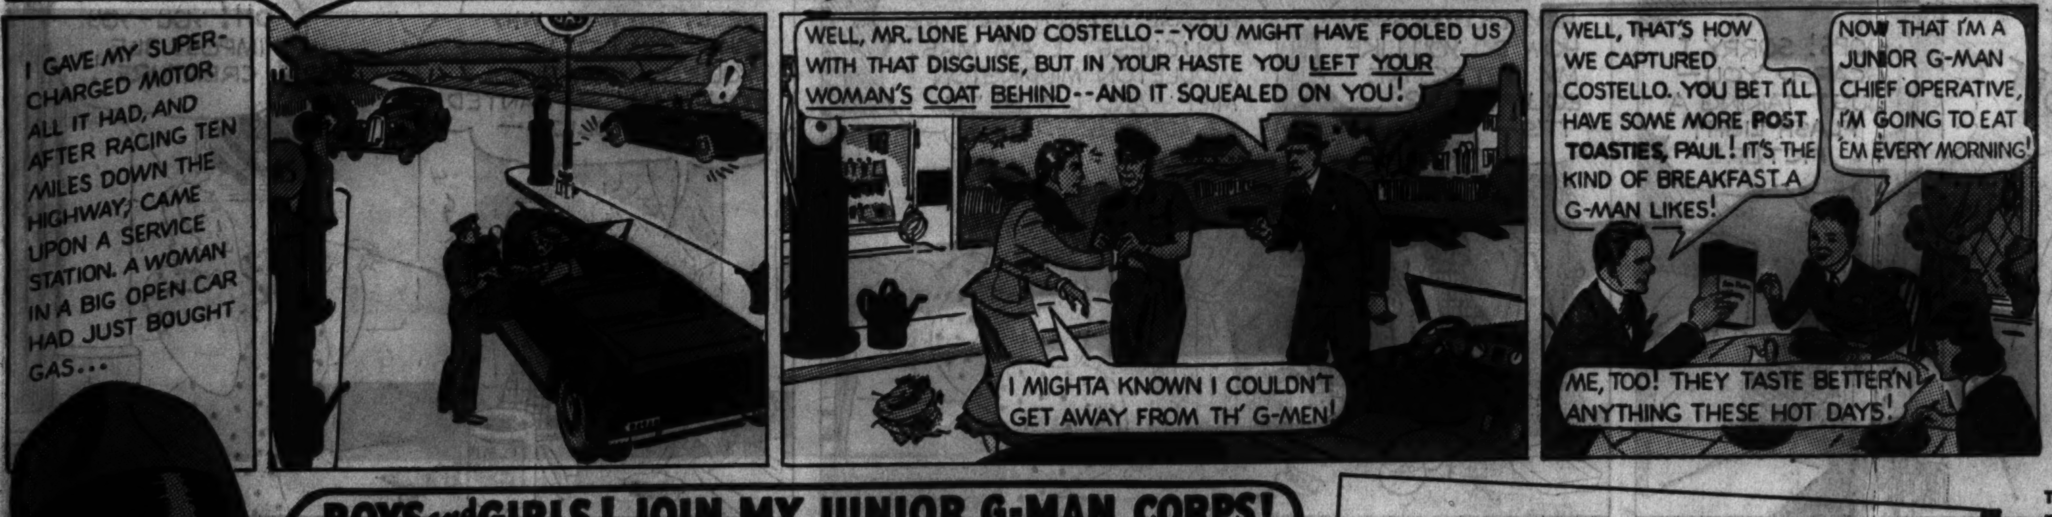
SO COSTELLO WASN'T PLAYING A "LONE HAND"! WE'LL HUNT FOR THAT WOMAN--SHE'LL LEAD US TO COSTELLO!
OKAY! AND WE'LL BEGIN BY SEARCHING THAT FARMHOUSE FOR CLUES!
ALL RIGHT. BUT I'VE LEARNED THAT CROOKS NEVER CHANGE THEIR HABITS--MY HUNCH IS THERE ISN'T ANY WOMAN! I'LL KEEP ON DOWN THE HIGHWAY!

G-MEN are trained to observe small and often unnoticed details. Melvin Purvis could tell that it was a woman's coat because of this small, but important detail: women's coats always have the buttons on the left (see left, above), men's coats on right (above, right). The coat found in the car had THE BUTTONS ON THE LEFT.



I GAVE MY SUPER-CHARGED MOTOR ALL IT HAD, AND AFTER RACING TEN MILES DOWN THE HIGHWAY, CAME UPON A SERVICE STATION. A WOMAN IN A BIG OPEN CAR HAD JUST BOUGHT GAS...
WELL, MR. LONE HAND COSTELLO--YOU MIGHT HAVE FOOLED US WITH THAT DISGUISE, BUT IN YOUR HASTE YOU LEFT YOUR WOMAN'S COAT BEHIND--AND IT SQUEALED ON YOU!
I MIGHTA KNOWN I COULDN'T GET AWAY FROM TH' G-MEN!
WELL, THAT'S HOW WE CAPTURED COSTELLO. YOU BET I'LL HAVE SOME MORE POST TOASTIES, PAUL! IT'S THE KIND OF BREAKFAST A G-MAN LIKES!
NOW THAT I'M A JUNIOR G-MAN CHIEF OPERATIVE, I'M GOING TO EAT 'EM EVERY MORNING!
ME, TOO! THEY TASTE BETTER'N ANYTHING THESE HOT DAYS!

SIREN ALARM PISTOL. Sounds like G-Man Squad Car Siren. Press trigger—siren sounds. 8½ inches long, styled like regular service revolver, finished in red and blue.

A VACATION TIP FROM MELVIN PURVIS:

"DURING this summer vacation, you boys and girls are going to have lots more time for outdoor games—and for Junior G-Man practice. And say! A fellow certainly gets mighty hungry after a few hours out in the open air! Here's a hint I think you'll all go for:

"Just try Post Toasties with cold milk or cream for a mid-afternoon snack ... or for a grand, cool luncheon treat on hot summer days. Those Post Toasties sure do hit the spot!

"And have you ever tried Post Toasties with ripe, luscious berries—or with sliced bananas? They're great! Tell Mother that fruit and Post Toasties are ideal for Sunday-night supper, too. The whole family will enjoy them!

Yours,

(Signed) Melvin Purvis

Post Toasties taste so good because they are made from the sweet, tender hearts of the corn, where most of the flavor is found. And every delicious flake is toasted double-crisp, so it will keep its crunchy goodness longer in milk or cream. And remind Mother of this—their price is low. A Post Cereal—Made by General Foods.

HEY, WHERE ARE YOU GOING, "MEMPHIS"?
ELSEWHERE, BOSS, ELSEWHERE! I DONE MY DUTY—I SHOWED YOU D'BOAT!
LISTEN! YOU'VE GOT TO STICK AROUND. I WANT YOU TO GIVE ME MORE DOPE.
MISTA TRACY, I JUST SUPPLIES CLEWS—I DON'T DO NO FINISHED WORK!
MEANWHILE, ABOARD THE BOAT "RED POPPY".
NOW LET'S GET THIS RIGHT. MANLIS TURNED STRAIGHT, THREW DOWN THE GANG AND ABANDONED YOU?
THAT'S THE TRUTH, TOYEE! THE GANG'S BROKEN UP AND THE COPS ARE AFTER ME! YOU'VE GOT TO LET ME STAY ABOARD.
WHY DO YOU CARRY THE SHAWL OVER YOUR LEFT HAND?
—AN AMPUTATION
WHEN YOU HAD ALL YOUR FACULTIES, ALL OF YOUR WOMANLY CHARMS, TOYEE WAS NOT GOOD ENOUGH.
—BUT NOW THAT YOU ARE IN DISTRESS, AND FACING A HOSTILE WORLD—SHALL WE SAY—SINGLE HANDED—YOU SEEK MY PROTECTION. THE ANSWER IS NO.
LISTEN—EITHER I STAY ABOARD OR WE'LL BOTH GO ASHORE TO GETHER. I KNOW TOO MUCH ABOUT YOU TO BE TOLD WHAT TO DO.

WHY THE CULTON FAMILY WENT ON STRIKE

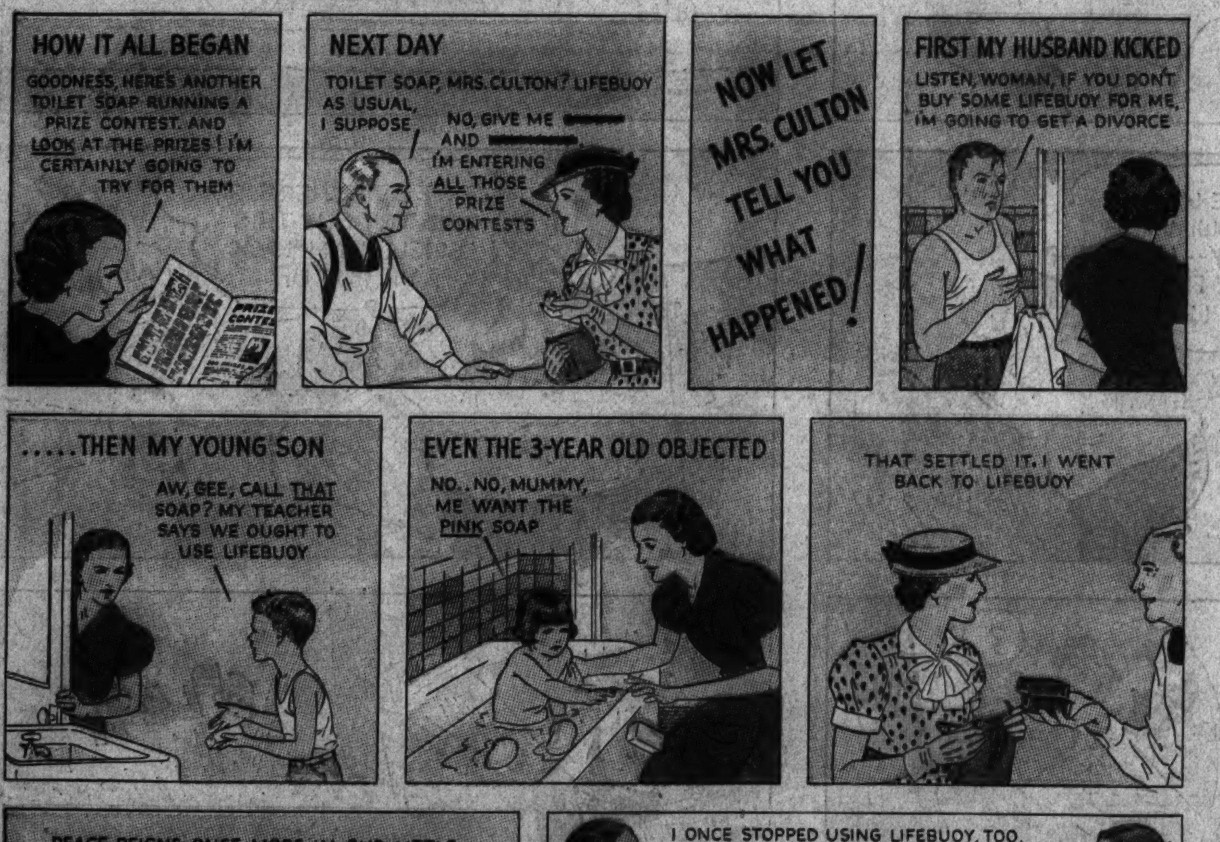
Joyce Culton
Richard Culton
Mr. C. S. Culton



HOW IT ALL BEGAN
GOODNESS, HERE'S ANOTHER TOILET SOAP RUNNING A PRIZE CONTEST. AND LOOK AT THE PRIZES! I'M CERTAINLY GOING TO TRY FOR THEM PRIZE CONTEST
NEXT DAY
TOILET SOAP, MRS. CULTON? LIFEBUOY AS USUAL, I SUPPOSE
NO, GIVE ME [redacted] AND [redacted]. I'M ENTERING ALL THOSE PRIZE CONTESTS
NOW LET MRS. CULTON TELL YOU WHAT HAPPENED!
FIRST MY HUSBAND KICKED
LISTEN, WOMAN, IF YOU DON'T BUY SOME LIFEBUOY FOR ME, I'M GOING TO GET A DIVORCE
.....THEN MY YOUNG SON
AW, GEE, CALL THAT SOAP? MY TEACHER SAYS WE OUGHT TO USE LIFEBUOY
EVEN THE 3-YEAR OLD OBJECTED
NO..NO, MUMMY, ME WANT THE PINK SOAP
THAT SETTLED IT. I WENT BACK TO LIFEBUOY

"PEACE REIGNS ONCE MORE IN OUR LITTLE HOME. AND THE MOTTO OVER THE MANTLE STATES IN HAPPY TRUTH—"HOME, SWEET HOME"

I ONCE STOPPED USING LIFEBUOY, TOO. AND MY COMPLEXION SOON SHOWED IT

I'VE NEVER FOUND ANY OTHER SOAP SO KIND TO THE SKIN AS LIFEBUOY

ORDINARY toilet soaps simply can't satisfy after Lifebuoy. It cleanses so deeply, yet "patch" tests on skins of hundreds of women show it's over 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

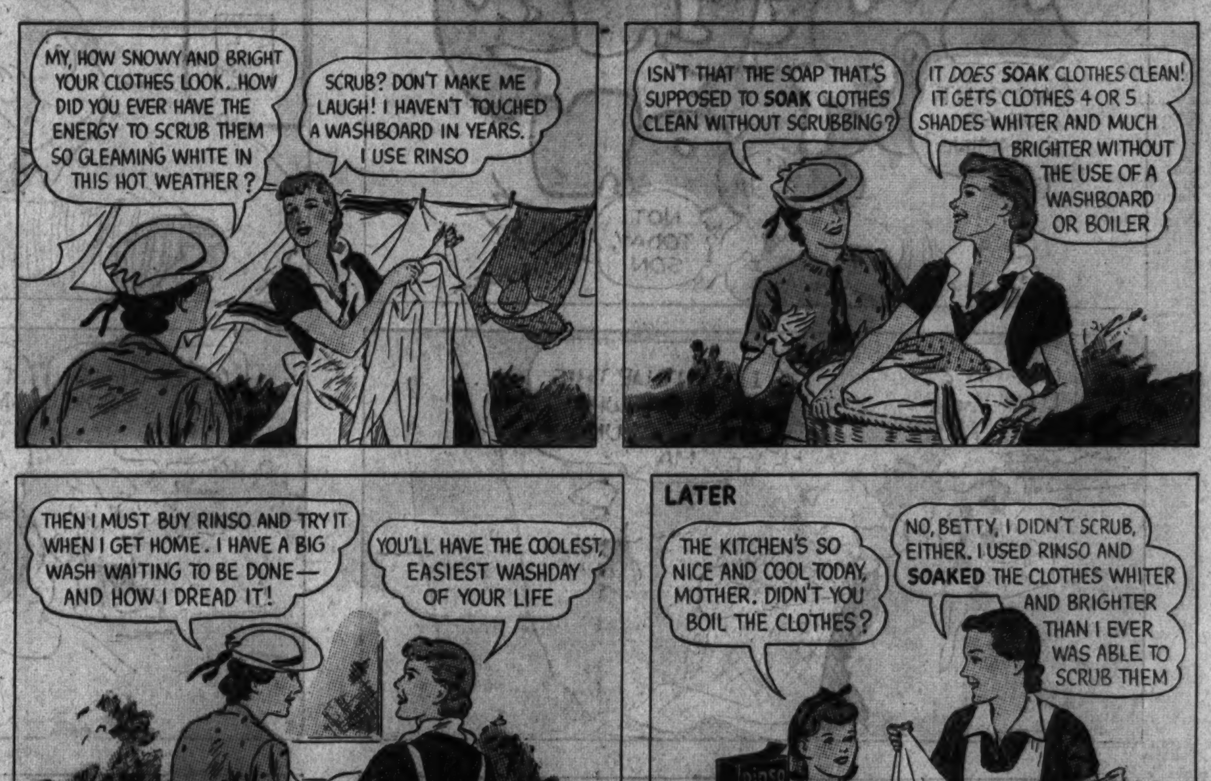
Warmer weather, beware!

Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Its searching, abundant lather purifies pores, stops "B. O." (body odor). Its own clean scent rinses away.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

HOW MILLIONS KEEP COOL ON WASHDAY



MY, HOW SNOWY AND BRIGHT YOUR CLOTHES LOOK..HOW DID YOU EVER HAVE THE ENERGY TO SCRUB THEM SO GLEAMING WHITE IN THIS HOT WEATHER?
SCRUB? DON'T MAKE ME LAUGH! I HAVEN'T TOUCHED A WASHBOARD IN YEARS. I USE RINSO
ISN'T THAT THE SOAP THAT'S SUPPOSED TO SOAK CLOTHES CLEAN WITHOUT SCRUBBING?
IT DOES SOAK CLOTHES CLEAN! IT GETS CLOTHES 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER AND MUCH BRIGHTER WITHOUT THE USE OF A WASHBOARD OR BOILER
THEN I MUST BUY RINSO AND TRY IT WHEN I GET HOME. I HAVE A BIG WASH WAITING TO BE DONE—AND HOW I DREAD IT!
YOU'LL HAVE THE COOLEST, EASIEST WASHDAY OF YOUR LIFE
LATER
THE KITCHEN'S SO NICE AND COOL TODAY, MOTHER. DIDN'T YOU BOIL THE CLOTHES?
NO, BETTY, I DIDN'T SCRUB, EITHER. I USED RINSO AND SOAKED THE CLOTHES WHITER AND BRIGHTER THAN I EVER WAS ABLE TO SCRUB THEM
Rinso

THAT NIGHT
THROUGH ALREADY! THAT'S THE FASTEST I EVER SAW YOU GET DONE WITH THE DISHES
AND SEE HOW THEY SPARKLE! THAT'S BECAUSE RINSO GETS RID OF THAT GREASY FILM. AND RINSO KEEPS MY HANDS SMOOTH AND WHITE, TOO

BELIEVE ME, RINSO IS A LIFESAVER, ESPECIALLY IN THIS HOT WEATHER. AND MY, HOW THIS "NO-SCRUB" WAY SAVES THE CLOTHES

THINK OF IT! No scrubbing—no boiling—yet clothes come 4 or 5 shades whiter than ever! Colors come much brighter, too. And what suds! Thicker, safer, longer-lasting—even in the hardest water. No wonder makers of 33 washers say, "Use Rinso for whiter, brighter washes!" Rinso is marvelous for dishes and all cleaning. Grease is absorbed by Rinso's rich suds. Dishes come clean without a greasy film left over them. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Rinso

THE BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP IN AMERICA

NO WONDER YOU GO BIG WITH THE GIRLS. YOU'RE ALWAYS CLEAN-SHAVEN. AND YOUR FACE IS NEVER RAW AND SORE LIKE MINE. HOW COME?
LIFEBUOY SHAVING CREAM DOES THE TRICK, OLD TOP! IT'S MILD, SOOTHING—AND ITS LATHER IS EXTRA-MOIST. TRY IT
THIS LIFEBUOY LATHER SURE IS THE BERRIES! WHISKERS COME OFF CLEAN AND EASY. AND MY OLD FACE FEELS GRAND!

Here's the secret of clean, soothing, "smooth-as-silk" shaves

Lifebuoy lather provides half again as much beard-softening action as ordinary lather because it absorbs 52% more moisture—keeps whiskers wet to the shave's end. That's why it gives cleaner, smoother shaves. What's more, Lifebuoy is decidedly milder than other leading shaving soaps. That's why it's so kind and soothing to tender skin. Try it—get a tube at your druggist's today—feel the difference in your shaves.

. . . . . . ARE YOU . . . . . .

COMING TO CHICAGO?

If so, don't worry about getting hotel accommodations, for we can "put you up" in a delightfully furnished apartment, with complete kitchens, where you will have all the comforts of your own home at a cost no greater than you would pay for straight hotel rooms.

We operate a number of furnished apartment hotels in fine residential sections, 20 to 30 minutes from Chicago's Loop District, close to lake and parks, and we invite inquiries from either families or groups who want daily, weekly, or monthly accommodations.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

Low Water

July 18, 1936.

As each rainless day passes the effects of the long drouth are more and more numerous on the experimental farms.

One of the ponds on the Wheaton farm is so low that swans and geese are wading across it in its deepest spots. The water edge on this pond is at least 12 feet nearer the center than when the pond is at its normal level.

Similarly, the Fox river, which runs through the Yorkville experimental farm, is lower than it has ever been in the memory of farm residents. The river level is so low that the men drove a tractor across it the other day. By going through the river the men saved a lot of time and a lot of work, so that's one way in which the low water level was useful.

Ordinarily the men have to place planks across the bridge ahead of the tractor, and Clarence said the other day that this procedure usually takes about 20 minutes and the labor of six men.

Some of the Smaller Streams Are "Bone Dry."

But low as the river and the ponds are, the only description to fit some of the small streams in the Yorkville district is "bone dry." Clarence and some of the other boys were telling us the other day that they noticed that Little Rock creek, which winds around near the farm, was dry in several spots. As a result of this drying up hundreds of fish have died—stranded without water.

The birds are feeling the drouth, too. Charley Doetschman was telling us that a number of songbirds had drowned in big tanks while attempting to get water from bowls which were too big for them. The boys have been putting out water for the birds in small pans, but a few of the birds have attempted to stand on the edge of tanks built for cattle and horses, much to their own sorrow.

Dryness of Fields Is a Real Menace.

Still another result of the drouth, and one which is even more serious, is the dryness of the fields. An automobile driver threw a cigaret out of his car window as he was passing the farm next to the Wheaton experimental farm, and the result was a fire which burned 30 acres of the neighbor's pasture land.

Among the barnyard families the usual activities have been going on in spite of the heat. The other day a proud old turkey hen came strutting into the barnyard leading five turkey poults and four guineas which she had hatched out under a tree across the road from Rawlings' house. This family evidently didn't like the sun so well, however, because when we drove into the barnyard the hen and all her young ones ran under the car, using it as an umbrella.

Chicks Take Warning From a Heat Death.

The high temperatures of this week were given as the cause of the death of one Barred Rock hen. This may have served as a lesson to the half-grown Rhode Island Red chicks which are in the barnyard, because we noticed that most of them were under the chicken houses the other day instead of running around in the yard.

Under one of the houses these chicks were all lined up around the edges, all of their bodies except their heads being protected from the sun. The chicks evidently had decided that they wanted to see what was going on in the world, even if the thermometer did go up to 106 degrees.

How You Can BORROW at HOUSEHOLD

No Endorsers.
No Salary Assignments

1. Whether or not you have furniture or a car you can borrow here if you can make regular monthly payments.
2. Payments on all loans are small. For example the first payment on $100 is $8—the last payment is $5.15 on a twenty month schedule.
3. You do not need co-makers or endorsers.
4. You can secure the money quickly—the same day if you apply before 9 o'clock.
5. Rate on loans above $100 is less than the lawful maximum.
6. Repay at any time and reduce the cost.
7. Private offices. Your problem will have our sympathetic attention.

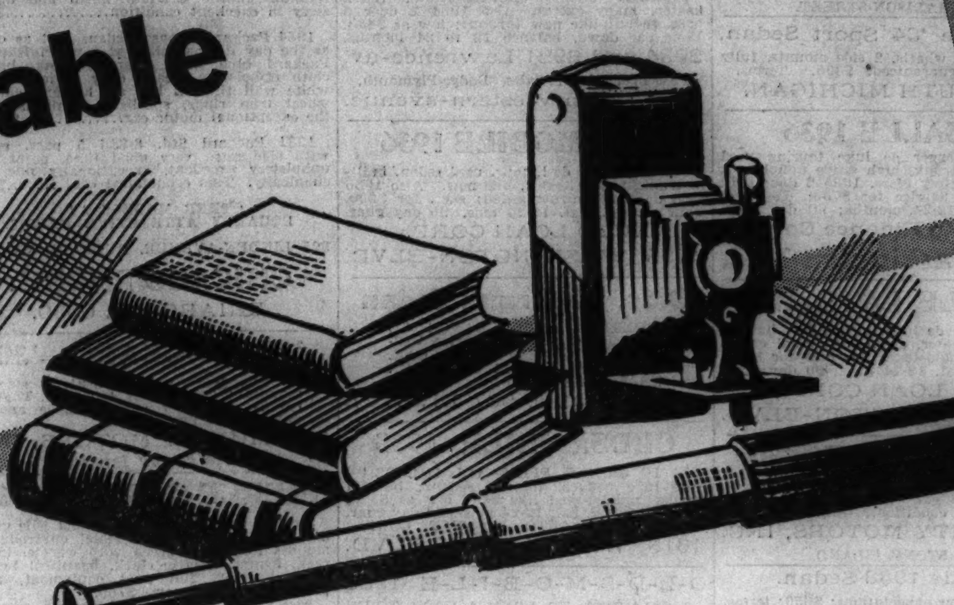
Accessories that make life enjoyable



●Almost every person keeps a mental list of things which will add to enjoyment of life, and which he or she wants to buy some day. Books, golf clubs, cameras, fishing equipment, a dog, a fur coat, binoculars, a collection of stamps or coins, paintings, antiques, and bicycles are only a few of the many things which may be found on such a list. If you want to buy such articles, check the various Tribune want ad classifications. Advertisers in the Tribune offer a wide assortment of these articles at attractive prices.

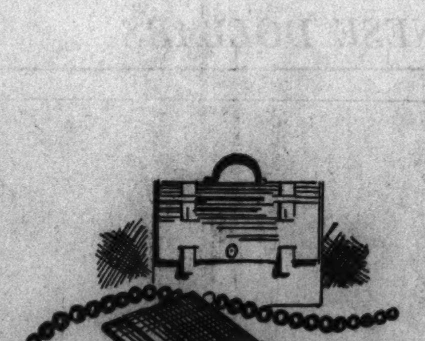
Unless her home is equipped with time and labor saving household appliances. And there is no reason why almost every woman cannot have a washing machine, vacuum cleaner, ironer, a sewing machine and similar devices. Such articles are offered in the Household Appliances column at prices and on terms within reach of almost every income. If you are without one or more of these helpful housekeeping aids, it will be well worth your while to check the want ads in the Tribune.

New Furniture Adds Eye Appeal to Dull Rooms

You will be surprised at the difference another table or chair, a rug, or drapes will make in a room in which the furniture has become commonplace through years of service. Replacement furniture need not be expensive. You can get good pieces in modern styles at low cost by checking the offers in the Home Furnishings columns of the Tribune want ad section. Used furniture from private homes and new pieces offered by stores and warehouses are priced attractively. Check the furniture in your home today and consult Tribune want ads.

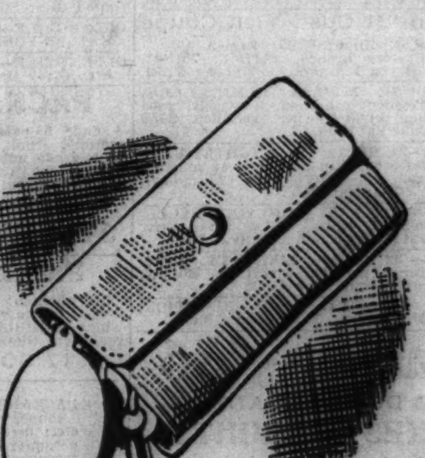
Is Your Dream a Home of Your Own?

Three magic words—your own home—can mean peace, contentment and happiness. Why not buy or build this year that home you have long promised your family? Hundreds of choice homes and building sites are now available in Chicago and suburbs. You will have more opportunity for comparison of values if you check the real estate offers in the Tribune want ad section. Far more real estate want advertising appears in the Tribune than in any other Chicago newspaper. Check the offers in today's Tribune.



The Quick Way to Find Lost Articles

Losers of articles need never be at a loss to know the best method of recovering their valuables. A low-cost want ad in the Tribune can describe their property to hundreds of thousands of families. When you lose anything of value, call Superior 0100 and ask for Miss Miller, Tribune Want Ad-Viser. She will be glad to help you word your want ad and to offer helpful suggestions.



Key Tag—Free!

Protect your property! Recover lost keys quickly! The Chicago Tribune want ad department invites you to call for a free identification key tag. A key tag, which bears a serial number and a request of the finder to notify the Tribune, will be registered in your name. The identity of the owner of the keys is known only to the Tribune. Key tags are given away only at the Tribune want ad store, in Tribune Tower, 435 N. Michigan Avenue. Call for your tag today!

Sports Clothes Are the Ideal Vacation Togs

Newest of Nautical Outfits and Flannel Culottes Are 'Finds' of Season.

By Rhea Seeger.

THE average shopper always gets a tremendous bang out of spending money for clothes, but the biggest thrill comes when the trunks are hauled out of the attic, travel folders are read and reread, and finally the eventful day arrives when one trots to town to buy vacation clothes—dresses and accessories that are totally different from those bought any other time of the year.

Vacation clothes will make or mar an otherwise well spent vacation time. The place to buy real sports clothes . . . that is, if you are fortunate enough to spend two or three weeks away from a routine that has bored you for days . . . is the sports shops. They offer proper apparel for any place under the sun or moon.

If you are packing for sea or lake, to sail your own sloop, or lounge around the deck of a seagoing yacht, try the newest of nautical outfits, illustrated A. It's a cozy navy blue, simulated knitted, two piece affair of fitted jacket and slacks . . . a knockout ensemble for wind or chilly weather as well as sunny trips to sea. It's cool without being clammy; it's snug, and doesn't wrap around your legs or cling when you're in action. The alternate stripes and the plain knitted effect make it new and interesting. Under it, or with the slacks, goes one of those printed cotton crash, short sleeved shirts, a shirt that may be worn with similar costumes.

Accessories Make the Ensemble Picture Gay.

The visored cap also is of the navy blue knitted fabric, with an open crown and tiny bow for trim. The sneakers are the biggest find of the summer, smooth looking, neat models of navy blue, with buckskin soles and ankle strap trim. They will not skid or slip on a slippery deck, nor will they mar or mark its surface. This same suit may be used by the motorist heading north for a camping trip under tall pines, or toward the northern coast where the wind off the needled brine keeps one cool, even when the sun shines.

B . . . An English knitted swim suit in probably the wildest, most blazing color contrasts that ever left the British Isles. These zig-zag stripes are most effective against a creamy white background. The bra top is fitted, and the slightly flared skirt covers dark shorts of jersey. The swagger cape . . . one of the tufted models, in creamy white and colors, is warm and practical and a new beach accessory for summer mermaids. The white drill beach bag has a sailor boy wigwagging in code for an appropriate decoration. The bag is large enough to hold the necessary sun tan lotions, extra glasses, and a stray sandwich or so. At the side . . . a clever new turban made of colored fish net and trimmed with . . . corks . . . and if that isn't new and good loot, then what is? Even the sun glasses this year come with colored rims and frames to match or contrast with swim suits and beach togs. Every one wears them to save the eyes and banish the squints.

Flannel Culottes Are Worn with Suede Lether Jacket.

C. . . . New dude ranch togs . . . navy blue, soft flannel culottes, or divided skirt, beautifully tailored and of extremely soft flannel. With this skirt is worn the softest of suede lether jackets in fawn color—a jacket trimmed with fringe, fitted to the ribline, and short enough to reach just below the waistline. The wide brimmed hat is of felt, the shirt of bright plaid cotton, and the gloves match the jacket. Around the neckline goes the gaudiest silk handkerchief you can find!

D. . . . For sailing, for rough and rainy weather, for fishing, for camping, there is nothing like the slicker suit that comes in white, yellow, amber, brown, blue, and black. The trousers or slacks are loose and wide. The coat has long, protecting sleeves and a zipper streaking up the front to meet the bow tie of the rainproof hood that is cut one with the jacket or coat.

E. . . . Consolation prize costume for the stay-at-home is this garden smock and slacks of crinkled cotton. The smock is neat and fitted to the waistline by a wide belt. The yoke, patch pockets, huge buttons, and fitted collar keep this smock from being anything like the dreary looking, shapeless things that have the same name. All kinds of colors and color combinations are obtainable in the same sports shop where we found the other vacation outfits sketched.

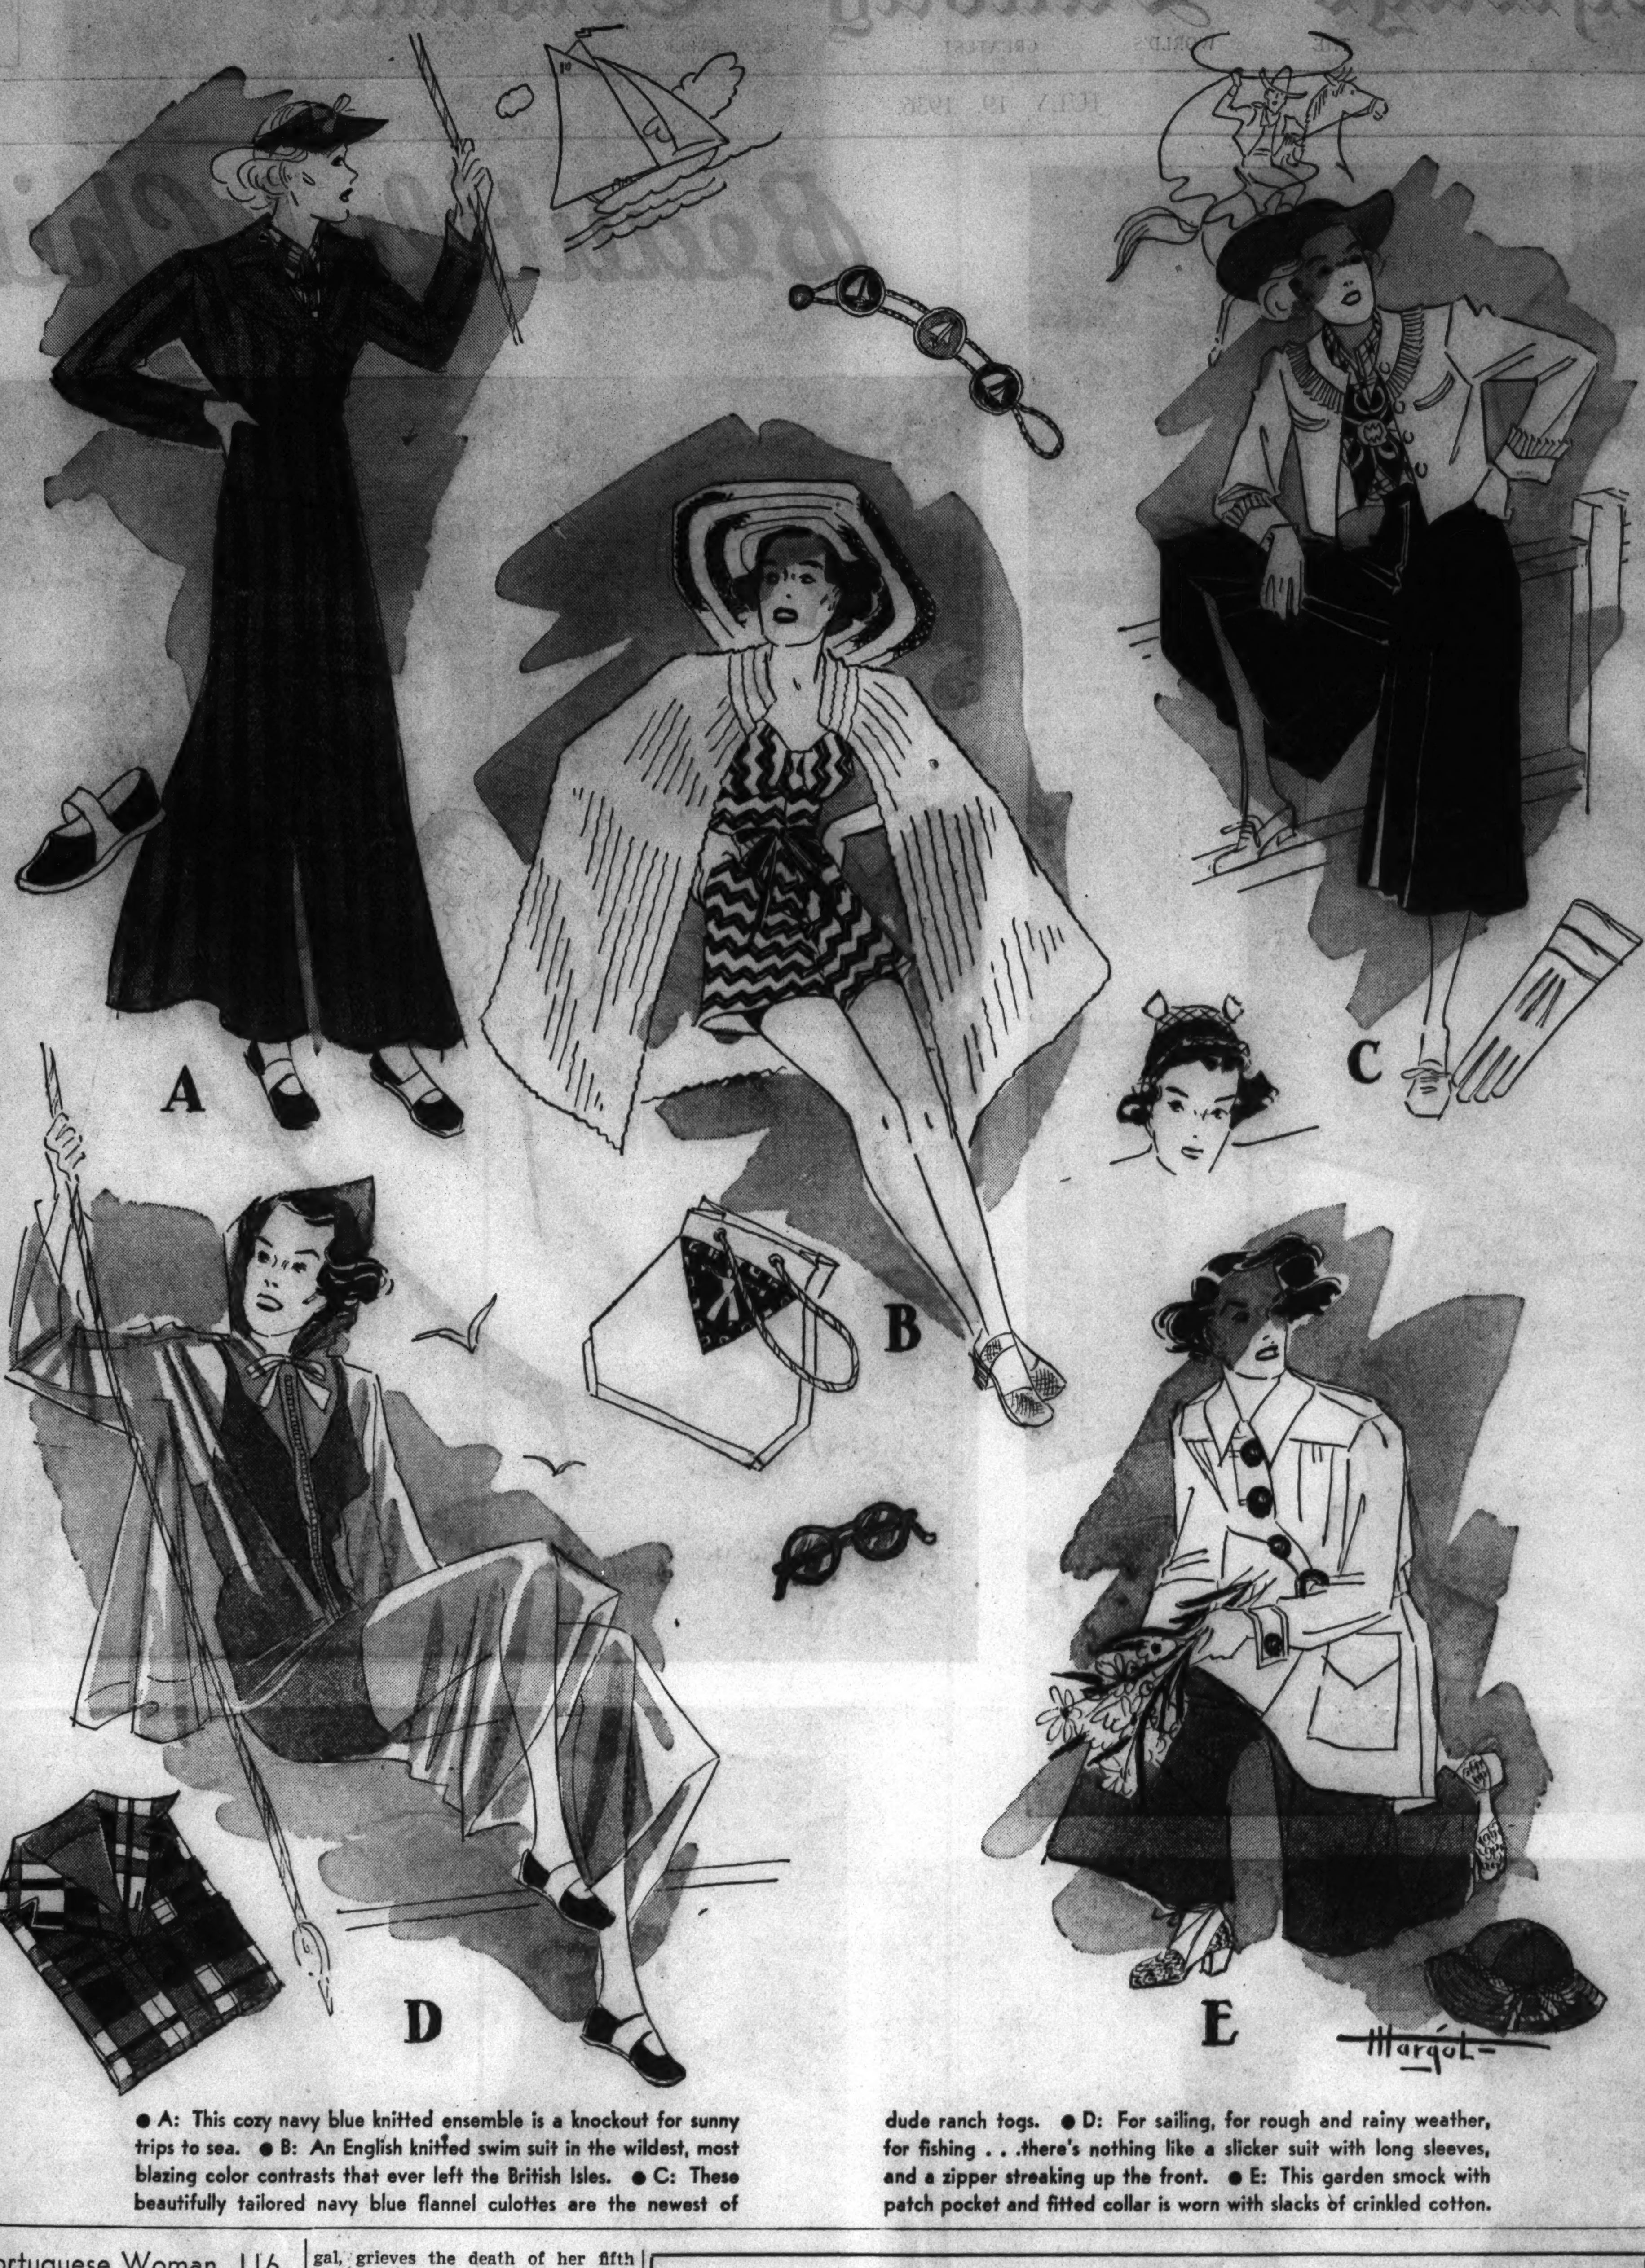
Latest Pianos Come in Many Colors and Style Disguises

PIANOS now may be had that look like everything from desks to sideboards and chests of drawers, in all colors of the rainbow, and in every period style from 16th century to modern. A new vertical piano is being made that has sliding removable panels at its back. They are of tapestry or Venetian blinds, and permit the pianos to be set away from the wall, making the back an interesting piece of furniture.

GOING-AWAY TREASURES



● A: This cozy navy blue knitted ensemble is a knockout for sunny trips to sea. ● B: An English knitted swim suit in the wildest, most blazing color contrasts that ever left the British Isles. ● C: These beautifully tailored navy blue flannel culottes are the newest of dude ranch togs. ● D: For sailing, for rough and rainy weather, for fishing . . .there's nothing like a slicker suit with long sleeves, and a zipper streaking up the front. ● E: This garden smock with patch pocket and fitted collar is worn with slacks of crinkled cotton.

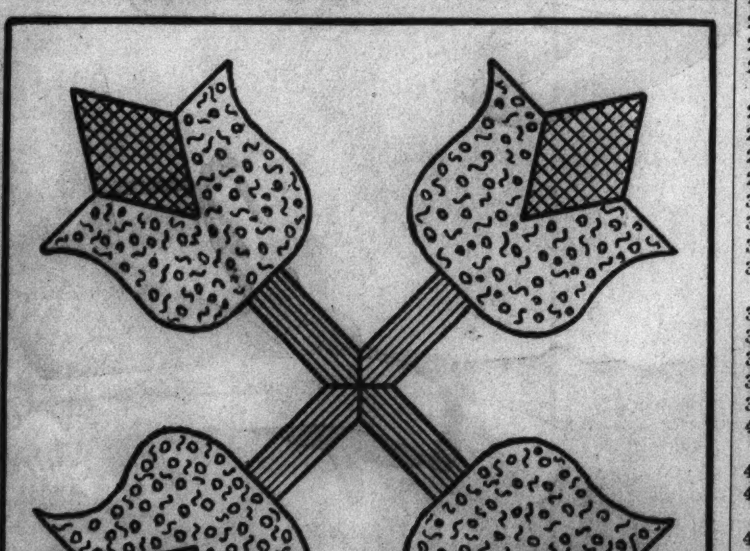
"Tiger Lily" Quilt Pattern Lovely in Design and Color



TIGER LILY.

By Nancy Cabot.

IT isn't difficult to appreciate just how lovely this quilt pattern would look in a coverlet when a yellow print is combined with green and a rich orange brown. This is an old applique pattern, and the originals of this design are now highly prized as heirlooms. The applique blocks are set together in an alternate arrangement with plain ones and a four inch border surrounding these squares is finished with a ½ inch binding to match the green stems.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Adviser Cites Correct Usage of Signatures

Tells When Titles "Miss" and "Mrs." May Be Used Correctly in Letters.

The following booklets on wedding etiquet are available at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby, or by mail from this department. Address mail requests to Helen Bartlett, Etiquet Editor, Chicago Tribune. "Planning the Church Wedding," 3 cents, by mail 5 cents; "Correct Wedding Apparel," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Selecting the Trousseau," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Small Weddings at Small Cost," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Color Ideas for Spring and Summer Weddings," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

NO matter how often the subject of correct signatures and social titles for men and women is discussed in newspaper columns of this nature it doesn't seem to be often enough. We still frequently hear of married women, for instance, and particularly widows, referring to themselves as Mrs. Mary Brown. This combination of given name with social title is not correct under any circumstances.

There are definitly right and wrong ways to sign one's name, or to have one's card engraved, so the right way might as well be learned.

Titles Are Not Used in Signatures.

In signing a letter, both men and women sign their full names, except to intimate friends, of course. An unmarried woman signs her letters Mary Alice Hunt. When Miss Hunt marries John William Peterson, her signature becomes Mary Hunt Peterson, the middle name received in baptism being dropped. This signature is also correct for all legal documents. The titles Miss, Mr. and Mrs. are never used with signatures. If in the case of business correspondence, or letters to tradespeople it is necessary for a woman's social title, or married name to be known, an unmarried girl may prefix the title "Miss" in parenthesis before her signature, and a married woman may add her married name in parenthesis just below her signature.

Here is a sample:

Very sincerely,
Mary Hunt Peterson
[Mrs. John]

On calling cards a married woman does not use her Christian name but rather her social title of Mrs. John William Peterson. And, socially, a widow is Mrs. John William Peterson, never Mrs. Mary Peterson. A divorcée retains her husband's family name and combines it with her own maiden name, prefaced by "Mrs." as, Mrs. Hunt Peterson. This same divorcée's legal signature is Mary Hunt Peterson. The legal signature and the social title should not be confused.

Woman Does Not Use Her Husband's Title.

If a woman marries a second time, she, of course, takes her second husband's name, just as she did the first time she took the vows of matrimony. A woman never has the right to use the husband's title of doctor, colonel, etc.

A doctor has the choice of prefixing his name with "Dr." or of suffixing the name with the abbreviation of the degree he holds, "M.D." or "D.D.S." He never uses both. A clergyman uses the abbreviation of his title "Rev." before his name.

When a man is a junior both he and his wife add the "Jr." to the name on the engraved card. But when the man's father dies, he, the son, is the bearer of the family name, and both he and his wife give up the "Jr." His mother uses "Sr." or adopts some variation of her name in order to distinguish between the two and avoid confusion.

Paint Should Be Mixed Thoroughly Before Using It

TO get the best results from a can of paint, don't shake it! This will cause trouble, making bubbles which later will appear in the finished work. Stir the paint, and stir it thoroughly. This is true of enamels and true of flat paints. And where a paint skin has formed on the top of a can's contents, remove that whole before starting to stir.

Mirror Doors Come Set in Standard Sized Poplar Frames

FULL length mirrors now are available already set in frames which fit any standard size door. Four screws, a screwdriver, and a few minutes' times are all that are needed for installation. The mirrors are set in poplar frames, which come both finished and unfinished, and the cost is well within any budget.

Fat Fast?

185 lbs 125 lbs

"... the thing one finds many a fashionable New Yorker drinking everywhere you go these fine Spring days is a BonKora Cocktail, made from Orange Juice and BonKora.

"Its rage seems to have started when it became noised about that a registered nurse, who could no longer work on account of her weak, fatty condition, lost 45 pounds and 10 inches off her hips with the result that she was able to go back to work again mainly by resorting to this pungent BonKora Cocktail method."

How the BonKora Cocktail Way Has Helped Many People to Lose Pounds of Ugly Fat

"Drinking a glassful of chilled Orange Juice mixed with a tablespoonful of BonKora, two times a day, and eating their fill of the delicious foods, as shown in the BonKora package, it is claimed, has made many people lose from 7 to 67 pounds, and has made their waist and bust measurements go down from 3 to 11 inches.

"The reason why this Orange Juice and BonKora way seems to produce such amazing results is first, the Orange Juice provides for the necessary vitamins to maintain health and supplies the elements to counteract the harmful over-acid conditions that develop while reducing and, second, the BonKora helps to provide for the proper elimination of the toxins or poisons which often interfere with normal metabolism and make reduction of weight very difficult if not impossible."

Will You Try This Orange Juice and BonKora Way To See If You Can Lose Pounds of Excess Fat?

"Where any person is bothered with avoidable and reducible overweight caused by poor elimination, overeating or overdrinking, which is held responsible for a large percentage of all overweight conditions, it is said that this new method often causes a loss of excess fat that is little short of sensational—Also, new enthusiasts will probably be much interested to know how much better those who have tried it say they feel, how much better they say they sleep and how much better fitted for work they say they are."

All Roads Lead to Topeka for G. O. P. Rites

Women Workers to Play Prominent Part at Landon Notification Ceremonies.

By Ruth DeYoung.

ALL roads—rail, motor, and air—lead to Topeka this week, and many of them will be traveled by women. Just as the women couldn't be suppressed in Cleveland and Philadelphia, they will be much in evidence Thursday when Gov. Alfred Mossman Landon accepts the Republican nomination for the presidency of the United States.

After all, the prairie scene would not be complete without them. In sharp contrast to the great urban spectacle in which President Roosevelt recently accepted renomination, this event will have its roots in the soil. It will have the feel of the pioneers. And ever since the days of the covered wagon, women—mothers and daughters—have supplied a good measure of the faith and courage that have made and preserved this nation.

It is only fitting then that mothers and daughters should contribute to the occasion when Alf Landon assumes one of the gravest responsibilities that any American ever has undertaken.

Mrs. John D. M. Hamilton to Be Hostess to Visiting Women.

Mrs. John Daniel Miller Hamilton II., wife of the fighting new chairman of the Republican national committee, will be the official hostess to all of Topeka's feminine visitors on Thursday. In accord with Mrs. Landon who has preferred to remain in the background these exciting weeks, Mrs. Hamilton has not been swept into the tide that has thrown her husband into national prominence. On this occasion, however, she feels it her duty to do all in her power to make her home city's guests comfortable.

On Thursday noon Mrs. Hamilton will be hostess at a luncheon at the Topeka Woman's club sponsored by the Topeka Chamber of Commerce. This will be the most important event for women in connection with the notification ceremonies. Five hundred leading G. O. P. banner bearers, national committeewomen, the wives of official guests, and the officers of Republican organizations, will attend. The Topeka Woman's club will be an attractive setting for the luncheon for it is a handsome red brick building, modern in its appointments and homelike in its atmosphere.

Mrs. Hamilton will play the rôle of hostess again on Thursday evening, at the ceremonies beginning at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal Busy with Official Duties.

MRS. ROBERT LINCOLN HOYAL.

Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, of course, will have many official duties in connection with the notification. Mrs. Hoyal has been awarded the title of assistant chairman of the Republican national committee, and is devoting all her time to campaign work in the new Republican national headquarters in the Railway Exchange building here. She is the first woman in political history to be made assistant chairman of a national committee. Previous to the Republican convention she was director of the women's division of the G. O. P.

She is attractive, energetic, and stimulating. She knows organization work for she has been in it for years. Not long ago she held the presidency of the American Legion auxiliary. In fact it's difficult to find an organization that she hasn't been associated with at some time. She served two terms as president of the Arizona Business and Professional Women. She's a member of the P. E. O., the Order of the Eastern Star, the D. A. R., the Presbyterian church, and now she represents Arizona as Republican national committeewoman.

Mr. Hoyal died last February and since they had no children she is free to devote herself to political activities.

"The New Dealers are great on grand standing," she says when any one comments on the large number of women who attended the Democratic national convention as delegates. "They talk about what they have done for women, but the truth of the matter is the position of women is more insecure now than it ever has been.

Mrs. Hoyal to Be Assisted by Two Political Workers.

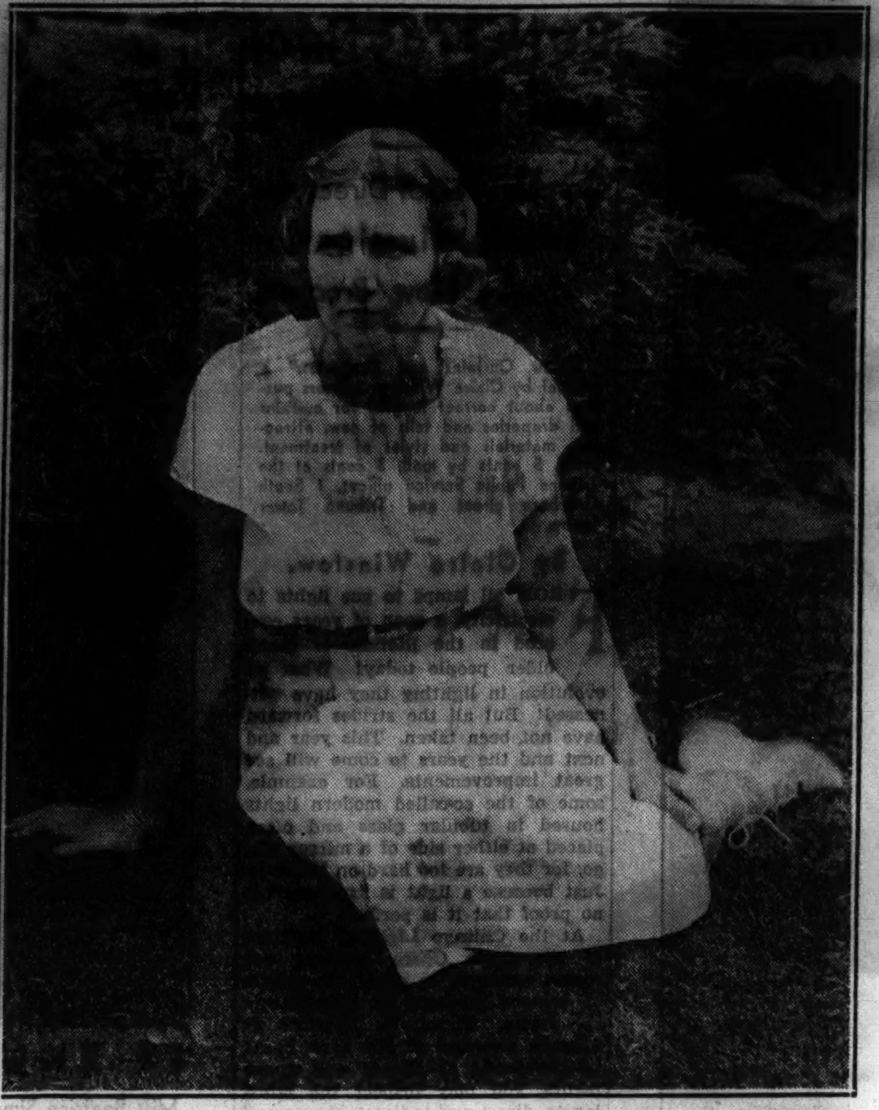
"The Republicans do not differentiate according to sex. The Republican women's attitude is citizenship, not sex."

With Mrs. Hoyal in Topeka will be her two newly appointed assistants, Mrs. Helen C. Griffin of Grant Park, and Mrs. A. C. Carlson of Willmar, Minn., women long active politically in their own localities.

Throughout the coming campaign Mrs. Hoyal also will work in close touch with the women directors of the three geographical divisions. Miss Natalie Couch, New York attorney and director of the eastern division, has been in Topeka for several days keeping in touch with Gov. Landon whom she thinks "is swell." The directors of the other two divisions have not yet been appointed.

There will be women representatives of all of the newly formed Landon clubs throughout the midwest in Topeka. Several more women will go as representatives of the Kansas Society of Chicago. They will be easily spotted by their sunflower hats and parasols.

A note from Mrs. Walter Scudder Hart announces that the Illinois League of Republican Women will hold an open meeting at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Morrison hotel. Mrs. George W. Rogers, representative of the Republican national committee and Edward F. Moore, chairman of the Cook County Central committee, will be the speakers. Plans will be considered to enlist the support of the "stay at home woman" in the presidential campaign.



SOON TO GO TO MICHIGAMME

Mrs. Clymer S. Bowen of Lake Forest and her husband are leaving at the end of this month for a month at Michigamme, Mich., where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner B. Ely of Pittsburgh, will be vacationing at the same time. Mrs. Bowen was a member of the ticket selling committee for the Ravinia Festival association and also is one of those who go regularly to the park during the five week season, which is about half over.

Bronze Powder Over Paint Gives New Pepper Box Finish

TO obtain the popular new "Pepper Box" finish use a gloss, egg shell, or flat paint in any desired color for the background. Then, before your paint coat has had a chance to dry, shake some aluminum or bronze powder over its surface. Use an ordinary pepper shaker as a container for your powder, and shake gently. Don't use too much of the powder!

Society Lingers in Paris for Special Events

By May Birkhead.

PARIS

The running of the Grand Prix, late in June, used to be the signal for a general dispersion of the socially elect. But in recent years such affairs as those arranged by the France-America committee for its Semaine des Nations Américaines and other functions of divers sorts result in prolonging the mundane season until well into July.

In addition to a reception at the Petit Palais for Gen. Pershing and a dinner for him at the clubrooms in the Avenue Victor Emmanuel, the France-America group arranged a garden party, and among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. F. Herman Gade, the Marquis de Rochambeau and the Comte de Rochambeau, direct descendants of the famous general who helped to win the struggle for American independence, and the American consul general in France, Mr. Addison Southard and his wife.

Mrs. Spencer Brown Attends Daughter's Cocktail Party.

Mrs. Spencer Brown of Chicago was one of those present at the cocktail party recently given by her daughter, the Comtesse de Gramedo, at her residence in Neuilly. The latter's son-in-law and daughter, M. and Mme. Geoffroy Gotz, were also there, as well as Sir Robert and Lady Cahill, Princesse A. de Broglie, Comte and Comtesse Louis de Rohan-Chabot, and Baronne de Villiers-Terrage.

Mrs. Paul Healy, who has just left Paris for a stay at the Carlton in London, was a guest at the dinner given by the Comtesse de Gramedo, and also there was Lady Decies, who recently became the bride of Lord Decies, after having been known to society for many years as Mrs. Henry Symes Lehr.

Miss Mary Garden, who is at the moment sojourning in England, is expected back in Paris soon, when she will be at the Lancaster.

Mme. Gana Walska and Mme. Paul Dupuy were among the scores of guests at the tea dance given at the Hotel George V. by the maharajah of Kapurthala, who, like so many cosmopolitan figures, hies to London after Paris begins to quiet down, mundanely speaking.

Mrs. Frederick Haskell is on her annual trip to Europe and is expected soon in Paris.

American Library in Paris Makes an Appeal for Funds.

The American library in Paris, which has for years been in the Rue de l'Elysée, right alongside the palace of the president of the republic, is making an earnest appeal for funds. While the response has been encouraging, much more money is needed to enable this excellent institution to pay its way. So much is it appreciated, aside from its American adherents, that the French government voted the other day 100,000 francs toward the half-million that is being raised.

The Club du Grand Pavois at 52 Avenue des Champs-Elysées, offered its quarters for an evening fête, and with the splendid view over the city, from its extensive penthouse and roof-gardens, and the distinguished company entertained, a good sum was netted for the library's treasury. One group was the Normandie and the other the Queen Mary, the roof garden being decked out to resemble these ships, and the one raising the most money was awarded the blue ribbon. Acting as patrons for the event were the American ambassador in Paris, Jesse I. Straus, and his opposite number in Washington, M. André de Laboulaye.

It's the Circus for the July 30 Sally Party

Winner of Invitations to Stevens Hotel Affair This Week Listed.

By Sally Joy Brown.

GUESS what's coming to town, boys and girls! I can't think of anything which will delight you more, so I won't hold out on the good news. The circus man came in to see me the other day, and the big show's on its way here. Great long train loads of performers and animals will soon pull in at the lake front, the tents will go up and the show will be on!

It will be the same thrilling circus we saw last year, Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey, with a great many new features. There'll be acrobats and aerial performers, bareback and show riding. Col. Tim McCoy of western movie fame will be there with his rough riders. There will be ponies and tigers and trained dogs and seals, and, as a brand new feature, a herd of pigmy or dwarf elephants which have just been sent over from Africa. Can you imagine such a thing as a small elephant? There are also some new animals called pongurs, which come from India, and look like a combination between a donkey and a zebra.

You'll see all sorts of daring and thrilling acts, and, of course, a circus wouldn't be a circus without clowns by the hundreds.

On July 30, we're going to have a circus party, and I'm going to take 100 boys and girls out to see the big show. If you think you'd like to come along you'll have to try to win an invitation. All youngsters are eligible to send in requests. You see, I'm interested in selecting as my guests for this wonderful party, just fifty boys and fifty girls who'll have the best time seeing the circus. I can't read your minds, so if you think you'd have a wonderful day if you were invited to accompany me on July 30, you'll have to write and tell me so. Just let me know why you'd like to be my guest, and maybe you'll win a circus ticket. There are just three things you must remember, and here they are, simple as A B C. You must all write your own letters, those written by adults will be discarded. You must tell me your full name, address and age, and your letter must reach me by Thursday morning at the latest, in order to be judged.

I have many more fascinating things to tell you about the circus party, but I haven't the time today—and right now, I want you to get busy on those letters, and mail them to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Here are the names and addresses of a group of boys and girls who have good reason to be very happy, because their letters have won invitations to our Stevens hotel party, which takes place next Thursday, July 23. Some of the youngsters who wrote in are bound to be disappointed because they couldn't be included in this party, and won't find their names listed here. But you have a chance to try again. And who wouldn't try again for a chance to see a circus?

WAITS A COOL DRINK

Miss Barbara Burch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton B. Burch of Kenilworth, waits for a cool drink to be served on the lawn of the Exmoor club, looking as demure as a Puritan maid in a mere excuse for a hat, a flat piece of white pique that ties around the head and leaves her brown hair showing at the top.

'Ye Old English' Flavor Retained in Cook Book

Rabisha in 1661 Gave Recipes for 'Cowcumbers' and 'A Pigg in a Pye'

By Mary Meade.

Do you require to learn of pickling Cowcumbers, baking a Pigg and a Kid in a Pye, of preparing Friggasie of Chicken and Pottage of Skink?

Here is a book which will tell you all this and more. But alas, it is not to be found in the book stores, and should you come upon a copy quite by accident, only a king's ransom would bring it into your possession.

It was in London in the year 1661 that Will Rabisha published this little cookbook, the pages of which are yellowed and crisp with age. He didn't call his work simply "How to Cook," but encumbered it with this title: "The Whole Body of Cookery Dissected, Taught, and Fully Manifested Methodically, Artificially, and According to the Best Tradition of the English, French, Italian, Dutch, etc. Or a Sympathie of All Varieties in Natural Compounds in that Mysterie Wherein Is Contained Certain Bills of Fare for the Seasons of the Year, for Feasts and Common Diets, etc." There is more, about six addition lines!

Mr. Rabisha was a bit apologetic about publishing his book. He wrote in the preface, "I do not question but divers Brethren of my own Fraternity may open their mouths against me for publishing this Treatise, pretending that thereby it may teach every kitchen wench and such as never served their times and so be prejudicial to the Fraternity of Cooks."

But to justify himself, he pointed out that no person unacquainted with the art of cookery could make use of his "receipts" anyway. They were too difficult.

But the "bill of fare!" For the "common summer diet," Mr. Rabisha suggested two courses of about 35 food items each. And for feasts, more courses and more items.

Included in one menu were "A Pigg and a Kid in a Pye," dishes of turkeys, veal, leg of lamb, venison, quail, herons, chickens, "dryed tongues," young ducks, artichoke pie, and many more.

You can't read very far in this precious little book without giggling. The old English letter "s" is written as "f," hence goose is "goofe" and there are innumerable references to "goof-berries," "mufhrooms," and also mention of "foufed Pigg!"

Most of Mr. Rabisha's "receipts" were for "preferves," "pyes" and "roft" meats and fish, though he mentioned "poatch eggs" and pancakes in several places. To make jellies of any kind it was necessary to start out with a pair of calves feet and two knuckles of veal. You "boyled" them, but you "broke not the bones."

A conserve made from violets was apparently a delicacy in those days. Rabisha's instructions begin: "Have of your Violet Flowers, and Pick out all the bleu ones from them." He doesn't state his objections to blue violets.

This early cookery expert even includes in his book instruction in meat carving, such as cutting up a swan, "dismembering a heron, allaying a pheasant," etc. And some of his advice doesn't go far amiss today.

"Your knife must be fair and your hands clean, and pass but two fingers and a thumb upon your knife. . . . Foul not the Table-Cloath but wipe upon your Napkin. . . ."

This little book with its yellowed pages and carefully hand set type would be a rare treasure in any food lover's library, not because of its recipes, which are certainly valueless to us as such, but because it carries with it the very atmosphere of 17th century England.

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery, hostessing, and budgeting.

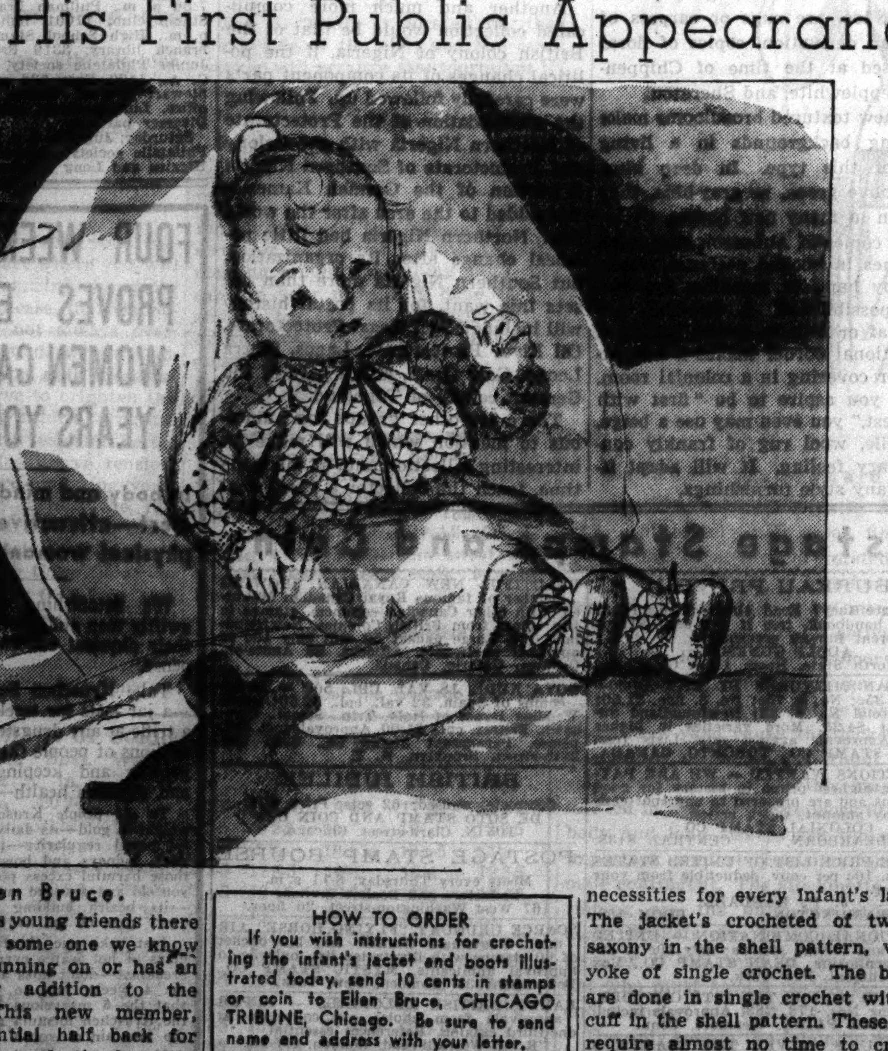
Crocheted Jacket and Bootees for His First Public Appearance



By Ellen Bruce.

AMONG ones young friends there usually is some one we know who is planning on or has an interesting addition to the family fold. This new member, whether a potential half back for Rah-Rah college or destined to become the most famous operatic star, must put his best foot forward when meeting the public.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for crocheting the infant's jacket and boots illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

The soft pink hand crocheted jacket and bootees illustrated today are necessities for every infant's layette. The jacket's crocheted of two ply saxony in the shell pattern, with a yoke of single crochet. The bootees are done in single crochet with the cuff in the shell pattern. These items require almost no time to crochet. The boots can be made in half a day, while the jacket may take a day's time if the crocheter includes this among her various household duties.

ANNUAL BENEFIT AID

Mrs. Charles A. Mortimer of Beverly Hills is one of the youthful and pretty members of the Ridge Service guild auxiliary, which will give its annual benefit, a county fair, in September at one of the country clubs. Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer are leaving shortly for a trip to Banff and Lake Louise in the Canadian Rockies.

WAS IT TENNIS GAME?

Mrs. Charles S. Garland probably was watching a tennis game when this picture was taken, for she looks so interested and tennis is one of her main interests and activities. Her husband, a former member of the U. S. Davis cup team, is one of Onwentsia's best players, and he and his wife often play doubles. She also is a member of the Lake Forest ticket committee for the Ravinia Festival association and was busy during the month of June selling books of tickets for the concerts at Ravinia Park.

Gay '90's Are Inspiration for Latest Styles

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The latest styles to fall in with the "look like a picture" movement are active sports fashions. Modern girls, going in for sports in a big way, copied the major element of men's sports clothes—comfort. It was impossible to look at sports clothes anywhere, from the grandest Paris salons to the simplest sports shop, without having the words practical, comfortable, and similar phrases thrown at you as if nothing else possibly could interest you.

This summer, here in Paris and around the resorts, there is a change. The new sports styles are just as practical and easy to jump around in, but nevertheless feminine. The chic thing is sports clothes that make the wearer look like a picture—a graceful moving picture. Everybody here has taken up bicycling, and there is a flavor of the "bicycle built for two" about sports clothes that are worn to play golf and tennis in, and for near-the-water sports. Blazers, flaming with lurid stripes like in the gay '90s, are worn with flannel trousers that are shorter, but not short.

White Sports Frocks Have Flowered Buttons.

Plus-fours that are perilously near being bloomers, in the good old sense of the word, are made of the gayest of flowered linen, and worn with linen pull-overs for active sports. White sports frocks have picturesque, flowered buttons, and dainty puffed sleeves that don't bind the active swing of a golfing arm. Sunbonnets make the smartest and daintiest of hats, though often made of modern cellophane. Divided skirts [you may call them culottes], cut circular, are fashionable for any and all of the strenuous sports activities of the summer.

Sports suits take a tip from sporting gentlemen of the past, and come out in the loudest checkered patterns. They are made of piqué, checkered with such brash colors as red, green, and yellow. Beach coats use checkers, too—but the rustic, dairy variety that belong to the gingham apron. Romantic coats for the seaside, made of printed cotton from the Bali Islands, are also part of the new picturesque trend of styles. Heim makes them with full shirred skirts and fitted bodices.

Brilliant Color Schemes Win Spotlight from Blue.

The colors that went big with the practical and comfortable era of styles—navy blue, white, and such unexciting shades—are eclipsed in this summer of sports by really brilliant colors and color combinations. It is quite usual to see a golf suit with a beige divided skirt, a bright raspberry linen jacket, an equally vivid blue blouse, and similar harmonies. White continues, of course, to be the choice of many, but white almost invariably is complemented by color interest in details, such as bright shoes and gloves, hat, belt, and scarf.

One model has a smart blazer jacket, made of brilliant blue jersey striped with bright red and white, a color combination that can be seen without glasses a long distance away. It has shortish white flannel trousers that are wide like a skirt, and under the jacket there is a white slip-on of linen thread, and a tuck-in ascot of golden yellow. The white sports shoes are fastened across the insteps with a flock of bright blue lether straps. Madeleine de Rauch designed the model.

The newest of tennis frocks is designed by the French shirtmaker, D'Ahetzc. It is made of a white cloky piqué that has a raised design of crossbars. The dress is a one piece, with a shirtmaker blouse, and a divided skirt that is circular and rather wide. A wide, stitched fitted belt unites the blouse and the skirt.

A white sports frock from Vera Borea is a charming model made of white silk jersey, a soft and dull version of this silk. It has puffed sleeves and fastens down the front on three large red buttons with clusters of white flowers embossed on them. The belt is made of white patent lether, and the four gored skirt has action plaits set in at the bottom. A bright red bag goes with this dress, and the wide white hat has a red ribbon bow and band.

A summer sports ensemble in shantung comes from Madeleine de Rauch. The dress is pale yellow in color with a belt of moss green shantung, and a backless halter blouse that is shirred high around the neck in front. The jacket is made of moss green shantung, and has revers that are held down to the body by black velvet thongs. The short sleeves are flared at the shoulders.

Queries on Homes

DEAR MRS. BARGELT: Our metal pipes which carry cold water to our kitchen and bath often show beads and tiny streams of water when the rooms are warm. Would it help any to give the pipes a coat of paint? J. S.

ANSWER: If you will coat the pipes with three or four coats of paint you can reduce the condensation to an appreciable extent.

ENGAGED TO MARRY

Mrs. James A. Muller of 7750 Saginaw avenue announces the engagement of her daughter, Ruth M. Muller, to Eldon Myers Smith of Watervliet, Mich. Miss Muller is a former member of the Chicago Woman's Symphony orchestra and studied at the Chicago Musical college. Mr. Smith attended the University of Michigan and Western State Teachers' college.

Psychologist Lists Books on Child Guidance

Only Well Informed Parent Can Arm a Youngster to Face Complex World.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"OUR study group gradually has accumulated enough money to buy some books. It was 'hard come by,' and we want to spend it carefully. What books for parents can you recommend?"

To be satisfied with my own answer to this question, I would have to spend hours going over my fast growing library of books for parents, in order to select the most suitable ones. At the time being, with other work in progress, such a procedure isn't possible. Still, I don't like to leave this and similar letters unanswered, so I shall make a few recommendations, always with the proviso that the books be looked over "in the hand" before purchasing.

Frances Wickes' "Inner World of Childhood" is an excellent book. One may not agree entirely with the analytical psychology of Jung, but Frances Wickes brings such deep sympathy, and such warmth and delicacy of understanding to childhood that a few points of disagreement do not matter. Her book is to me rich reading. She really does reach, with tenderness and high intelligence, the "inner world of childhood." The publisher is Appleton-Century company.

Outside Influences Later Affect Lives of Children.

No one interested in the present day flood of outside influences that affect our children can afford to miss the thoroughly written and thoroughly investigated subject matter in "Our Movie-Made Children." A silly editorial in one of the country's leading newspapers dismissed the findings. I'm sure the writer knew nothing about children, for the book is an important document on the subject of the effect of motion pictures on young people. "Our Movie-Made Children," by Henry James Forman, is published by Macmillan company.

My favorite book on sex education you probably know by this time, if you ever have written in for advice on helpful reading. In "New Patterns in Sex Teaching," I think Frances Bruce Strain has met simply, concretely, and yet with basic wisdom, the "mental hazards" that mothers create for themselves on this subject. The actual questions and answers given are most helpful. Appleton-Century company is the publisher.

If you want to come to grips with the new education, you will be helped to do so by the substantial volume, "Parents Look at Modern Education," by Winifred E. Bain. This is written "to help an older generation to understand the schools of the new." Appleton-Century company is the publisher.

Parents Should Understand the Nature of Youngsters.

As you will notice if you look over the books I'm suggesting, those that tend to the essentially practical or technical are not largely represented. To me, the books that mean most to us parents are those that leave us with a sense of having gained in a deeper understanding of the nature, the thoughts, and feelings of children.

POPULAR YOUNG MATRON

The former Elizabeth Manget, the pretty southern wife of Cyrus R. Smith, has become one of the most popular young matrons in society since she came here from Texas as a bride two years ago. She is a mainstay, too, of the Chicago Junior league and of the committee that runs the Vassar House restaurant in Diana court for the benefit of the scholarship fund. Here she is relaxing on the lawn near the pool of the Indian Hill Country club.

Such a book is "New Pathways for Children with Cerebral Palsy," by Rogers and Thomas. No mother dealing with this terrific handicap can help being encouraged and aided by this book. "The Spastic Child," by Marguerite K. Fischel, published by C. V. Mosby company of St. Louis, Mo., is another helpful volume.

For those interested in the much discussed subject of painless childbirth there is the book, "Easier Motherhood," by Constance L. Todd, published by the John Day company.

There is the book, not new but excellent, "Gifted Children," by Hollingworth, published by Macmillan company. There really is insufficient literature on this subject.

For parents of young children, a clear, practical, brief book called "Two to Six," by Rose H. Alschuler and the pre-primary faculty of the Winnetka public schools, Winnetka, Ill., is ideal. This book has chapters on play materials, activities, excursions, music, and books. William Morrow is the publisher.

Book Is Based on Years of Experience in Child Study.

"Nursery Education: Theory and Practice," is a detailed presentation of the principles and operation of the nursery school. It is based on years of experience in St. George's School for Child Study, University of Toronto. The authors are Blatz, Millichamp, and Fletcher. William Morrow publishes the book. Its length is 350-odd pages, closely printed, a real guide for teachers and for parents who like to "dig in."

The parents of adolescents will find many subjects that fret them clarified in the book, "Normal Youth and Its Everyday Problems," by Douglas A. Thom. Mental and physical and emotional development, petting, homosexuality, and other aspects of these teen years are well and simply treated. The publisher is Appleton-Century company.

For those who have studied psychology and would like to find out what is meant by people when they talk of the Gestalt phychology, or the Behaviorists, or Freud, or Jung, there is the excellent book, "Contemporary Schools of Psychology," by Dr. Robert S. Woodworth of Columbia, published by the Ronald Press company.

Most of these books contain lengthy bibliographies which will serve as further guides.

"Suggested Topics for Parent Study Groups" is the name of a leaflet which will be sent on receipt of a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

Soft Filter Spray New and Practical Kitchen Gadget

INGENIOUS minds are forever inventing new and tricky gadgets to lighten the tasks of the busy housewife. One of the latest is a small rubber affair which fits to any size or shape faucet and acts as a soft filter spray and anti-splash by a small metal lever. When cleaning vegetables, stirring up suds, and for watering plants it's ideal.

At the same counter also is shown a dandy double faucet gadget which brings the old style separate cold and hot water affair up to date. You simply attach this apparatus, which has an adjustable bar between each faucet, with one outlet in the center

A Beautiful Complexion
.... Comes Quickly
When Mercolized Wax is Used

GIVE your skin youth. Bring back its loveliness and beauty with the aid of pure Mercolized Wax. Let this delightful cream remove the unattractive, blemished surface skin that conceals your true beauty. This scientifically-evolved cream takes off the surface skin so skillfully that you are not actually aware of the skin shedding until you observe the new smoothness and natural beauty of your complexion. Mercolized Wax cleanses, softens, smooths and beautifies the skin. Blemishes disappear.

Since its inception twenty-five years ago, Mercolized Wax has been sold all over the world. It takes the place of numerous beauty aids. Beautiful women everywhere are grateful to Mercolized Wax for smooth, clear complexions. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty in any skin.

TRY PHELACTINE—the "different" depilatory. Takes off superfluous hair quickly and gently. Leaves skin hairfree. Simple to use. Odorless.

USE SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT—a refreshing, stimulating skin tonic. Dissolve it in witch hazel. Saxolite tightens the loose, flabby skin, smooths out wrinkles and age lines. Refines coarse pores. Eliminates oiliness.

At drug and department stores everywhere.

Modern Lighting Both Practical and Decorative Combination of Direct and Indirect Illumination Marks New Progress.

"New Curtains and Draperies," a booklet by Claire Winslow, answers puzzlers about correct lengths for curtains and draperies and tells of new, attractive materials and styles of treatment. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

FROM oil lamps to gas lights to electricity, a span of years covered in the lifetime of many older people today! What an evolution in lighting they have witnessed! But all the strides forward have not been taken. This year and next and the years to come will see great improvements. For example, some of the so-called modern lights housed in tubular glass and often placed at either side of a mirror will go, for they are too hard on the eyes. Just because a light is "modern" is no proof that it is perfect.

At the Chicago Lighting Institute in the Civic Opera building are rooms arranged to show the merits of various methods of illuminating the home. There, in interiors of average size and of the type found in thousands of houses and apartments, you may inspect the latest lamps, direct and indirect, the newest wall fixtures, and methods of indirect lighting.

Painting Lighted So as to Reveal Beauty of Picture.

In the living room a specially attractive feature is the illumination given an oil painting which hangs above the fireplace. Instead of the old fashioned metal gadget holding an electric bulb which was attached to the frame and which was never a thing of beauty there is now a soft, diffused glow covering the entire picture. It comes from electric bulbs concealed in a cove that frames the wall section above the mantel. Artists claim that the true value of painting is seen in this light and not in the other spotty one that leaves part of the canvas in shadow.

Lamp Has Both Indirect and Direct Lighting Features.

Concealed behind the cornice board above the draperies of the windows are more lights which shed their illumination like sunlight throughout the room. Or, if you wish these turned off, you can still have the place evenly lighted by means of an indirect lighting urn which is placed on a decorative wooden pedestal stand in front of one of the windows.

Bookcases have shelves cleverly lighted so you can read the book titles with ease. At a desk near by is a bronze lamp so made that the light is cast on your letter writing or reading without striking your eyes. On small tables at either end of a sofa are decorative table lamps with silk shades.

Other rooms in the institute open to the public at all times are dining room, dinette, bath, kitchen, and bedroom.

Persian and Chinese Rugs Being Used with Colonial Pieces

A FEW years ago colonial mahogany living room furniture always was linked with oriental rugs. They seemed to be the Siamese twins of the decorating world. Not so today, however. Women are finding that there are lots of things underfoot besides orientals, although these rich floor coverings will, of course, always be good.

Both Persian and Chinese designs are appropriate with 18th century English or colonial mahogany pieces. Artistic, too, are rugs or carpets of European derivation, copies of floral ones used at the time of Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and Sheraton.

The new textured broadlooms make charming backgrounds in a living room of this type. In deep blue, cedar, olive green, or gray-blue, they are seen in many new homes.

Good copies of Aubusson rugs, mellow tones in hooked patterns, either made by hand or machine, are two more possibilities. A two-tone allover leaf or foliage design having a conventional border makes a delightful floor covering in a colonial room. And if you aspire to be "first with the latest," you even may use a beige, deep pile, wool rug of frankly contemporary feeling. It will adapt itself to any style furnishings.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

COLLECTORS who are limited in the amount of money which they may spend for stamps, finding that their budget will not go far toward making a presentable collection of United States stamps, are turning to foreign issues which, for the time being, at least, may be purchased at a fraction of the catalog values. Of course, it is impossible for one to attempt the collection of all foreign stamps, both nineteenth and twentieth century, and it is necessary to limit the collection either by geographical or political boundaries or by time.

Thus a collection of European countries would be one with a geographical boundary, a collection of the British empire would have a political boundary, and either of these or any other single country or group could be limited to a certain period, which would make a collection with a time boundary.

For those without a definite plan a new scheme of collecting may be not unwelcome. This is based on selecting a certain political division of the earth and collecting the stamps of that division, together with the stamps of all other political entities which have preceded it, or which may have joined in forming the present state. Thus a collection of the Union of South Africa would include the stamps of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, Transvaal, and the Orange River colony. In turn it would be necessary to collect Bechuanaland, for this became a part of the Cape in the nineties; Swazieland and Zululand, for these were joined to Natal, South African Republic, and New Republic, the forerunners of the Transvaal, and Orange Free State, which later became Orange River colony.

Another and much more complicated collection would be that of the British colony of Nigeria, if the political changes of its component parts were carefully followed up. Following the consolidation of the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria with the Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria a portion of the German Kamerun was added to the area after the world war. Northern Nigeria had little political change after its organization, but Southern Nigeria more than offsets this want, for its postal history will include Niger Coast Protectorate, Oil River Protectorate, Lagos, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast, and a part of the German colony of Togoland.

There are other groups too numerous to mention which will make an interesting collection and, at the same time, teach the collector a great deal of history if he cares to search out the reasons for the various changes.

Cachets and Covers.

The St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a dual purpose cachet to mark the 146th anniversary of the establishment of the United States coast guard and also the dedication of the coast guard air station at that city on Aug. 4. Cachets will be applied to standard 6¾ size covers bearing air mail postage, ready-to-go, if they reach H. E. Warner, cachet director, P. O. Box 1795, St. Petersburg, Fla., before Aug. 1.

Edward F. Mezwin, 57-25 69th place, Maspeth, N. Y., will sponsor cachets on July 24 for the death of Martin Van Buren, and on July 25 for the battle of Lundy's lane. Send as many covers as desired, ready-to-go, and include 1 cent per cover for forwarding.

FOUR WEEKS' TEST PROVES ELDERLY WOMEN CAN FEEL YEARS YOUNGER

In body and mind—be keen—alert—attractive—help gain physical womanly charm.

It's astonishing nowadays how swiftly men and women can improve their physical condition at little expense.

Take Kruschen Salts for instance—a jar lasts for weeks and costs but a trifle at any drugstore—and with it millions of people the world over are gaining and keeping more superb and glorious health—

To old people Kruschen is worth its weight in gold—its daily use means blissful bowel regularity—it keeps stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels more clear of those harmful excess poisons which make you old and dragged out before your time—its health building influence benefits every part of the body.

Just take one third teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—don't miss a morning—do this for 4 weeks just to prove to yourself that the 6 marvelous health minerals in the Kruschen formula make you think of the fountain of youth.

No more constipation—no more harsh laxatives or cathartics—but blissful daily bowel action when you take your [illegible] daily dose of Kruschen.

Take Stock of Figure Faults, Says Adviser

Compare Silhouette with Ideal Measurements, Then Begin Correction.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

IS it true, as one noted authority on corrective gymnastics says, that women know more about the workings of automobiles, gas ranges, or vacuum cleaners than they do about their own bodies? That they know better how to care for inanimate machines, how to keep them in running order, and what to do when they refuse to function, than they know how to take care of themselves?

Dorothy Nye is the authority who raises the question in her recently published book with the self-explanatory title, "New Bodies for Old" [Funk & Wagnalls company]. "Most women past 21," Miss Nye goes on record as saying, "could pass a stiff automobile quiz with a higher rating than they could pass the simplest of physiology examinations."

Woman's Figure Is Her Autobiography.

"Your body is your autobiography," Miss Nye challenges.

So now it is up to us to decide what kind of facts our public would infer from our autobiographies. Autobiographies by women are said to be lacking because of the feminine inclination to withhold damaging facts. We love our little secrets and refuse to tell all.

Well, we do that about our figures, too, resorting to dress and foundation garment artifices, and sometimes to whopping lies about what the scales have just informed us. And we hide behind shampoo tints or dyes perhaps to keep another secret as dark as possible. Anyway, a new honesty now is being asked of us on the subject of our silhouette, at least, with the promise of a longer life and a younger one.

Tape Measure, Scale and Mirror Tell the Story.

We are told to begin at the beginning with honesty in our eye, a tape measure in our hand, a scale near by, and a full length mirror not far away. Then to dig in and take the bad news for what it may mean to a new autobiographical sketch. It will mean plenty, but only if the facts of weight, girth measurements, and the full length view are accepted at straight value without any cheating whatsoever. No saying, "But I wear only a 36, and read the hip measures on this tape!" You're getting the hip measurement without the foundation garment slimming, and that's not the system. It's what you weigh and measure without any of the subterfuges.

Begin now with the chart of correct proportions Miss Nye offers us as a guide. [You may allow some deviation for bone structure, anywhere from three, four five, to six pounds].

Measurements of Famous New York Dancing Chorus.

Bust	32
Waist	24
Hip	34½
Wrist	6
Thigh	21
Calf	13
Ankle	8
Head	21½
Neck	12½
Shoe	4½ B to 5½ B
Height	5 ft. 4 to 5 ft. 5
Weight	115 to 120 lbs.

Miss Nye offers five different classifications for figures, as follows:

1. Thin, undeveloped muscles, underweight, and usually extreme nerve tension.
2. Overweight, fatty pads, distributed all over body, abdomen, back, hips, knees, upper arms, legs, and ankles.
3. Thin torso with heavy hips, thighs, and legs.
4. Thick upper torso with thin hips, thighs, and legs.
5. Fairly normal build, but with weak muscle tone and general fatigue.

Faulty Figures May Be Normalized.

It will be obvious from your correct proportions chart where you will have to begin normalizing the faulty figure. And note, please, that the silhouette faults are not always overweight ones. Your underweight "autobiographs" will be dull presentations without a curve to brighten the eye. So into your reform program must be written curves, and better muscle tone, and less nerve tension.

And while you are analyzing yourself conscientiously before the full length mirror, you are asked to study your back particularly. If it comes under any one of the three following categories it's due for training: The round, hollow back with forward head; the long, round back, or round upper back.

I particularly like to call your attention now to the silhouette construction, as suggested above, because running around in bathing suits you can get your measuring done easily, and in that abbreviated garment the figure flaws have small chance to escape the honest eye.

SCHOOLGIRL TO VISIT IN SOUTH

Mary Ellen Bean, the Donald P. Beans' schoolgirl daughter, is looking forward to a visit in Atlanta, where her mother used to live, this month, and in August the whole family will go north to their summer place in Wisconsin for a month's outing. This picture of Mary Ellen, who will be a junior at the University High school next year, was taken at a dance given recently by the Colony club of the University of Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

PERHAPS some of our readers would like to help fill the following request, which comes from a small town in Illinois.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am a cottage mother, and wonder if it would be at all possible for you to get a Girl Scout uniform for one of my girls, whose parents are both dead. She wears a size 16.

"I could also use some bathing suits about the same size, if your readers have any available. Mrs. C. B."

Articles offered will have to be mailed to Mrs. B., since she is located in a large home for dependent children and is unable to call.

This letter comes from a case worker.

"Dear Miss Brown: We are writing to find out if any of your readers might have either a sewing machine or a washing machine, which could be given to a young woman in whom we are interested. This woman has one child and is expecting another in a month or so. Her husband's earnings are sufficient for their regular needs, but there is no money for extras. Mrs. S. has a heart condition which makes washing clothes hard for her. She sews with considerable skill, and could use a sewing machine to great advantage. We realize that these are two very large requests, but hope it is possible that one of your readers will be buying a new machine and so can help this woman. A. H. B."

The S. family is located on the north side of the city, and the case worker will arrange transportation if any reader is able to supply the requested articles.

"Dear Miss Brown: I wonder if some reader has a discarded crystal, or a one or two tube battery set she would like to give away. We have no electricity and can't afford any sort of a set. Mrs. D."

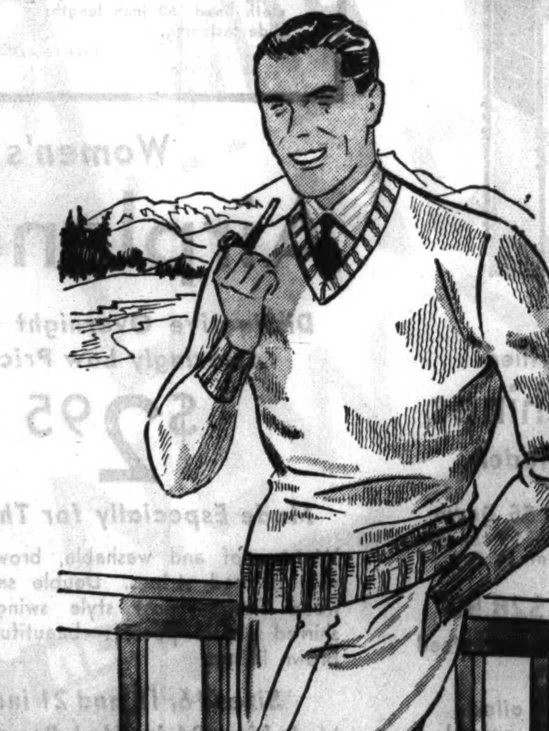
This address is on the south side.

Can any reader supply a wheel chair for a woman who is almost completely incapacitated? She lives on the northwest side, and an interested friend will make arrangements for delivery of the chair.

"Dear Miss Brown; This is the first time I have ever appealed for aid, but am now at the point where I must have some assistance.

"I am a widow, with three girls to support. I work as a special in one of the best known stores here in the city, but can earn only enough for food and rent. I am greatly in need of a navy or black dress [size 42 or 22½] for work. I have only one dress, and since the weather has been warm it is very uncomfortable for me. I would certainly appreciate receiving a discarded eyelet or sheer of some sort. My 17 year old daughter needs slippers badly. She wears size 7A. The pair she wears at present have pasteboard in them for soles and the heels are bad. Mrs. E. J."

A Sportsman's Sweater Knit of Camel's Hair Wool



By Jean Macdonald.

A SPORTSMAN'S sweater made of camel's hair wool, fingering yarn, Scotch worsted, or cashmere is a comfortable type of garment that every man enjoys for all around sports activities, or for lazy lounging out of doors.

Making this sweater is an easy knitting job because the large needles and heavy yarn cause the jacket to take shape in no time. Without any extraordinary diligence this may be knitted in five days. The loose fitting body and long sleeves are the most important comfort requisites for the male contingent. The stockinette and ribbing are the only two stitches used. Pockets may be added to this sweater if the man in question is one who must have a pocket for this and a pocket for that.

The only reason the feminine members of the family have not done more knitting for the men is because the men have not been insistent enough. They like to wear a nicely knitted sweater or jacket just as much as their better halves, and they are equally as style conscious, so don't neglect them.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the man's V neck sweater with long sleeves illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Helen Morgan Snaps Her Fingers at Beauty Laws; Relaxation Her Secret.

HELEN MORGAN, whose voice, now throaty, now tantalizingly thin, is one of the charms of George White's "Scandals," makes us beauty writers look a little silly. She snaps her beautiful fingers at all the laws we so pompously lay down. And she gets away with it.

Helen is five feet six inches tall and she'd be the first one to tell you that the bones of the Morgan frame are not on the fragile, delicate side. But does she diet, do physical jerks, or nibble at Melba toast to keep herself sylphlike? She does not.

Her skin is very fair, very fine. Does she spend hours on end in the beauty shop or douse herself eternally with precious unguents? She does not.

She probably fusses with her appearance less than any other professional beauty. She's just naturally a handsome, healthy young woman who loves to sing, eat, and sleep. She has one quality that is undoubtedly the secret of her luscious good looks—she's as relaxed as a kitten curled up for a nap.

Eight Hours' Sleep Is Just a Cat Nap.

Ooh, how she loves to sleep! An eight hour stretch is just a cat nap; she'll take fourteen or eighteen hours any time. She eats only when she's hungry and only what she wants.

Her companion and girl Friday, Franta, takes on all the responsibility of keeping Miss Morgan well fed and well grommed. Franta grooms her beautiful nails. Franta rustles up hamburger, cheese, fruit, onions—anything the Morgan tummy yerns for at any hour. Franta is her hair stylist. With her manicure scissors she snips the short black curls that fashion the distinctive Helen Morgan coiffure.

And Franta sees to it that there is always plenty of cold cream on Miss Morgan's dressing table, at home or abroad. There, if you like, is Miss Morgan's complexion beauty secret. She thinks skin lubrication is the key to skin beauty; leisure, private moments are spent with her face and neck generously cream coated. She stays fair, by the way, leaving the tan fashion to the rest of the world.

Her White Skin Perfect Foil for Black Hair.

And in this she's certainly wise. A white, almost luminous skin is the perfect foil for her smiling hazel eyes, her black hair, and the generous mouth with its perfect teeth. Her eyes are lovely, but she doesn't think so. She doesn't like hazel eyes. She thinks they're wishy-washy. On the stage she uses a blue shadow which makes them look deep brown.

Once in a while she likes a light, soothing massage. Deep, strenuous massage gets on her nerves and, she says, leaves her black and blue.

Her hands are dramatically beautiful. They're large, strong and expressive, and beautifully shaped. She wears vivid polish, applied carefully by Franta, and has manicures only when necessary. She adores cosmetics. Her idea of a field day is to buy and try everything she sees in a shop. First thing she does when she arrives in a town is to head for a cosmetic counter. At the moment she's using a 10 cent lipstick, but tomorrow it may be a $5 one. She uses vivid shades always. A little powder and plenty of lipstick are her only makeup aids off stage. She likes to give her skin a rest between shows.

Miss Morgan Is Unusual as Beauty Subject.

She's an unusual beauty subject. Even in her taste in perfumes she's different. A luscious beauty, full of personality and vitality, you'd expect her taste in scents to run to the exotic and the romantic. She could carry them off perfectly. But her favorite is an English perfume, light and freshly sweet, that suggests the fragrance of new mown hay!

There's only one woman in the world who could eat what she pleases, exercise as little as she pleases, and take her beauty ritual as casually as she pleases and still be beautiful. And that woman is Helen Morgan, who must charm the beauty bestowing gods as she does the cash customers when she sings a torch song.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

Helen Morgan of the "Scandals," whose beauty beliefs are unorthodox, but work like a charm in her singular case. Miss Morgan has health and handsomeness—and serenity, which is the world's greatest youth preserver.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, July 20.

Tomato plants frequently are attacked by wilt, and then little can be done for them. Spraying with bordeaux early in spring, and continuing the work at intervals of eight days, may keep the attacks down. Wilt may be caused by aphid attacks, and the best remedy for these is a contact spray, such as Black Leaf 40. Water tomato plants during dry weather, or end rot may result. Sun scald is likely to affect fast growing, exposed fruits. Cucumbers, muskmelons, and celery also are susceptible to wilt.

Tuesday, July 21.

To obtain specimen flowers of the dahlia be sure and remove all but two or, at most, three shoots. Remove the side growths, and at least half the buds as soon as they can be pinched out with the fingers. Keep securely staked. Examine outdoor plants for green fly, and if any are seen begin spraying immediately with contact sprays. Consult the seedsman for the best material to use. Keep spring planted trees and shrubs well watered during dry weather. After watering mulch around the base. Any material will serve as a mulch. Watering means to give each tree a thorough soaking, not merely sprinkling over the surface.

Wednesday, July 22.

Cultivate all outdoor stock. This operation in gardening should not be neglected even though weeds are not present, for the object is to keep the soil stirred to form a blanket of loose soil over the surface, which prevents the too rapid escape of moisture by evaporation. Cracks will not appear in ground that is kept stirred. Stir as soon as the soil partially dries after watering. Never neglect house plants that are plunged in the garden, for most of them are active at this time. An application of plant food at intervals of two weeks will encourage a heavy growth and prepare them for their return to the house.

Thursday, July 23.

If the terrarium is placed in a light, north window or back away from direct, strong sunlight, the tropical plants it contains will not be injured, but will develop rapidly. Keep all fast growing plants in bounds by removing the glass cover and cutting back rampant growths. The fine, delicate foliage of many desirable things is often crowded out by strong plants. If the terrarium seems to be doing badly, take out all the plants, examine the soil to see that it is not saturated with moisture, replace with new, if necessary, and replant.

Friday, July 24.

Keep all sections of the yard in good condition, for there is nothing quite as discouraging as a poorly kept place. Keep the grass mowed. This isn't a task because during hot, dry weather it doesn't grow much. Keep all flower beds and shrubbery borders edged with a spade to prevent the grass from growing into them. Cut back all rampant growths to keep the plants neat and shipshape. If bare places in the garden appear, obtain a few annuals as a cover even though they give little bloom. Tie up all vines.

Saturday, July 25.

Examine the bird bath, and see that it has clear, fresh water. Remove leaves or rubbish that might have collected in it. Remove all dead leaves from the pool, and if any green fly is seen spray immediately. Add fresh water whenever the supply is lowered through evaporation, as this affords the fish a healthier habitat. Tropical lilies delight in warm water. Keep the rockery in the best condition. A mulch of peat is excellent for many plants.

New Shampoo Startles the Country With Its Beautifying Results

IMPROPER WAY
Hair dull, covered with cloudy film.
CORRECT NEW WAY
No dull film; hair soft, shining like silk!

Works Miracles In Making Hair Gleam!

It's no wonder women everywhere are raving about this amazing, new liquid shampoo—no wonder one trial converts them for life! For it gives your hair a thrilling new gleam. Yes, actually transforms dull, average-looking hair into a brilliant, glistening halo—with a single application.

Look at the girl above. See what a difference it makes when you use it. So try it soon—see how beautiful your hair really can be.

Just how this unusual shampoo works these miracles is a new scientific secret. It isn't oil, it isn't soap—it isn't anything you've heard of before. Scientists have brought us something brand-new; a shampoo so different that they've patented the process by which it is made. You simply wet your hair, shake on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy lather. 5 times more lather than soap in hardest water. Lather so neutral—being neither acid nor alkaline—that it is ideal for either oily or dry hair. You rub it briskly into the hair, rinse thoroughly—and you're through.

"What?" you say, "no special rinses; no vinegar, lemon or after-rinses to 'cut' the lather?" No—they are not necessary—just a thorough dousing in clear water! That's the marvelous part. Drene cannot leave unrinsable film on hair to cover up natural lustre as ordinary shampoos do. Your hair is left radiant, silky, smooth. Even bleached or dyed hair is virtually undetectable after a Drene shampoo. More amazing, embarrassing flakes of dandruff disappear with a single washing, leaving the scalp scrupulously clean. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Women who have used it for months rave about the beauty and health their hair possesses. Doctors recommend it because its thorough cleansing is the quickest, best way to a healthy head of hair. Cleansed the Drene Way, your scalp can really nourish the hair properly. Even extreme dryness of hair and scalp responds to the Drene Way, which simply calls for one or two shampoos a week with Drene, and a few minutes of scalp massage and brushing of the hair.

Procter & Gamble make this marvel, and you can buy it in various sizes at all drug, department and ten cent stores. Only half a tablespoonful for a perfect shampoo. The most economical and beautifying shampoo you have ever used. Try Drene at once. Buy the large size. It costs less per shampoo.

The Neighbors Size Up G. O. P. Nominee

By WILLARD EDWARDS

Topeka, Kas.

THIS story about Alf Landon will start with a withering criticism of him, quoted exactly as it came from the lips of a roadside commentator encountered at a gasoline filling station on route 40 between Kansas City and Topeka one pleasant June day when the thermometer had just recorded an effortless and complacent 109 degrees Fahrenheit. It was hot even for Kansas.

- Anti-Landon men in Kansas are a fast-expiring tribe. Since the selection of their governor as the candidate of a major party for President Kansan pride has swelled to bountiful proportions.
- This sturdy American, however, had not been swayed by mere local patriotism.
- He had been reclining on a bench in the shade of the white stone filling station when this reporter's car emerged out of the heat waves and pulled up for supplies. He joined the attendant who came out to the car and leaned against a gasoline pump, watching operations with a casual interest.
- I tossed out a hack query:
- "We going to have a Kansan down in the White House next year?"
- The attendant, busy cleaning the windshield of the mangled remains of grasshoppers, murmured mildly that he guessed "'most everybody 'round here will vote for the home town boy."
- The gentleman in the dirty white trousers and somewhat cleaner blue

Mantle Regrets the Passing of Thomas Meighan

Reviews Life of Stage and Screen Star

Recalls Quiet Manner and Engaging Personality of Popular Irish Actor.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—In that book that I shall write one day, which is to be devoted exclusively to my unknown friends, the late Thomas Meighan will have a place. He died last week, and had not been active these many months, even as a screen actor, nor active for years as a stage actor. But he belonged to the theater in which I grew up as a professional playgoer, and I counted him among my friends, even though our meetings were rare and most casual. "How're ya, Burns?" "Hi, Tommy!" That was all.

I don't know that that particular brand of friendship is common with playgoers. I suppose it stems more directly than I imagine from the same sort of idolatry that makes fans of one sort or another, including matinée idols. It always has seemed a little more serious than that to me. There is nothing resembling fanatical worship attached to it. It has all the attributes of a bona fide friendship, a friendship subject to as many disappointments as enthusiasms. I, for example, never thought of Tommy Meighan as a great actor. I am sure if I were to go back through the scrapbooks I should find many reviews of plays in which he appeared about which I said just that. There may have been occasions when I, smarting under disappointment in his work, wrote things that he accepted as being meanly written and unkindly thought.

Liked Actor and Most of the Things He Did.

Of course there were many other notices of praise because, in general, I liked him and most of the things he did. It never occurred to me that he would not understand. When I said he gave a poor performance, he must have known it was only in the line of duty.

That is one of the nice things about this kind of friendship. It never needs any explaining. Knowing your friend as well as you do, or think you do, or convince yourself that you do, you know he understands, because you have a childish faith that he feels the same understanding friendship for you. If he doesn't, you never know it.

I recall one Christmas eve, some years ago, being called to the telephone and told by a secretary that a then prominent actress would like to talk with me. Coming to the 'phone the lady, whom I had never met in person but had known for years in the theater, wished me the usual compliments of the season, and then added, apologetically, that she hoped I would understand her calling. She had been grateful for many pleasant things that I had said about her, etc.

It wasn't the suggestion that she hoped I would understand, but that she did not realize I would understand, knowing me as well as she did, that came as a shock. A second later I found myself saying as much to her, telling her quite boldly that she did not have to call me to assure me of her understanding, even though I had never met her. And she hung up, thinking, I suspect, that I was reading her a bit of a lecture, while the only thought in my mind was, what a pity we two, who had been understanding friends for so many years, should have to explain that friendship.

Well, Tommy Meighan was my friend. I think I met him in one of those all star revivals that George Tyler staged for the Lieblers about 1904. It was "The Two Orphans," and Tommy was the Marquis De Presles in that cast. He had broken away from shoveling coal in his father's Pittsburgh factory, and found a job with a stock company of which Henrietta Crosman was leading woman, and with which she was trying out her first big success as a star, a George Hazleton comedy called "Mistress Nell." He came to New York, and Brady gave him a job in Grace George's company when she was playing "Her Majesty the Queen."

Happy Marriage Was One of Those Hollywood Miracles.

He had two seasons in stock in Pittsburgh after that, and then came back for the all-star "Two Orphans." And what a cast that was: Clara Morris, James O'Neill, J. E. Dodson, Jameson Lee Finney, Elita Proctor Otis, Grace George, Sarah Cowell Lemoyne, Bijou Fernandez, Sarah Truax, and a dozen youngsters with high hopes, like Helen Ormsbee, Thomas Meighan, and Pauline Guilford. Tommy did a bit of road work the next few years and then, in 1907, was put in the New York cast of Ade's "The College Widow," a part Frederick Truesdell originally had played in Chicago.

Frances Ring, Blanche's sister, and the girl Tommy was to marry and live happily with for twenty-seven years, had been sent west to take Dorothy Tennant's place as the heroine of "The Widow," and was with the company when it came to New York and picked up Meighan as the new Billy Bolton. They were married some months later, before the troupe sailed for London. Theirs has been one of the marriages of which the profession has been most proud. They were Irish and quick tempered, and Tommy developed a bit of artistic temperament. But they married for keeps and went through Hollywood and came out clean.

Tommy, as I say, was never a great actor, and he knew it. A good, competent workman, and handsome as all get out, he had his pick of leading rôles when he was on Broadway. Belasco had discovered him by the time I got to New York, which was in 1911. He played that year in "The Return of Peter Grimm," though not conspicuously. He went over to London for a part in Cohan's "Broadway Jones," and came back to play the defendant in "On Trial." Then it was he courageously cast his fortunes with the pictures.

APPEARS IN LATEST "SCANDALS"

Estelle Jayne is prominent in the large company which has come to the Grand Opera house for a summer run of George White's "Scandals." This is Chicago's first summer Broadway revue

Dance Team Opening at the Stevens

Crawford and Caskey to Join Continental Room Show Friday Evening.

● The dance team of Crawford and Caskey will open an engagement in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel next Friday evening, replacing Countess Emily von Losen, the ballerina who is now featured in the South Michigan avenue rendezvous. . . . Crawford and Caskey will use masks to simulate other dancing personalities, and will add still further to the interest of their act by including a magic and talking number together with versions of the rhumba and carioca. . . . Ben Pollack's orchestra continues at the Stevens. So does Lois Still and Georgie Tapps, singer and dancer, respectively.

● The Empire room of the Palmer house has decided to retain Milton Douglas as a feature of its floor show when the change of bill takes place this coming Saturday night. Douglas succeeded in winning quite a following during his stay at the downtown night spot. . . . Heading the new show is the dance team of Rosita and Fontana. Rosita was formerly the partner of Ramon, and danced in the Empire room in 1934 under the name of Ramon and Rosita. Fontana is the former male member of the team of Moss and Fontana. . . . Other items scheduled for appearances next Saturday are the Lathrop Brothers and Virginia Lee, a trio of tap dancers; Wences, the juggler and ventriloquist, and Bentley Stone, a ballet dancer formerly with the Chicago Opera company. . . . Ozzie Nelson's orchestra will be the backbone of the new Palmer house revue, and the Abbott Dancers and the De Soyos Argentine Tango band will remain.

● The Four Top Hatters, a quartet of musicians and entertainers, opened at the Morrison hotel last Tuesday evening to make nightly appearances in the Boston Oyster house and the Morrison cocktail lounge. The Top Hatters feature concert, comedy, novelty, and rhythm music.

● In addition to the items listed last Sunday in the column for the new show at Chez Paree, the famous near north side theater restaurant is presenting the dance team of Ramon and Renita, and the ventriloquist, Edgar Bergen. The change of bill took place last Friday night. Henry Busse's orchestra continues.

● Saturday is amateur star night in the Hotel Sherman's Old Town room. Any one who wants an audition for a possible appearance is welcome to come to the Old Town room on Thursday night and introduce himself to Marty Bloom. No advance applications are necessary.

● The Club Alabam carries four bands, which, among them, provide continuous entertainment from dusk to dawn. Lil Bernard and Flo Henrie head the floor show with Art Williams acting as master of ceremonies.

● The Yacht club, rejoicing in a brand new air conditioning system, is featuring Nan Blakstone, Jackie Green, and the Robinson Twins—singer, impersonator, and tap dancers, respectively.

● L'Aiglon, an old gathering place for gourmets, offers both dance and concert music by Emil DeSalvi's orchestra. In addition, there is entertainment by the Three Jacks and Dolores Marcelli.

IT'S JUNE AT THE RIALTO

June St. Clair, to be exact. This dancing and singing bit of cuteness is heading the current show at the Rialto on State street near Van Buren.

Star's Platform

JANE COWL, who will make a coast to coast tour next season in "First Lady," has her own ideas about the alleged death of "the road." She expressed herself to an interviewer recently in this manner:

"The road isn't dead; it is simply sleeping. It has been swindled and disappointed so often by shoddy road companies presenting good New York plays that the provincial theatergoers are justifiably inclined to steer clear of most traveling attractions. When I go on tour with 'First Lady' we will take the entire New York production as we did with 'Romeo and Juliet.' I would not have agreed to make this tour if Sam Harris hadn't agreed to give the road exactly what New York audiences have been seeing for thirty weeks."

Miss Cowl will spend the months of July and August in Dorsetshire, England.

Operetta School

DONALD BRIAN, remembered by a generation now middle aged as Prince Danilo in the original American production of "The Merry Widow," has joined the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston. He will conduct a course of training in all phases of the art of acting in operetta and musical comedy. He plans frequent public performances of the classics of operetta by students.

Playhouse Festival.

The Midsummer Drama festival, now in progress at the Pasadena Festival playhouse, Pasadena, Cal., programs four Shakespearean dramas with Græco-Roman settings, "Coriolanus," "Julius Cæsar," "Antony and Cleopatra," and "Cymbeline." Because of a deep-seated desire for consistency, the westerners are even serving Ben-Hur coffee during the intermissions.

To Write Play About Prison.

Brock Pemberton has commissioned Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing prison, to write an original play based on life within the prison walls. Warden Lawes is now at work, with Jonathan Finn collaborating, and the play should be ready for early fall production. "Chalked Out" is its title.

Milton Berle Held Over on Chicago Bill

Famous Gagster Has New Show and Acts for Second Week of Run.

Milton Berle is enjoying a second week at the Chicago theater, and Berle fans of the neighborhood have an opportunity to see and hear the famous gagsters in a new show with new acts. In contrast to his first week's engagement, when his activities ran mostly to monologing, this second stand consists largely of what he calls a "sight" show, with several blackouts. Edna Sedgwick, Hal Mencken, James Alvin, Bert Granoff, and the Dorothy Hild dancing girls assist the comedian.

Bernice Bucans, première danseuse of "Blossom Time" for two seasons, is a member of the stage forces presenting the current bill at the State-Lake theater. "Ooh La La Paree," the title given to the show as a whole, is an hour long extravaganza featuring Roy Sedlesy, Paulette La Pierra, Jacques Alexandre, and a variety of singing and dancing ensembles.

The Marx brothers, with a show of their own using some forty-five people, move into the Palace theater next Friday. Heading the present bill at the West Randolph street show house are Dickie Moore, child movie actor, Herman Timberh, comedian, and the dance team of Ramon and Renita. Others on the Palace program include the Donatella brothers and Carmen, and the two Daveys. Also four Chicago amateurs of promise, the Novelty Trio, and Anne Buttimer.

Play Settings Simple.

An austere economy of setting will rule next season's Katharine Cornell production of "Wingless Victory." The first two acts are laid in a home in Salem, Mass., and the last on board the ship whose name is the name of the play.

Hamlet's Mother.

Guthrie McClintic has engaged Judith Anderson to star with the English actor, John Gielgud, in "Hamlet," which will be staged in October. Miss Anderson will appear as the queen.

July 23 Through 26 Are Gala Days for Ravinia Festival

Four Soloists, Conductors on Programs

Gershwin and Ansermet, Tokatyan, and Harris Add Variety to Series.

By Edward Barry.

THE Ravinia festival, which finishes its third week tonight, has so far used four conductors and no soloists whatever, unless Rudolph Ganz, who played the harpsichord parts of a Handel concerto grosso the first Sunday evening, belongs in the latter classification. Now come four gala days—next Thursday to Sunday, inclusive—during which four separate conductors will face the Chicago Symphony orchestra on the stage of the north shore pavilion and the same number of soloists add vocal and instrumental variety to the series.

Isaac Van Grove, musical director of the Ravinia festival and known here for many years as teacher and opera conductor, takes the baton Thursday for a program that will include an excerpt from Richard Hageman's "Caponsacchi." Soloist that evening is Armand Tokatyan, a Ravinia tenor favorite of predepression days and a popular member of the roster of both the Chicago City Opera company and New York's Metropolitan.

Mr. Tokatyan has chosen two of Puccini's most attractive airs for his return to old Ravinia. One of them is Rudolph's solicitous "Che Gelida Manina," which introduces the heady love music of "La Bohême's" first act; the other, "E Lucevan le Stelle," from "La Tosca." Tokatyan sang Rudolph with our opera company only last winter. Some of his other rôles, in case you have forgotten, were the prince in "Turandot" and Don José in "Carmen."

Ernest Ansermet to Lead Orchestra Friday Night.

Ernest Ansermet, who opened the 1936 Ravinia festival on July 3, stops over in Chicago on his journey from the west coast back to his native Switzerland to lead the orchestra Friday night through a program whose major features will be the Franck Symphony and the Chopin E-minor Concerto. Soloist in the latter work is Tomford Harris, an admirable Chicago pianist.

As far as general public interest is concerned the climax of the season comes Saturday evening when George Gershwin appears as pianist and conductor in a program made up exclusively of his own works. This devilishly clever New Yorker, who has wooed highbrow and lowbrow so successfully that the distinction between "classical" and "popular" music is now more absurd than ever, schedules excerpts from the folk opera "Porgy and Bess" to close an evening that promises "An American in Paris" and a Broadway medley as its other orchestral items. Mr. Gershwin will play the solo parts of the Concerto in F and "Rhapsody in Blue," with William Daly directing.

Henry Weber, first American to conduct opera in Italy and widely known now for his work with the Chicago Civic and Chicago City Opera companies, is slated for the Ravinia podium Sunday afternoon. He will have the assistance of Marian Claire [Mrs. Weber] as soloist. Miss Claire was the Liu of last winter's "Turandot," and sang Sophia in the two performances of "Rosenkavalier."

Grant Park Completes Third Week of Series.

Chicago's other major summer music project—the series of free Grant park concerts by famous orchestras and bands—completes its third week this coming Tuesday night. The audiences are counted each evening by the tens of thousands, and the excellent attendance is not due entirely to the attraction which the music exerts. During the late lamented heat wave a great many citizens discovered that the wide open spaces near the lake front offer the town's best chance for a breeze.

Variety of Conductors and Soloists Is Most Generous.

There is much to be said, too, for the beauty of the setting. If we except those communities to which a kindly nature has bequeathed a mountain girdled amphitheater, it is fairly safe to claim that there is no more spectacular open air arena in the world. From a seat far back in the huge audience area an observant patron may enjoy several extra attractions at no increase in the nonexistent admission price—such things as the slow darkening of the night over the fantastic city; the towers keeping watch and ward to the north, with their square and pyramidal tops emitting vaporous smoke in the best Carthaginian manner; the lonely fringe of trees that marks the extreme eastward thrust of this man made land; the emptiness beyond them, with its fetching suggestion of an infinity of water and sky.

But even if the concerts were held at the bottom of a coal mine they would pull a considerable crowd down to hear them. The Chicago park district and the Chicago Federation of Musicians are going to impressive lengths to satisfy their nonpaying customers, and provide a bewildering variety of conductors and soloists.

The fact that the same organization may play twice in a week is no guarantee that the baton will be in the hands of the same man both times, nor that the soloist gets an immediate return engagement. Change of bill is the management's formula for keeping interest high through all the long season.

You will notice in the programs printed elsewhere on this page that Clarence Evans, principal viola of the Chicago Symphony, is to conduct the orchestra next Wednesday. And a week later Robert Sanders, the young Chicago composer, takes the baton.

Music Neither Too Light Nor Too Sophisticated.

Isaac Van Grove directs the opera orchestra at Grant park tonight, with Frank Laird Waller facing the same group on Friday. Notice the soloists on the week's schedule, too—their variety and number.

The people who plan the actual programs for the Grant park concerts are up against the tradition that summer music must be light in character. But if it is too light the interest of the more sophisticated of their potential patrons will suffer. The only solution lies in a compromise. That such a compromise has been made is obvious even from a most careless glance through the programs to date. The "Eroica" symphony and "The Music Goes Round and Around" both have had a break. So have "Die Walküre" and "Moonlight and Roses."

There are always enough novelties, usually falling somewhere between these extremes, to keep even the most faithful of regular patrons more or less agog. Special mention should be made of two of them slated for the near future. The festival rhapsody "Collegiana," by the Chicago composer and educator Wesley La Violette, is to be played Tuesday night by the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra. Next Sunday comes "The Lindbergh Flight to Paris," a heroic poem by another Chicagoan, Radie Britain.

Besides offering good programs in an impressive setting, the Grant park series attracts people by its utter informality. You may smoke, eat, knit, sleep, work puzzles, or make love, and, if none of these pastimes disturbs your neighbors unduly, no remonstrating usher will turn up. It is respectfully suggested, however, that such occupations cease during the performance of the Brahms Second Symphony and kindred works, or some subtle entrance of the woodwinds will almost inevitably be lost.

"THE BRIDE WALKS OUT"

A lether jacket and a kitchen apron seem to be two ingredients that go into the making of happiness—if one's to judge by the expressions on these faces. Barbara Stanwyck and Gene Raymond, you know. They look like this in "The Bride Walks Out." Film's at the Palace.

Star Returns

MARGARET SULLAVAN will play the leading feminine rôle of the Kaufman-Ferber "Stage Door" next fall. Her last Broadway appearance before going to Hollywood was in "Dinner at Eight," by the same authors, presented by the same manager, Sam H. Harris, at the same theater, the Music Box, where "Stage Door" is due on Oct. 3.

Company to Sing 'Traviata' at Navy Pier

Performance Saturday, 'Rusticana,' 'Pagliacci' on Following Night.

The Chicago Opera company, a touring group, not to be confused with the resident Chicago City Opera company, announces a performance of "La Traviata" next Saturday evening in the Navy pier auditorium. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" will be paired the following night. Both of these events are under the auspices of the Polish Falken Society of Chicago. The schedule for the following week-end, Aug. 1 and 2, is "Rigoletto" and "Carmen," with the Chicago Home for Convalescent Women and Children receiving a share of the proceeds. Casts for these performances are not yet at hand.

Claude Lapham, an authority on Japanese music, and a pioneer in the efforts to adapt something of its peculiar idiom to the demands of accepted western forms, will present a Japanese musical at International house this coming Tuesday night. An accomplished pianist himself, Mr. Lapham is enlisting, in addition, the services of Maria Ecker, soprano; Olga Dane, contralto; Charlotte Chambers, violinist, and Paul Pence, baritone.

The program will feature compositions of this unique latter day Loti, who, with only European blood in his veins, became so enamored of the far east that he attempted to transplant some of its beauties to the garden of western art. Included are excerpts from the opera "Sakura," the Japanese concerto for piano, and "Mihara Yama," a tone poem based on Nippon's suicide volcano. The last two works have recently been released in record form, the concerto in Victor's Musical Masterpiece series.

The program at International house is open to the public at reasonable admission prices.

The American Conservatory of Music continues its Wednesday afternoon recitals by distinguished soloists. The artists this week are Marie Zendt, soprano, and Edward Collins, pianist. The scene is Kimball hall. Mr. Collins will include his own Variations on an Irish Air.

Two notes on the out-of-town doings of musicians well known in Chicago.

Coe Glade sings "Mignon" at the Cincinnati summer opera three days this week. Appearing with her in the cast are other names familiar to local opera goers—Norman Cordon, Charlotte Bruno, Lodovico Oliviero.

Alfred Wallenstein, formerly principal cello of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will conduct the Washington Symphony orchestra tonight in the first of the river front Watergate concerts. Mr. Wallenstein recently resigned from his executive and musical posts with the New York Philharmonic orchestra to devote his time to conducting and to radio work.

Playgoing Poll

THE THEATER GUILD'S out-of-town subscribers, answering a questionnaire sent out by the home office, have voted against revivals of former guild productions as part of the subscription season. Less than fifty votes decided the issue.

The subscribers expressed their preference for this season's six plays in the following order: "Idiot's Delight," "Call it a Day," "End of Summer," "Porgy and Bess," "The Taming of the Schrew" and "If this be Treason."

Scene Designer.

Jo Mielziner is designing the settings and costumes for Maxwell Anderson's new play, "The Wingless Victory," which Katharine Cornell will produce next winter. He has furnished the settings and costumes for four of the seven productions she has made as an actress-manager—"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Romeo and Juliet," "Flowers of the Forest," and "St. Joan."

Lillian Gish to Be Ophelia.

They say that Lillian Gish is to play Ophelia in a production of "Hamlet" scheduled for October in New York City. John Gielgud is slated for the name part and Judith Anderson takes the part of the queen. Miss Gish, long famous in the silent films, has already made several stage appearances, notably in "Camille" and "Uncle Vanya."

Haakon for Revue

THE Messrs. Shubert have engaged Paul Haakon as the dance star of a new revue they will produce next fall. The young dancer, seen in Chicago this season in "At Home Abroad" and also at the Palace theater, will shares honors in the production with Beatrice Lillie and Bert Lanr.

Arrangements have already been completed for Vincent Minelli to design the settings and costumes. He is the ex-Chicagoan whose designs for "At Home Abroad" and the latest "Follies" have added to his reputation. George Gershwin may write the music.

D'Oyly Cartes Return.

The D'Oyly Carte troupe of Gilbert and Sullivan players is due in New York in August, again under the auspices of Martin Beck.

Prize Winners

ALFRED KREYMBORG'S play, "Commencement," has been awarded the 1936 prize in the Charles H. Sergel full length play contest administered by the University of Chicago. The award is the second made since the contest was inaugurated.

Two hundred and fifteen plays were submitted in this year's competition. The judges were Frank Hurburt O'Hara, of the University of Chicago; Roger L. Sergel, of the Dramatic Publishing company, and Lloyd Lewis, drama critic. Kreymborg's play deals with life in a girl's preparatory school.

The Sergel prize was established "to stimulate the writing, production, and publication of new American plays and thus to encourage both new and established playwrights in creating local drama." The competition is in memory of Charles Hubbard Sergel, Chicago publisher, and was established by the will of his widow.

Only full length, original plays, hitherto unproduced and unpublished, are eligible.

Cornell's Travels

WHEN Katharine Cornell made her first appearance in Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" in the Biltmore theater in Los Angeles on June 25, the audience contained many film stars. Several players who have been associated with Miss Cornell on the stage, notably Brian Aherne and Basil Rathbone, were present.

Among the celebrities at the première were Marlene Dietrich, Norma Shearer, Tallulah Bankhead, Merle Oberon, Mary Pickford, Billie Burke, Gloria Swanson, Alice Joyce, Jean Muir, Clark Gable, John Barrymore, Harold Lloyd, Conrad Nagel, and Cecil DeMille.

Honorary Degree.

Norman Bel Geddes, producer of "Dead End," received the degree of L. L. D. from Adrian college, Adrian, Mich., on June 15. Geddes was born in Adrian and left there at the age of 4. His return, to receive the degree, was his first visit in thirty-nine years.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Again Government Sleuth tracks Public Enemy to lair and brings the bacon home to Uncle Sam.

"Special Investigator" is like most of its kind—with a difference. The man hunt covers a lot of area, and the romance between the S. I. and the gangster's good girl sister is worked out along unusual lines.

The Mr. Fenwick of the story had been a criminal attorney of the Perry Mason brand [by the way, story's by Mason's creator, Erle Stanley Gardner] until his young brother, a government operator, is killed by a racketeer. THAT convinces Fenwick that crime doesn't pay even a smart mouthpiece. So—working under cover for Uncle Sam, he gets after Gangster Selton, who's stolen a half million in gold bullion from the United States.

Crook Plans to Do Dirt to Unsuspecting Souls.

The crook has taken the gold to Nevada, where he's bought an abandoned gold mine. His idea is to melt down the bullion and sell it to suckers as newly mined deposit. . . .

He and his mob are well on the job [poem] when Fenwick arrives at a nearby town, and, well alibied, establishes a law office. . . .

Selton, wounded in a police chase, directs operations from his bed of pain. . . .

And now arrives Virginia Selton, who's learned that her brother is ill. . . . And so and so—to a really exciting climax.

Richard Dix Convincing as Inspector Fenwick.

Richard Dix invests Fenwick with brains, suavity, and alertness in emergency. J. Carrol Naish is a convincingly unpleasant P. E. Ray Mayer [I think it's Ray Mayer—they call him Jim in the picture, but the only cast name that COULD fit him is Dutchman] is swell! He plays Selton's manager. Here's a fellow who knows how to be plenty tough, and the other way, too, when necessity calls. All around good actor. Spencer Tracy technique.

I can't care much for Margaret Callahan, but she certainly is sincere and a hard worker.

Good direction!

If you're not fed up on G-Man numbers this new bite will probably prove appetizing.

See you tomorrow.

Hollywood Happenings

Dick Arlen has been the victim of promoters during his two months' absence in England. Seems that some enterprising neighborhood kid, with nothing but a ladder as capital, was selling swims in Arlen's pool at 10 cents a swim by the simple expedient of applying the ladder to the garden wall. The gardeners wrote Dick asking for orders. He wired, "Ban the promoter, but let the other kids in. If he reforms, let him swim, too." Arlen is making "The Great Barrier" for British Gaumont and will not be back until early fall.

An old time foursome is going about together again, now that Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames are reconciled. Lupe and her Johnny and the Cabots go about a great deal, their latest being a fishing cruise off the coast of Mexico on which, reports say, Adrienne burned all the fish the boys caught when she tried to fry them.

Two interesting "ex's" were viewed at the Cocoanut Grove this week when local society turned out with the film crowd to welcome Eddie Duchin and his orchestra. They were Hal Rosson, Jean Harlow's former husband, with Yvonne Crellin, his present romance, and Rhea Gable, wife of Clark Gable, with Alec Buckman. Allan Jones and his fiancée, Irene Hervey, were there. So were Jack Oakie and his wife, and many other couples from the Hollywood married set.

Arline Judge and Wesley Ruggles are adding emphasis to their recent reconciliation by giving a buffet supper for a group of friends at their home. . . . Despite persistent rumors of a waning romance, Herbert Marshall and Gloria Swanson were seen at the Biltmore bowl. . . . Lew Ayres is devoting himself to Mary Carlisle these days.

Pat O'Malley got a last minute break in a rôle with Joe E. Brown in "Polo Joe."

DANCING STAR TWINKLES AT HARRY'S

Swarthout Admirer Asks for Better Roles for Star.

Dear Miss Tinée: I usually am guided by your reviews of pictures, and until today have found your opinions similar to mine. I was curious to know what you thought of "Give Us This Night." I saw the picture, and, I am sorry to say, it impressed me far from favorably. However, I think that you are somewhat prejudiced against Kiepura.

The story is trite. In fact, it is no better than the foreign productions which I have seen. That was a disappointment. I can't understand why Paramount, after obtaining Kiepura for their film, cast him in such a picture. True, he is no Barrymore as far as acting is concerned, but he has a glorious voice. After all, when one goes to see an opera singer, is it not chiefly to hear his voice? Is not acting of secondary importance?

The first mistake was to cast him as an Italian. He looks so totally Polish. As for the supporting cast, well, the mass scenes were good. Acting honors go to Alan Mowbray. Of course, his rôle offered an opportunity for Mr. Mowbray to display his ability. What do you think could have been done with Kiepura's part? It required little more than singing.

As for Miss Swarthout, I was sadly disappointed in her. I like her voice immensely and seldom miss an occasion to hear her on the air. Naturally I was eagerly awaiting her appearance on the screen. Not having seen "Rose of the Rancho," I was doubly anxious to see "Give Us This Night." Perhaps I expected too much; I don't know. However, there was a great deal of room for improvement in her acting. I had no idea she was such a poor actress. She delivered her lines like an amateur in a high school play. And the camera was unkind to her, was it not? I am looking forward to seeing Miss Swarthout in a rôle offering her better possibilities, better photography, and, most essential, a better director. Sincerely yours,

MARILYNN URBAN.

P. S.—Thank you for giving the "pudgy little tenor" some recognition of a good voice.

Movie Fan Hopes for Better Plays for Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Last night we saw "The Painted Veil." Although it is an old picture and one we had seen twice before, the Garbo spell held us entranced through a tedious drama. Maugham's story was altered for the screen, of course, but whoever directed the play did a hasty job of it.

Garbo's perennial critics are chiefly women who, recognizing her superiority, are too small to admit it, and men with an inferiority complex, who subconsciously fear her power. The rest of us love and admire her greatness, and when she appears in a new play we surrender to all the glamor and romance that she personifies.

It is too bad that the producers don't give her a really good play. Although the Garbo personality has carried many a mediocre film, she certainly deserves at least as good stories as some other stars have been getting.

Here's hoping for finer plays and happier days for our beloved Greta. And perhaps she will star with Ramon Novarro again. That should go over well!

Truly yours, C. C.

Editor's note: Greta and Ramon! A thought!

Lloyd George Poison Plot Uncovered by Scotland Yard

Fantastic Death Scheme Based on Blowgun

By SIR BASIL THOMSON

ONE morning in January, 1917, a military colonel who had been appointed intelligence officer to the ministry of munitions, with the duty of keeping the ministry informed of impending strikes and sabotage, walked into my room at Scotland Yard and proceeded to unfold a fantastic story.

He told me that he had an informant in his pay who had become intimate with a family in one of the midland towns, and had been taken into the secret of a plot to assassinate the prime minister, Lloyd George, in such a way that the murder would never be detected. He said that the family consisted of a Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, a widow, and her two daughters, of whom the elder, Winnie, was married to a druggist, A. E. Mason, in Southampton, and the younger, Hettie, was a school teacher and lived with her. [It later developed that the plan also included assassination of Arthur Henderson, labor member of the war council.]

The three women were militant suffragettes and were constitutionally opposed to any government; the married daughter had brought her druggist husband to her way of thinking, but the mother was the arch instigator, and it was she who had confided details of their plot to my friend's agent.

They had read in the newspapers that it was Lloyd George's habit to play golf on the Walton Heath course on Saturday afternoons. They understood that at various points on the course there were bushes large enough to conceal a stooping man. The druggist son-in-law knew of a rare South American poison, curare, in which the natives were wont to steep their arrows to poison them.

[Curare is a black, resinoid extract which, when introduced into the blood, paralyzes the motor nerves, and produces death by paralysis of the respiration.]

All that was required was a bottle of this poison. Mrs. Wheeldon and her school teacher daughter would do the rest at home. A little dart soaked in the poison would be discharged from a blowpipe at Lloyd George as he passed the assassin's lurking place; the dart would pass through his clothing, and he would be conscious only of a slight prick, less painful than a sting from a bee.

≋

He would suffer no pain and would be able to continue his game, but gradually he would be overcome with lassitude and would decide to be driven home to rest. Once safely at home, he would wish to go to bed, and would quickly fall into a sleep from which there would be no waking. The doctor would be called in to examine the body and would certify that the cause of death was an apoplectic seizure in the night; no one would think of looking for a wound.

I asked the colonel to give me the name of his informant, or, if he preferred, to bring him to see me. He replied that he had already suggested this to the man, but that when he heard my name he showed great unwillingness to come and made a condition that his name should not be disclosed.

That set me thinking; either the agent was a person with a criminal history, or he had invented the whole story to get money and credit from his employer. But I did not confide my misgivings to the colonel; on the contrary, I proceeded to take down the names and addresses of the persons concerned as if I believed in this fantastic plot. There was a very simple way of putting the story to the test. According to this self-effacing agent, letters were constantly passing between the druggist and his mother-in-law, who was expecting to receive a registered parcel from Southampton containing a bottle of curare.

In those war days there were facilities for stopping and examining suspected letters in the general postoffice and of photographing any of them before they reached the addressees. All that was required to legalize the proceeding was a warant signed by a secretary of state. This warant I obtained, leaving the colonel to obtain from his agent any further information about the proposed date for the outrage at Walton Heath.

I confess that I was astonished next day to receive from the postoffice a photograph of a letter from Mrs. Wheeldon to her son-in-law, couched in violent language, in which the prime minister was referred to in opprobrious terms such as do not usually fall from the pen of a self-respecting woman, and there was a veiled reference to an expected parcel.

There was therefore some truth in the agent's story, but I had an uneasy feeling that he himself might have acted as what the French call an agent provocateur by putting the idea into the woman's head, or, if the idea was already there, by offering to act as the dart thrower.

≋

Still, we had now documentary evidence of the plot, and it was no longer possible to treat it with contempt, since, if the curare could not be obtained, a pistol might be used instead. In those days Mr. Lloyd George was considered the keystone of the arch in the coming peace conference, and, quite apart from the question of a plot to murder, his life was at that moment of inestimable value to the allies.

I saw the colonel again and told him that whether his agent liked it or not he would have to come to London to be at hand if required.

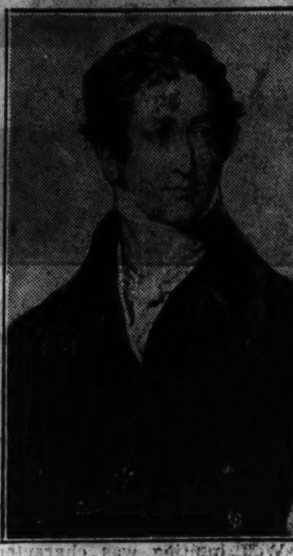
A Bit of the Background of Scotland Yard

THIS running sketch of Scotland Yard, taken from "The Story of Scotland Yard," by Sir Basil Thomson, former head of the Yard, last told of the appointment in 1822 of Sir Robert Peel as home secretary.

- He gave his immediate attention to police needs. He appointed a committee under his own chairmanship to inquire into the situation. In spite of his advocacy of a police force directly controled by the government, the committee reported that such a police system would not square with the Englishman's traditional right to "perfect freedom of action," etc.

- Peel was disappointed. However, during his first term he worked hard to spread the idea that the best preventive of crime was certainty of punishment, not severity. During the next few years crime became worse. Riots occurred frequently. Convicts in prison mutinied, especially against the treadmill. Incidentally, treadmills were used in British prisons as late as 1896.



Sir Robert Peel, founder of London police.

- In his second term Home Secretary Peel found more sympathy for his move to organize a police department. He appointed a second committee. This committee saw his way; it recommended establishment of a police office under the home secretary, with a general control over all the police establishments of London.

- To the critics who wailed that such police meant an infringement of their liberty Peel replied in a letter to the duke of Wellington that his intention was to "teach people that liberty does not consist in having your house robbed by organized gangs of thieves."

- On April 15, 1829, Peel introduced his bill for the establishment of the metropolitan police. He cited crime records. He showed that committals by magistrates in London during 1828 were 1 in 378 per population, as against 1 in 822 for the rest of England and Wales. He showed that in seven years commitments had increased 41 per cent, while the population had grown only 15.5 per cent.

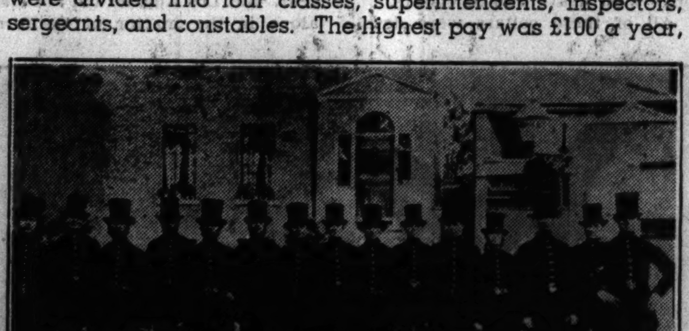
- Some newspapers favored Peel's bill; some condemned it. The London Times and the London Morning Post agreed a change in police affairs was necessary. The London Standard took the other view. The new police would be nothing but spies. Newspaper subscribers did their full share in filling "Vox Pop" departments on the subject.

- The metropolitan police bill met considerable opposition in parliament, but was passed on May 26, 1829. The house of lords approved it on June 6.

- Peel's next task was to select competent men to head and to man the organization. He made happy choices, Col. Charles Rowan and Richard Mayne. Rowan (later Sir Charles) had fought under Wellington at Waterloo and after his retirement had become a police magistrate in Ireland. There Peel first met him. Mayne was a young lawyer, the son of an Irish judge. Peel gave both men commissionerships, with equal powers. Rowan was given charge of discipline, Mayne of rules and instructions. Mayne's first instructions, Sir Basil says, still stand good. They were:

- "The primary object of an efficient police is the prevention of crime, the next that of detection and punishment. The protection of life and property, the preservation of public tranquillity, and the absence of crime will alone prove whether those efforts have been successful and whether the objects for which the police were appointed have been obtained."

- By Aug. 12, 1829, some 800 men had been recruited. They were divided into four classes, superintendents, inspectors, sergeants, and constables. The highest pay was £100 a year, the lowest 3 shillings a day. An office for examining prisoners was taken in Great Scotland Yard, this being the specific move that gave Scotland Yard its now famous name.



How first London police were uniformed in 1829.

- Public opinion strongly opposed the police; the public assumed that they not only would be spies but, being under government control, would also be soldiery. To meet part of this feeling Peel ordered a simple nonmilitary uniform for the men—a blue coat, trousers, and top hat. At first the police were divided into five divisions of eight sections each, and each section into eight beats, or patrols. Each division had a station. It is interesting to note that the government did not and even yet has not put its police into the city of London proper. That entity still retains its own police system, but works in harmony with Scotland Yard.

- During the next year the new police had many opportunities to prove their worth. They slipped several times and drew much censure, but they succeeded more often. They gave notable account of themselves during a general riot. The feelings of the rioters were plainly shown in their shouts: "Down with police!" "Down with the raw lobsters!" "No Peel!" "No Wellington!" "Down with Peel's gang!" The police suppressed the riots, winning for themselves a new respect.

- This did not, however, mean a complete conciliation. For instance, when the king announced his determination to suppress crime, outrage, and sedition, inflammatory placards appeared everywhere stating: "Liberty or death! Englishmen! Britons! The time has at length arrived . . . Six thousand cutlasses have been removed from the Tower for the use of PEEL'S BLOODY GANG. Remember the cursed speech from the throne! These damned police are now ready to be armed. Englishmen, will you put up with this?"

- It seems, however, that the real objection to the new police lay in the expense. Therefore not only criminals but property owners were in opposition to them. With one group the objection was loot, with the other taxes.

Characteristic gesture of Lloyd George in a post-war speech. He was target of alleged conspirators.

He shook his head; he told me that among his other gifts his agent was no mean poet, with all the nervous shrinking from publicity that is supposed to go with poetic inspiration. I said that I was sorry to have to outrage his poetic feelings, but in a case of such gravity I must insist. He promised to bring the overmodest poet up to London.

≋

A day or two later the postoffice stopped a registered packet addressed from Southampton to Mrs. Wheeldon. It contained a bottle of liquid, together with a very incriminating letter from her son-in-law. The bottle, he said, contained curare, and there were instructions to handle it with the greatest care, since if any of the liquid came into contact with a sore finger, death would result. Mrs. Wheeldon's fingers were spared any risk, because the packet was detained to be used in evidence against the sender.

Next morning a conference was arranged with the director of public prosecutions. My friend, the colonel, was present, with his agent waiting downstairs. I had taken with me as a precaution the superintendent of the criminal investigation department and the superintendent of the finger print department, who had instructions to wait outside the conference room and cast a searching eye over the agent when he passed them on his way upstairs.

After listening to my statement of the case the director demanded, as I had expected he would, that the agent, on whose evidence the case rested, should be brought into the room to be questioned. The colonel agreed to go and fetch him, and we waited expectantly.

Then there walked into the room a thin, cunning looking man of about 30, with long, greasy black hair. My superintendent sat up and stiffened like a setter at the scent of game. He called in the finger print expert and whispered to him; the expert hurried off. The agent showed extreme nervousness when he saw the maneuver, but he replied to all our questions readily enough.

There was a knock on the door; the superintendent opened it a few inches and received from an unseen hand two cards, each bearing a photograph. He passed them to me. Both photographs were speaking portraits of the long haired poet, but the names on each differed, and neither of them was "Gordon"—that given by the agent to the colonel.

We had to use the man; there was no alternative. We could only observe whether he would come with credit through his cross-examination.

Sir Basil, in concluding his story, says that the suspects were tried on charges of conspiracy to murder, and three of them were convicted. He remarks that the bottle of curare, the mysterious South American poison, now reposes in the crime museum at Scotland Yard.

Newspapers contained copious accounts of the trial, held in March, 1917, the stories often competing with war news for space. The records show that Mrs. Wheeldon was 50 years old; Hettie, 27; Mrs. Winnie Mason, 30, and Mason, 24.

≋

Tried before Justice Low, in Old Bailey, the defendants all denied any intention to assassinate Lloyd George or Mr. Henderson. Mrs. Mason testified that the letter in which her mother asked for poison said that it was for a dog. She left her husband, Mason, to attend the matter, she said. Miss Hettie Wheeldon swore she knew nothing about the poison. Mrs. Wheeldon testified that any use she might have had for poison would have been for dogs. Justice Low inquired whether the poison could not have been employed to kill the premier and Mr. Henderson.

"I never wished to take anybody's life, or to have anybody's blood on my conscience," replied Mrs. Wheeldon. "That is why I objected to the army taking conscientious objectors."

Mrs. Wheeldon admitted that she had often expressed the hope that the premier and Mr. Henderson would soon be dead. At the moment of this expression, she said, it represented her wishes. She indicated that she was opposed to the slaughter of millions of men.

During the trial Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffrage leader, was permitted to testify to controvert a statement alleged to have been made by Mrs. Wheeldon. This alleged statement charged that Mrs. Pankhurst had spent $15,000 in an attempt to poison Lloyd George by driving a poisoned nail into his boot. Mrs. Pankhurst said this statement was entirely false.

"The Women's Social and Political union [suffragettes] regards the premier's life as of the greatest value in the present grave crisis," said Mrs. Pankhurst. "The union's members would, if necessary, take great risks themselves to protect him from danger."

On March 10, 1917, the jury returned a verdict after deliberating 20 minutes. According to newspaper accounts, Mrs. Wheeldon, Mrs. Winnie Mason, and Mason were found guilty. Hettie was acquitted. Mrs. Wheeldon was convicted on all counts, conspiring and soliciting to murder by poison. Mr. and Mrs. Mason were convicted only of conspiracy. The jury recommended mercy for them because of their youth.

Judge Low sentenced Mrs. Wheeldon to ten years penal servitude, telling her that he "could imagine no worse crime than the one with which she was charged."

Mason drew a seven year sentence. The judge remarked that but for the jury's recommendation of mercy, he would have given him a ten year sentence also. The judge ordered Mrs. Mason to prison for five years. "No doubt her position was largely due to the wickedness of her mother," he observed.

Mrs. Wheeldon, the central figure in the case, served only a few months of the ten-year sentence and was released because of ill health. She died in Derby, England, in 1919.

FAVORITE POEMS

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW, one of the most famous of American poets, was born in Portland, Me., Feb. 27, 1807. He was graduated from Bowdoin college and later taught there. In 1836 he became an instructor in Harvard university. He traveled and studied much in Europe, and following his death, March 24, 1882, a memorial to him was unveiled in Westminster abbey. His poems "Hiawatha" and "Evangeline" are perhaps best known. Another is "Excelsior."

EXCELSIOR

The shades of night were falling fast
As through an Alpine village passed
A youth who bore 'mid snow and ice
A banner with the strange device,
Excelsior!

His brow was sad; his eye beneath
Flashed like a falchion from its sheath,
And like a silver clarion rung
The accents of that unknown tongue,
Excelsior!

In happy homes he saw the light
Of household fires gleam warm and bright;
Above, the spectral glaciers shone,
And from his lips escaped a groan,
Excelsior!

"Try not the pass!" the old man said;
"Dark lowers the tempest overhead,
The roaring torrent is deep and wide!"
And loud that clarion voice replied,
Excelsior!

"O, stay," the maiden said, "and rest
Thy weary head upon this breast!"
A tear stood in his bright blue eye,
But still he answered with a sigh,
Excelsior!

"Beware the pine tree's withered branch!
Beware the awful avalanche!"
This was the peasant's last good night;
A voice replied far up the height,
Excelsior!

At break of day, as heavenward
The pious monks of St. Bernard
Uttered the oft-repeated prayer,
A voice cried through the startled air,
Excelsior!

A traveler, by the faithful hound,
Half buried in the snow was found,
Still grasping in his hand of ice
That banner with the strange device,
Excelsior!

There in the twilight cold and gray,
Lifeless, but beautiful, he lay,
And from the sky serene and far
A voice fell like a falling star,
Excelsior!

The Graphic Laboratory of Popular Science

Gyroscope Aids Planes and Ships

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

(Acme photo.)

Cross section diagram of the liner Conte di Savoia, showing three-unit gyroscope designed to keep ship on an even keel in rough weather.

LIKE the federal reserve system or the constitution, the gyroscope is something that plays a considerable part in our lives. When we were younger we made use of its principle every time we spun tops or skipped a flat rock on water. Its simplicity of application is shown by the fact that the only mechanical invention of that most primitive of humans, the Australian bushman, was a modified gyroscope, the boomerang.

Yet in spite of its familiarity there are many misconceptions of its properties. Many people think of it, when they think of it at all, as a strange and wondrous mechanism which has the property of remaining fixed in space, and is quite beyond the ability of ordinary mortals to understand. But there is really nothing very remarkable in it. Its properties are the familiar ones shown by all forms of matter.

Gyroscopic action is shown by anything that spins on an axis. This class can include everything solid, including the earth itself. The usual laboratory gyroscope is simply matter molded into such a form as to accentuate these properties. It consists of a heavy metal disk fixed rigidly on an axle, which in turn is mounted in three movable rings in such a fashion that it can move freely in all directions. [Figure 1.]

Suppose that we start the wheel spinning and then pick the thing up by its base and carry it around the room with us. No matter which way we turn, the axle keeps pointing in the same direction it pointed when we started it spinning. It looks almost miraculous. But it ceases to be particularly remarkable when we consider that it would do the same when not spinning, provided that it be perfectly lubricated. To demonstrate this, try turning the base as quickly as possible when the wheel is motionless. There is little if any detectable motion of the axis.

No one has ever disproved Sir Isaac Newton's statement that a change in the velocity of a piece of matter is always accompanied by force. This means that a motionless object never will move until a force is applied to it, and that a moving object will continue moving at the same speed and in the same direction for all eternity unless a force in its direction of motion speeds it up, or an opposing force slows it down, or a lateral force swings it to one side. Moreover, the change in speed that takes place is proportional to both the weight of the body and the applied force.

Thus a pitcher applies force to a baseball, causing it to move toward the plate. The catcher applies force in the opposite direction through his mitt, stopping the ball, and then applies still more reverse force, causing it to return to the pitcher.

Why, then, does not a well driven golf ball continue moving forever? Because after leaving the club it is still being acted on by two forces: that of air resistance, which tends to slow its forward motion, and that of gravity, which starts it moving to earth. If we could only drive it from a tee located beyond the stars the ball would keep moving in a straight line at constant speed to the very limits of space.

⁂

So remember this, that force and change of velocity always accompany each other. If we hold a gyroscope and let go of it the force of gravity acts on all of the ultimate particles of it, whether it is spinning or not, and causes them to pick up speed at the same rate. In other words, the spin has no effect on the motion of the gyroscope as a whole.

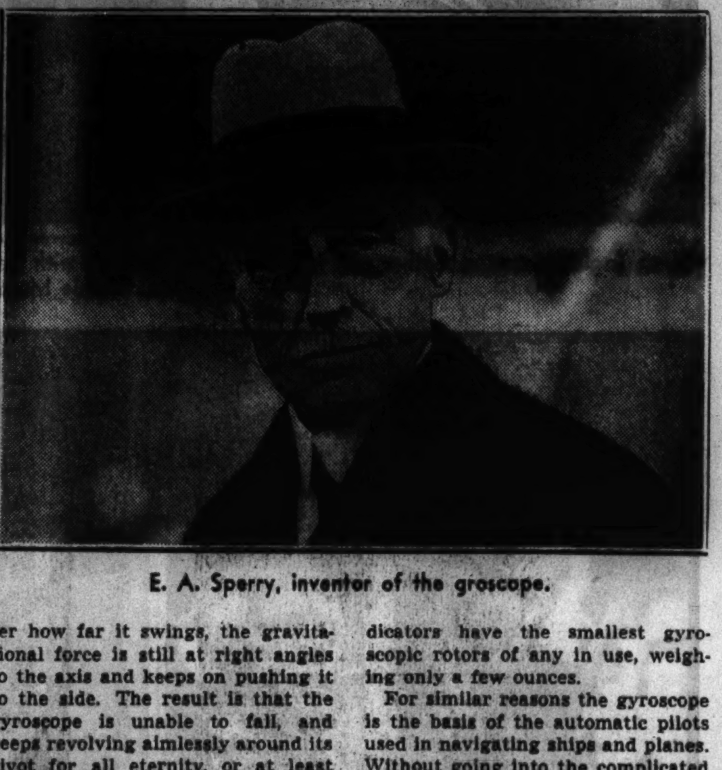
The spin has an influence only on forces tending to change the direction of its axis. Suppose that we push against the upper end of a vertical spinning gyroscope. We feel an equally strong force opposing us and the gyroscope turns over on its side; not, however, in the direction of the applied force but at right angles to it. Thus if we try to push the upper end of the vertical axis away from us, the axis rotates instead either to the right or to the left, depending on the direction of spin. When the gyroscope is subjected to forces tending to rotate its axis it moves directly to a position in which the forces are in the direction of its spin. [Figure 2.]

Why does it do this? Figure 3 represents a gyroscope when viewed along its axis. A force tending to rotate this axis distributes itself so that there is a force toward us at A, an equal one away from us at C, and no forces at all at B and D. The two forces are not concentrated at A and C, but are spread out over their respective half-circles in such a way that their intensities decline to zero the closer they are to the line B-D.

When the wheel is not spinning these forces behave quite normally. A picks up speed toward us, C starts moving away from us, while B and D do not move at all. The result is that the wheel rotates around the B-D line.

Now imagine the wheel to be spinning rapidly in the direction shown. As a particular molecule of it moves from A to B it is subjected to forces toward us and picks up speed in this direction. From B to C it encounters opposing forces which slow it down to zero by the time it reaches C. These opposing forces continue until it reaches D, causing it to pick up speed away from us until it reaches that point. Then the forces toward us slow down this backward motion to zero by the time it gets to A again.

The result of all this is that a force toward us at A and one away from us at C cause the spinning disc to move toward us at B and away from us at D. This means that the disc rotates around the A-C line. This odd effect is called precession. Now, if the wheel is spinning very rapidly each particle of the wheel moves so quickly that it does not have time to pick up much speed from A to B or from C to D. Consequently the precession is quite small in comparison to the force applied.



E. A. Sperry, inventor of the groscope.

Whence comes the force that seems to oppose our efforts to push over the axis? Remember that during each half revolution we are giving a particle velocity in a certain direction, and during the next one we are overcoming this velocity. Thus the force that resists us is the force that we were applying a half revolution before. We can no more push the axis over than we can lift ourselves by our own bootstraps, because in each case we are fighting our own strength.

There is an interesting form of precession that seems to defy gravitation. One end of a gyroscope's axis is attached by means of a pivot to the top of a vertical rod. [Figure 4.] The gyroscope is now held with its axis horizontal and started spinning. Gravity tends to swing it downward so that its axis is vertical, but the axis cannot move in the direction of the applied force. Instead it swings to one side, with its axis still horizontal. But no matter how far it swings, the gravitational force is still at right angles to the axis and keeps on pushing it to the side. The result is that the gyroscope is unable to fall, and keeps revolving aimlessly around its pivot for all eternity, or at least until it stops spinning.

The essential thing that distinguishes the gyroscope from all other instruments is the fact that the direction of its axis is capable of remaining fixed with reference, not to its immediate surroundings or even to the earth, but to space itself. Because of this unique property it has been used for a number of widely differing purposes.

It is used as a spirit level for moving objects. The spirit level is an excellent device for detecting deviations from the horizontal of bodies fixed in one place or moving in a straight line. But when a moving body turns, the centrifugal force affects it. A spirit level on an airplane would show the net effect of both bank and turn and would be useless in indicating the absolute value of either.

A freely moving gyroscope is unaffected by either gravity or centrifugal force and for this reason is used to show the amount of tilt in a moving body. It is worth mentioning that a high rate of spin and a low mass are necessary to cut precession to a negligible amount, and consequently airplane bank indicators have the smallest gyroscopic rotors of any in use, weighing only a few ounces.

For similar reasons the gyroscope is the basis of the automatic pilots used in navigating ships and planes. Without going into the complicated details of such mechanisms, it is sufficient to say that the gyroscope is set spinning when the ship is on the right course. Then if it should deviate from this course the resisting force of the gyroscope operates the rudder controls so as to restore the ship to its original direction.

The magnetic compass was satisfactory enough for the old-time wooden ships, but the magnetic disturbances engendered by the steel hulls and electric generators of modern boats have made its use less reliable. About 25 years ago E. A. Sperry solved this trouble by inventing a compass based upon the gyroscope instead of the magnet.

⁂

While the gyroscope's axis is fixed in space, the earth's surface is not, because of its rotation. In fact, the only things that we can consider as absolutely fixed in space are the stars. Therefore, if we point a gyroscope at a star and keep it spinning, the axis will seem to follow the star's daily circuit of the sky. Actually, of course, it is neither the star nor the direction of the axis that is moving, but the earth's surface.

If we point the instrument at the North Star, which has very little apparent motion, the axis likewise remains fixed. It is preferable, however, to have a compass that points to the northern horizon rather than part way up in the northern sky. But if we point the axis horizontally due north it appears slowly to swing eastward and upward, then around a complete circle and back to its starting point 24 hours later. [Figure 5.]

This difficulty was solved by fastening a half-circle of glass tubing, with open bulbs or wells at each end and filled with a liquid, to the two poles of the axis. [Figure 6.] Then when the north end of the axis started to tilt upward the liquid began to run into the bulb at the other end. The force of this added weight causes a precession back to the original position. This motion is quite complex, but no matter what direction the axis may have pointed at first, it eventually ends up in a horizontal north and south line which it then holds without changing.

The gyroscope can be used to promote not only straight sailing but also smooth sailing. The gyroscopic stabilizer is large [perhaps a hundred tons] and slow spinning, so that part of the applied energy can be converted to precession. It is placed near the ship's center of gravity and fastened so that it can swing freely fore and aft but not from side to side.

Consequently, forces tending to roll the ship give the stabilizer a fore and aft swing, and the gyroscope resists strongly all forces tending to tilt it, and also the ship, to one side. The advantage of such a method of counteracting roll is twofold. First, the force with which the gyroscope resists lateral waves comes from the waves themselves and at any instant is practically equal to the applied force at the instant, with resulting freedom from shock and strain. Then, too, the gyroscope acts to eliminate almost completely the counterswing from such roll as does occur.

Importance of a Correct Collar

A FEW months ago a trained dog was brought up to our office so that we could see it do a few tricks. The dog looked to be a cross between a collie and a German shepherd. Whatever the breeding was, the animal had a long coat of hair.

The first thing that we noticed about the dog was the very wide, tight collar around its neck. This was a showy thing, ornamented with imitation jewels. If ever there was a good example of how one can spoil a dog's appearance by a collar wholly unsuited for it and at the same time ruin the hair around a dog's neck, this trained pet furnished the evidence. That tight, broad collar (about two inches wide) had worn away the hair until it was impossible to let the dog go without it because the bare band around its neck was so pronounced.

Just any kind of a collar will not do for any breed of dog. For example, if you own a long-coated dog it's a good idea to avoid putting a broad, flat collar on it. A wide, flat collar is sure to injure the hair. We use narrow, round lether collars for all of our dogs. Collars such as these are strong, yet so small in diameter that they make little impression on the dog's coat of hair.

Terrier owners will find available some very strong narrow collars for their dogs. They are neat, easy to handle, and just the right type for a wire-haired terrier, Sealyham, or other dog of that size. To put a wide, thick collar on a dog of that size or type is not only spoiling the dog's appearance but injuring the hair on his neck as well.

It usually is advisable to put a collar on your dog when you take him for a walk—even though you may be in an area where you do not expect to keep him on leash. The advantage of this practice comes when you may have occasion to hold him or seize him in an emergency. A frightened dog is much easier captured and held if you can grasp his collar instead of trying to get a good grip on his body.

When we go into a shop and see the wide variety of dog collars on sale we are reminded of some of the fascinating stories about the use of collars on dogs that lived centuries ago. Today you can buy narrow collars, wide ones, collars studded with brass and other metals, collars of all colors, and even some for toy breeds that look as if they were made of metal beads.

Many of the styles of collars that dogs today are wearing go back to the days when dogs were fitted with heavy collars as a protection against wild animals.

⁂

In the days before modern hunting rifles were in the hands of sportsmen many breeds of dogs were used to attack wild boars, bears, wolves, and other wild animals. Then, too, shepherds using dogs to guard their flocks of sheep found that their canine helpers frequently had to fight wolves which tried to carry off lambs. So the shepherds learned to equip their dogs with heavy spiked collars.

All of these collars were developed so that the vulnerable spot on a dog — his throat — would be well protected. Each type of hunting had its own type of collar. The one used for protection against bears was a viciously designed affair with heavy spikes, often several inches long, protruding from a sturdy metal band.

Wolf hunting was characterized by broad brass collars without spikes. Often the brass was embellished with hunting scenes and invariably carried the name and the title of the aristocrat who owned the dog. Incidentally, the aristocrats were the only ones who made a ceremony of wolf hunting.

In Switzerland even today the use of certain types of collars for certain breeds of dog still is practiced. For instance, the big Appenzeller Sennenhunde, the national drover's dog of Switzerland, wears a broad collar on which the drovers, their dogs, and the cattle are depicted.

DOG NOTES

Every signpost of the dog game points to increased interest in pure-bred dogs. From time to time we have pointed out the increased registrations with the American Kennel club, showing how many more dogs have been registered in recent years than ever before. We also have noted the increased number of dog breeds being recognized and gaining followers.

Now there is still another indication that interest in dogs is on the upgrade. In a recent statement the Kennel club showed the increase in entries in dog shows, indicating greater interest both on the part of dog owners and dog show spectators.

While the East carries off most of the honors for having the largest dog shows, the biggest gain in a single year has been shown by the Pacific coast, where Los Angeles benched 66 per cent more pure-bred dogs in 1936 than it did last year. This coast show drew a total of 1,156 dogs, according to the survey of shows for the first half of this year. But Los Angeles did not stand alone in the matter of California gains. The Oakland show, with 707 dogs, jumped 28 per cent, and the Golden State exhibit, another show, had 860 entries for an increase of 19 per cent.

The famous Morris and Essex outdoor show, held every year at Madison, N. J., which has been recognized for some time as America's leading exhibition of dogs, once more led the pace in entries with 3,751. This marked an increase of more than 18 per cent over 1935. But the Western Reserve show in Cleveland moved ahead at an even faster pace, its entry of 1,370 representing an increase of nearly 20 per cent. The leading show of the far south was the Birmingham, Ala., exhibition, where an entry of 448 dogs marked an 11 per cent rise.

The southwest, most of the middle west, the northwest, and the northeast all reported small percentages of increase in entries of pure-bred dogs in dog shows. Generally speaking, the most consistent gains were shown in the dog-minded area stretching from Boston to Baltimore. Increases from 5 to 15 per cent throughout this region maintained the game at a highly competitive level. Perhaps the most remarkable feat of the year was that of the newly organized Baltimore Country Kennel club, which drew 852 dogs to its initial exhibit.

THE QUESTION BOX

We have just bought a puppy from a pet shop, for which we paid $10. We were told that it was pedigreed, but had no papers, which were only necessary in order to enter a dog for shows.

Also it was called a Pomeranian Spitz, and we were told that this is a breed in itself. Can you tell us something about this?—H. C. W.

If your dog is of registered, pedigreed stock, papers on it should be available, because no one can keep pedigrees straight without records. These so-called papers are not merely necessary to enter a dog in a show conducted under the regulations of the American Kennel club, but they are an assurance that your dog is a pure-bred animal with known ancestry.

You have been misinformed about the "Pomeranian Spitz." There is no such recognized breed. If you have a so-called Pomeranian Spitz it must be a cross-bred, the result of crossing these two breeds. It is therefore not a pure-bred and eligible for registration.

We have read that corn bread and dried bread are good for growing puppies and dogs. The local veterinarian said this was not right and prescribed a diet for our dog. What would you suggest?—J. A. F.

Your vet is right. There is not much nourishment in dried bread. Most veterinarians will tell you that whole wheat or bran bread can be fed to a dog occasionally in order to vary the diet, but even in these cases the bread should be moistened with milk or broth.

You can get reliable advice on feeding problems by referring to "The Dog Book," the 96-page book published by The Tribune. One whole chapter is devoted to material on feeding. There is also a great deal of material on worming, grooming, and other aspects of dog care. The book can be obtained at the Tribune public service office, 1 South Dearborn street, or in the lobby of Tribune Tower. Its cost is 25 cents over the counter or 30 cents by mail.

Baseball Is a Science—No. 6 of a Series of Plays

THOUGH A HOMER WILL SCORE A BATSMAN FROM THE PLATE AND A TRIPLE OR A LONG DOUBLE WILL SCORE A RUNNER FROM FIRST, A RUNNER IS NOT SAID TO BE IN SCORING POSITION UNTIL HE REACHES SECOND.

FROM SECOND A RUNNER USUALLY CAN SCORE ON A SINGLE, AND FOR THAT REASON EVERY EFFORT IS MADE TO HOLD A RUNNER TO ONE BASE ON A HIT. WITH THIS IN MIND, THE CUT-OFF PLAY WAS EVOLVED.

SUPPOSE THERE IS A RUNNER ON SECOND AND A RUNNER ON FIRST AND THE BATTER SINGLES SHARPLY TO RIGHT ①

THE FIRST CONCERN OF THE RIGHT FIELDER IS TO THROW THE RUNNER OUT AT HOME. HE MUST FIGURE HIS CHANCES, BASED ON THE SPEED WITH WHICH HE GETS THE BALL, THE START THE RUNNER HAS IN LEAVING SECOND, AND THE ABILITY OF THE RUNNER AS A SPEEDSTER.

IF THE RIGHT FIELDER THROWS TO THE CATCHER ON THE FLY HE MAY OR MAY NOT RETIRE THE FORWARD RUNNER AT THE PLATE. HOWEVER, IT IS ALMOST CERTAIN THAT THE RUNNER WHO WAS ON FIRST WILL REACH THIRD AND THE BATSMAN WILL SNEAK TO SECOND AFTER REACHING FIRST ON HIS SINGLE.

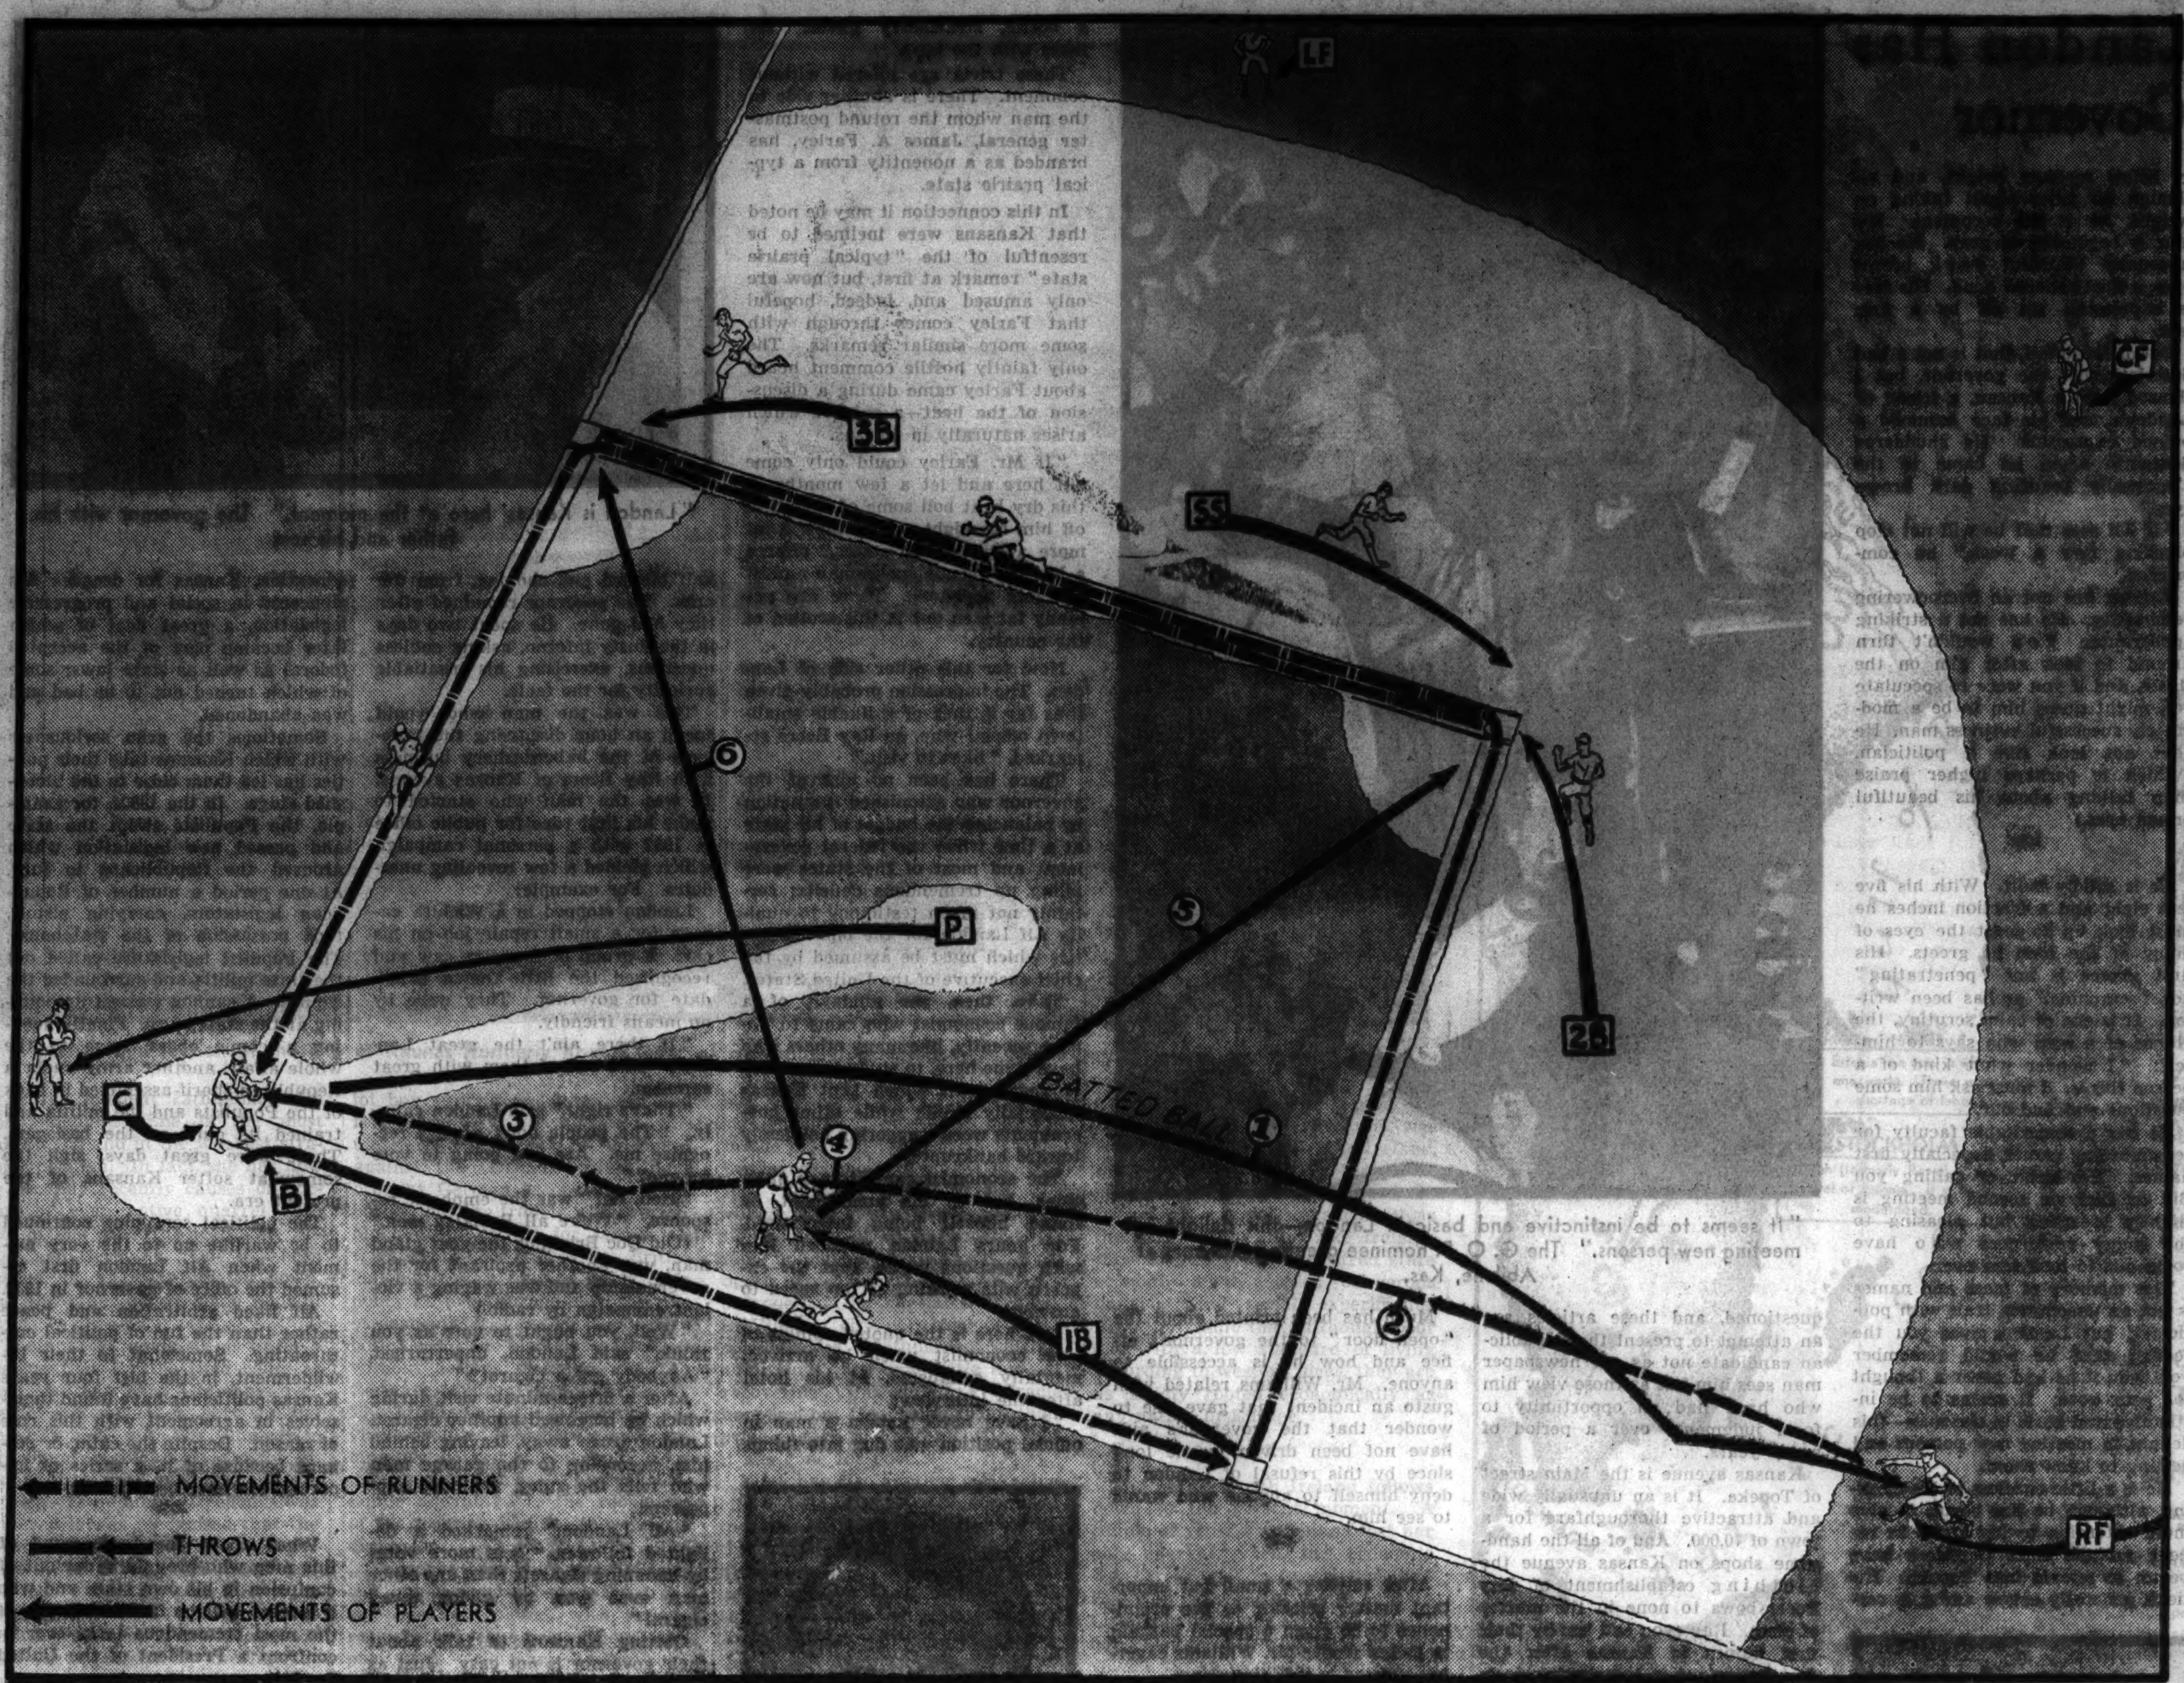
SO THE RIGHT FIELDER THROWS THE BALL LOW ② AND SO IT WILL BOUNCE. THE FIRST BASEMAN TAKES A STATION BETWEEN FIRST AND HOME. IF THE CATCHER FIGURES HE HAS A CHANCE TO MAKE A PLAY AT THE PLATE HE YELLS TO THE FIRST BASEMAN TO LET THE BALL COME THROUGH TO HIM ON THE BOUNCE ③ IF THE CATCHER FIGURES HE HAS NO CHANCE FOR AN OUT AT THE PLATE HE YELLS TO THE FIRST BASEMAN TO CUT OFF THE THROW ④ AFTER INTERCEPTING THE THROW THE FIRST BASEMAN HAS A CHANCE TO HOLD THE BATSMAN ON FIRST OR THROW HIM OUT AT SECOND ⑤ OR HE HAS A CHANCE TO MAKE THE RUNNER WHO WAS ON FIRST STOP AT SECOND, OR THROW HIM OUT AT THIRD ⑥

THERE ARE VARIANTS OF THE CUT-OFF PLAY, WITH EITHER THE PITCHER OR THE SHORTSTOP FUNCTIONING AS THE CUT-OFF MAN.

THE SHORTSTOP COMMONLY FUNCTIONS IN THE CUT-OFF WHEN THERE IS A RUNNER ON FIRST WHO GOES TO THIRD ON A SINGLE TO RIGHT OR CENTER. THE SHORTSTOP CUTS OFF THE THROW TOWARD THIRD AND KEEPS THE BATSMAN FROM SNEAKING TO SECOND, OR FREQUENTLY THROWS HIM OUT AS HE TRIES TO REACH SECOND.

THE PITCHER'S COMMONEST PARTICIPATION IN A CUTOFF IS WHEN A RUNNER IS SCORING ON A SHARP SINGLE TO LEFT. HE ACTS MUCH AS THE FIRST BASEMAN DOES WHEN THE SINGLE IS TO RIGHT. AFTER CUTTING OFF THE THROWS TO THE PLATE THE PITCHER MAY GET A MAN GOING INTO THIRD OR SECOND, OR HE MAY PREVENT RUNNERS FROM ADVANCING TO THOSE BASES.

MANY CASUAL OBSERVERS AT BASEBALL GAMES THINK THE CUT-OFF PLAY IS A SPUR-OF-THE-MOMENT MANEUVER, BUT AS A MATTER OF FACT IT IS ONE OF THE MOST ROUTINE DEFENSIVE PLAYS IN BASEBALL.



What's New in World of Airplanes and Air Transportation

Germans Seek N. Atlantic Honors

By WAYNE THOMIS

GERMANY, through the state-subsidized Lufthansa corporation, apparently is endeavoring to seize the honor and credit for beginning pioneering flights in airplanes across the north Atlantic ocean between the United States and continental Europe, just as she already has taken over airship operations through the regularly scheduled trips made by the Hindenburg. Lufthansa technicians now are prepared to begin experimental flights from Lisbon, Portugal, to Charleston, S. C., in August or early September.

These facts were disclosed in New York last week by Otto Merkel, former director of Lufthansa, who arrived from Berlin to consult with engineers at the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences. Herr Merkel reported that new and improved seaplanes and a new steamship which will serve as a midocean refueling base for the seaplanes already have completed exhaustive preliminary tests and now are being groomed for the first flights.

If the flights are carried out on schedule Germany will step ahead of the American-British combine of Pan American Airways system and Imperial Airways, which has the English government's support. The Germans also will move out in front of the French, who are their rivals for mail and express business across the south Atlantic ocean.

⁂

According to Merkel, the German air ministry officials regard their ocean mail service as a business venture which must ultimately be self-supporting. They say quite frankly that they are racing to beat the French, English, and American operators to the route because they expect to corner the mail and express business at first and later to carry passengers.

Herr Merkel says that his colleagues regard the north Atlantic as potentially the most lucrative and most important air route in the world. He says that their efforts to get the first service in operation are based on economic reasons and the discovery that experience, which is the most valuable asset of old established air line operators, cannot be purchased in any other coin than flying time.

Lufthansa plans to make exploratory flights across the north Atlantic under a system perfected in more than 180 flights across the south Atlantic. The only variations will be due to improvements in equipment which allow the organization to carry more fuel for longer flights with the 10 and 12 ton flying boats built at the Dornier factory.

The older type of boat carried a crew of three men—pilot, radio operator, who also is navigator, and a mechanic. With a reasonable cargo the extreme range was 1,800 miles. These boats have metal hulls and metal construction throughout, although the wings are fabric covered. The engines were B. M. W. electric ignition types developing 500 horsepower each. Eight of these flying boats, which are monoplanes with stub lower wings that become stabilizing floats when in the water, have given good service.

For the north Atlantic, however, a longer-range boat was necessary, and the Dornier engineers turned out a ship with the same general lines but capable of carrying fuel for a 2,800-mile flight nonstop.

The engines are new Diesel type compression ignition motors developing 640 horsepower each. They have been proven by a year's flying operation in Lufthansa's night freighters on continental routes. Where the older boats had a cruising speed of 105 miles an hour, the newer ships cruise at 135-140 miles an hour.

⁂

An integral part of the South American system has been the two catapult steamers stationed between Dakar, West Africa, and Natal, Brazil. These two steamers are each fitted with catapults and hoisting cranes. They also have an ingenious canvas "apron" which can be trailed out behind them as they cruise.

At present the mails from Europe are flown to Dakar by fast land planes and there put aboard one of the steamers, which also has on its deck one of the flying boats. When the steamer is from 200 to 400 miles from shore—depending upon the direction and velocity of the current winds—the flying boat, loaded with mail, is catapulted into the air.

The boats may continue flying until they reach shore, or they have the option of landing beside the steamer which is cruising on the airway route at the other end. When this occurs the canvas apron is spread out behind and the flying boat is taxied on the apron. Both apron and airplane are lifted aboard the steamer by the crane.

The first two catapult ships were merely freighters, one being 10,000 tons and the other 12,000 tons in capacity, on which the special airway equipment was placed.

The new catapult steamer, however, was designed from the keel up to serve its special purpose. It is called the Ostmark and is a great improvement over the earlier vessels, although its tonnage is only slightly increased.

The Germans expect to use only the Ostmark on the north Atlantic airway. It will be stationed in midocean between the Azores and Bermuda, at both of which the trans-Atlantic airplanes will make stops.

The plans now are that the European network of Lufthansa services will be extended to Lisbon, Portugal. Lisbon then will become the seaport, with the ocean route extending from that city to the Azores, to Bermuda, and thence to Charleston, S. C. The air base ship will be stationed, as previously mentioned, midway between the two island stops.

⁂

Under such an arrangement the longest stage of the journey would be the Charleston-Bermuda flight of around 1,400 miles. This is just about half the maximum range of the new Dornier boats, thus giving plenty of reserve fuel for flying around bad weather or for flying to another destination should weather at Charleston or at Lisbon on the eastbound crossing make landing hazardous.

The British and Pan American engineers always have viewed the catapult steamers as expensive and of doubtful worth. They have preferred to postpone their experimental flights until they have ships which can make the entire 3,000-mile flight from New York to Ireland or to London harbor nonstop.

At this time Pan American Airways still is struggling to establish its trans-Pacific route, and it has neither the airplanes nor crews to spare for north Atlantic experiments. Imperial Airways is about to accept delivery on new short flying boats which are copies of the Sikorsky and Martin Clipper ships already in service with Pan American. These ships are said to be capable of nonstop Atlantic flights. There is small likelihood of any Pan American-Imperial pioneering flights before 1937, however.

His Kansas Neighbors Size Up G. O. P. Presidential Nominee

State Agrees Landon Has Been Fine Governor

shirt looked at the attendant scornfully. He spat with deliberation, and a little geyser of brown dust spurted up and was whisked away.

He spoke, and it was apparent that it was not the first time he had given voice to his sentiments. He had devoted considerable study to the subject and had not come to his conclusion hastily.

"Alf Landon!" he remarked in stinging tones. "There's a lot of bunk being printed about Alf Landon in the papers. Why, I can go into any one of ten towns right here in this state of Kansas and pick you a man as good as Alf Landon!"

He said it crushingly. To him it was sufficient proof that Landon had no business running for any office higher than sherif of Shawnee county. However, the attendant seemed unimpressed. He continued scraping at the spattered remnants of grasshoppers on the windshield, but he turned and winked solemnly at me.

After spending many days in Kansas; after meeting Governor Landon; after studying what he has done and what he has not done and how he has spent the 48 years of his life; after talking with business men, farmers, storekeepers, bootblacks, hamburger stand proprietors, salesmen, oil promoters, professors, loafers, road menders, golf and bridge players, it is the conclusion of this writer that the gentleman in the dirty white pants, although he may have been exaggerating his own abilities as a judge of human qualities, had voiced a truth which may have much influence in the coming campaign.

Only instead of confining the selection to towns in Kansas, that filling station philosopher might have included the entire United States in his judgment.

There are probably today in the towns and cities of the forty-eight states hundreds of men "good as Alf Landon." Landon himself is the first to admit this. His enthusiastic supporters do not, but even they do not attempt to pin the title of superman upon him.

To a group in a small-town drug store I repeated the observation of the gentleman in the dirty white pants. Unanimous acclaim greeted the comment of the spokesman of the group, a portly dentist, who declared:

"The man was right. And I'm glad of it. That's the kind of a man we need down there in Washington. Someone we can understand!"

Landon—and this is not one opinion but a summary of the sentiment of hundreds in his state who know him and his record—personifies the homely virtues of the average American who believes in spending a little less than he takes in; who thinks that economy and thrift, honest dealing, and hard work are a pretty good way to get yourself out of financial difficulties; who has a deep-rooted dislike for reckless experimentation, especially when it involves the spending of vast sums of public money.

In other words, he is the exact antithesis of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The only remote resemblance between the two men is that both have attractive personalities. But even here there is a distinct difference. Roosevelt's smile is famous, the wave of his hand to the crowd is spectacular, he is at his best with an audience. Landon's smile is warm and sincere, but he is still inclined to "tighten up" before a big gathering. His personality is most winning in small groups. He is no actor before the masses.

* * *

The gentleman in the white pants was again not far from the truth when he opined that a lot of bunk was being printed about Alf Landon. A number of hard-boiled political writers have come out to Topeka in the last few months and have succumbed completely to the governor's quiet, winning manner.

Perhaps it was the natural reaction of these reporters, accustomed to the glib and professional friendliness of the Washington officeholder, to go off the deep end about a man who is convincingly genuine in his interest in the people he meets—the interest of your neighbor and friend in what you are doing and what you are thinking.

Take, for example, the following personal description of Landon selected at random from an article written by Franklyn Waltman, head of the national affairs staf of the Washington Post, a veteran who has been through the political wars:

"Approaching his forty-ninth birthday, Governor Landon is attractive in appearance. He is slightly below medium height, and although he jokes about taking on weight, he is not corpulent. His hair is beginning to gray. He has unusually beautiful dark brown eyes, a finely shaped head. His face is expressive, set off by a firm jaw. . . ."

Detail for detail, that is not a bad description of the governor, but I showed it to a Kansan, a friend of Landon's, and his face assumed a pained expression. He shuddered distinctly when he came to the "unusually beautiful dark brown eyes."

"If Alf sees that he will not stop blushing for a week," he commented.

Landon has not an overpowering personality. He has not a striking appearance. You wouldn't turn around to look after him on the street, and if you were to speculate you might guess him to be a moderately successful business man. He does not look like a politician. (Which is perhaps higher praise than talking about his beautiful brown eyes.)

* * *

He is solidly built. With his five feet eight and a fraction inches he must look up to meet the eyes of many of the men he greets. His first glance is not "penetrating" nor "searching," as has been written. It is one of calm scrutiny, the glance of a man who says to himself: "I wonder what kind of a person this is. I must ask him some questions and find out."

He has a remarkable faculty for remembering names, especially first names. His habit of calling you Bill or Dick on second meeting is slightly startling but pleasing to the many easterners who have come out to look him over.

This memory of faces and names is not an uncommon trait with politicians, but Landon gives you the feeling that he would remember you even if he had never a thought for your vote. It seems to be instinctive and basic in the man—this delight in meeting new persons and getting to know them.

He is a little careless of his clothing, although he has begun to give more attention to his attire in recent months since outsiders have begun to swarm into Topeka. He is generally askew and it is certain that his suits are not pressed every day.

In his second campaign for governor Landon went around the state in a dusty suit and a crumpled hat which were unusually disreputable. Kansans, always on the lookout for such things, were quick to suspect that there was some deliberation in this.

"The governor is as common and as comfortable as an old shoe," one editorial writer remarked, "and ofttimes he looks like one." There followed some state-wide fun-making about the governor's near-hobo attire. Alf quickly put on a better suit.

Rather than fall a victim to the governor's friend-making ability by interviewing him personally at length, I went to the Kansans who have known him in an endeavor to attain a judgment of the character of this man, of whom the country was but dimly conscious only a short year ago. Those who knew him as a college student, as a worker and owner in the oil fields, and finally as governor — all were questioned, and these articles are an attempt to present the Republican candidate not as one newspaper man sees him but as those view him who have had an opportunity to form judgments over a period of many years.

Kansas avenue is the Main street of Topeka. It is an unusually wide and attractive thoroughfare for a town of 70,000. And of all the handsome shops on Kansas avenue the clothing establishment of Ray Beers bows to none in the matter of class. Ray (you call 'em by their first names in Kansas after the first five minutes) has a nifty stock, and his kool-fabrik shirts are recommended to all who visit the capital of the state.

Ray was debating the advisability of inserting an ad about some light summer suits just arrived when I approached him. The weather was not so warm (the mercury had dropped back into the high nineties), but Ray decided to take a chance on the ad and then gave me his polite attention.

He smiled at my ignorance when I asked if he knew Governor Landon.

"Certainly I know him," he answered. "He drops in here every now and then, just as he drops in most of the stores on the street. He doesn't do much shopping. Theo [Mrs. Landon, who is known to most of Topeka as Theo, never formally as Mrs. Landon] handles the buying.

"Alf's first question always is, 'How's business?' He will listen for an hour and appear the most interested man in the world while I tell him how things are going. He asks plenty of questions. He has a very inquiring mind. I guess that's the most outstanding thing about him. He wants to know about people and their business all the time."

* * *

An old customer demanded Ray's attention for a few minutes in the matter of selecting some striped ties. Returning eagerly to his subject, Ray revealed with modest pride that he has played bridge at the Chamber of Commerce rooms with the governor.

"Alf's a serious bridge player," he confided. "He plays a sound game and likes his partner to do the same. He enjoys a good men's game with a little razzing, but doesn't regard the game lightly."

Unaware that he had probably provided one of the best summations ever given of the average American man's attitude toward bridge, Ray continued:

"My wife and Theo went to school together. She's a very fine woman. They're a splendid couple, and we're all pretty proud of them both."

"What do you think of him as governor?"

"Best we ever had," was the prompt reply. "He's got a sound head on him, Alf has. When he gets down there to the White House nobody's going to push him around."

Down the street a short distance is the Crosby Brothers department store, managed by Earl Williams. Mr. Williams was found behind a desk, perusing with interest in the Topeka Daily Capital an account of the day's happenings at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia. A genial, white-haired gentleman of about 60, Mr. Williams chuckled when invited to give his opinion of the governor.

"Son, you've run into a Louisiana Democrat," he grinned, "even though I've been in this Republican state of Kansas for forty-one years. But of course I'm going to vote for Alf. He's a very good friend of mine. Why, I was the first in town to put his picture in the store window. I had the picture all ready, and when the flash came about the nomination, into the window it went."

Much has been printed about the "open door" to the governor's office and how he is accessible to anyone. Mr. Williams related with gusto an incident that gave rise to wonder that the governor's aids have not been driven insane long since by this refusal of Landon to deny himself to anyone who wants to see him.

* * *

After settling a small but important matter relating to the prominence to be given a special bargain in ladies' frocks Mr. Williams eagerly returned to the discussion.

"I had a friend in from Chicago today," he said. "He had heard a lot about the governor and wanted to shake hands with him. I called up Willard Mayberry [Landon's secretary], and he said absolutely no chance. The governor's schedule was jammed with important appointments.

"But even though I'm a Democrat, I didn't think Alf would refuse to see me and my friend. So I took him up to the statehouse anyway. And, by golly [gleefully], we walked right past all those secretaries and into the office. Alf put his arm around my shoulder and called me his 'good friend.' He shook hands with my friend, and then we left."

"He could hardly keep his office door open in the White House," I suggested.

"I suppose not," conceded Mr. Williams. "But I bet he'd like to. That's the quality of the man. He's so doggone likable."

Almost as an afterthought Mr. Williams added, "And, of course, he's been a fine governor."

How the governor finds time to roam about Topeka and the countryside and also perform capably the duties of his office is something of a mystery to the stranger. He does it, however, and not even his enemies charge that he has neglected his work in the statehouse.

On an average of once a week Landon decides not to walk the mile from the statehouse to the executive mansion for lunch. Instead he walks two blocks to a second-floor cafeteria known as the Pennant. He picks up a tray, takes his place in line, collects soup and ice cream, and goes to a long table overlooking Kansas avenue.

That table is the lunchtime meeting place of the physicians of the city. The talk is of medicine only, and it is said that Landon has picked up a fair working knowledge of a doctor's duties with his eternal questioning. There is no mention of politics. It's a break in the routine for the governor, and he enjoys it. The added burden laid upon him by his nomination has not yet broken this habit of Landon's.

When he strolls to the mansion for lunch the governor passes a soda pop stand run by neighborhood kids and usually stops to purchase a bottle, strawberry flavor. He jokes with the boys.

These trivia are offered without comment. There is another side to the man whom the rotund postmaster general, James A. Farley, has branded as a nonentity from a typical prairie state.

In this connection it may be noted that Kansans were inclined to be resentful of the "typical prairie state" remark at first, but now are only amused and, indeed, hopeful that Farley comes through with some more similar remarks. The only faintly hostile comment heard about Farley came during a discussion of the heat—a subject which arises naturally in Kansas.

"If Mr. Farley could only come out here and let a few months of this dry heat boil some of that lard off him he might get to know a lot more about prairie states," offered a Kansas avenue spokesman amidst grinning approval. There are not many fat men out in this section of the country.

Now for this other side of Landon. The impression probably given thus far is that of a likable small-town official who, as Ray Beers remarked, "likes to visit."

There has been no hint of the governor who astonished the nation by balancing the budget of his state at a time when the federal government and most of the states were piling up tremendous deficits; certainly not much testimony to qualify Alf Landon for the onerous duties which must be assumed by the chief executive of the United States.

Take, then, the affidavit of a famous economist who came to Topeka recently, like many others who have come here, to study the system of government which kept Kansas financially stable while other governments were staggering helplessly toward bankruptcy.

The economist came to ask questions, but to his amazement he found himself being interviewed. For hours Landon pounded him with questions which kept the expert's wits working at top speed to answer.

And here is the quoted opinion of the economist when he arrived, mentally exhausted, at his hotel after the interview:

"I have never known a man in official position who dug into things like that man Landon. He was right with me all the time, although I was talking on highly specialized technical problems in my own field. I was a wreck at the end, and he appeared as fresh as when we started. Where does he get his information?"

The answer to that question is that Landon is an omnivorous reader. His favorite reading concerns history, science, and economics. He reads rapidly, using his unusual memory to retain the gist of what appears on the printed page. Like many another man, he compiles his reading list by scanning the reviews printed in such magazines as Scribner's and Harper's.

This other side of the governor is also illustrated by an incident which occurred in 1935 when western Kansas was the scene of the worst dust storm in its history. It was almost impossible to exist in that "dust bowl," where a Sahara sandstorm would have expired out of pure shame and envy.

The dust clouds made automobile travel impossible. Abandoned cars were buried in a few hours, powdery dust was heaped four feet high against fences and piled up into smooth, soft hills in fields where wheat and corn had once rustled.

The government sent two experts to study conditions in the "bowl." Governor Landon went along with them. The federal men, paid a salary to investigate such circumstances, stayed a few hours and fled, half blinded and choking, from the area. The governor remained after they had gone. He spent two days in the dusty inferno, asking endless questions, exercising his insatiable curiosity for the facts.

This was the man who would spend an hour discussing the problems of the haberdashery business with Ray Beers of Kansas avenue. It was the man who started to make his first race for public office in 1932 with a personal campaign which yielded a few revealing anecdotes. For example:

Landon stopped in a Wichita garage for a small repair job on his car. A group of loungers saw and recognized the little-known candidate for governor. They were by no means friendly.

"If there ain't the great Landon!" said one of them with great sarcasm.

"That's right," said Landon calmly. "The people don't always recognize me. Are you going to vote for me?"

"Hell, no!" was the emphatic response. "We're all Brinkley men."

(Old Doc Brinkley, the goat gland man, was another aspirant for the governorship and was waging a violent campaign by radio.)

"Well, you ought to vote as you think," said Landon, unperturbed. "Anybody got a cigaret?"

After a fifteen-minute visit, during which he borrowed another cigaret, Landon drove away, leaving behind him, according to the garage man who tells the story, five new supporters.

"Alf Landon," remarked a delighted follower, "gets more votes by bumming cigarets than any other man ever won by giving away cigars!"

Getting Kansans to talk about their governor is not easy. Just as Landon himself has been criticized as being inarticulate when called upon for an extemporaneous political speech, so his fellow citizens become vague when asked to voice their opinions about him.

"A fine man," they murmur. "Kind o' man we ought to have down there in Washington."

And when pressed for a more definite statement this was the answer heard at least a hundred times in my journeyings in the state:

"He's fair. In fact, he's about the fairest man I know."

That typically American word "fair" expressed a quality in Landon that strikes the student of his career more and more forcibly. He has a genius for avoiding extremes. He weighs all sides of a problem and gathers every bit of information possible before he acts. He doesn't care for bold, striking, dramatic gestures.

He can succeed in getting two sides of a disrupted party to work together — something particularly difficult in Kansas, which loves nothing better than a good internal party row. If he ever displays a genius, his intimates say, it is at the council table.

* * *

It is perhaps time to say something about Kansas as a state, because it is Alf Landon's background. The popular conception of Kansas, especially in the large cities, probably is that of a huge farming state peopled mainly by dry zealots; dominated by the church element; its natives interested mainly in what the weather will do to the crops; its great area (it is the ninth largest state in the Union) frequently visited by dust storms and grasshopper plagues.

This, together with some dim memories for the middle-aged of an old ribald song about "the potatoes they grow small" and "the roosters they lay eggs in Kansas," forms the metropolitan viewpoint so beautifully expressed by Big Jim Farley in his scornful reference to the state which had such unfortunate repercussions from a Democratic standpoint.

Actually the population of Kansas is more diverse than is generally known. There are Bohemian coal miners, Italian or Greek lead and zinc miners in southeastern Kansas. Every race is engaged in the oil fields.

The majority of the two million inhabitants are the descendants of pioneers who possessed in strong degree the intense individualism and capacity for hard work and endurance of hardships without which the prairie sod could not have been broken.

They like the man they have elected governor twice in the face of Democratic landslides which saw the state itself in the Roosevelt column. One of the qualities they seem to esteem most highly is that Landon "has a mind of his own."

"Once Alf has got his mind set up, nothing in heaven or earth can budge him," they say admiringly. "It sometimes takes him a long time to make up his mind, but then it sets like concrete."

Kansans have always taken an intense interest in politics. With a people well above the average in education, Kansas for decades has pioneered in social and progressive legislation, a great deal of which later became part of the accepted federal as well as state laws; some of which turned out to be bad and was abandoned.

Sometimes the grim seriousness with which Kansans take their politics has led them close to the bloodshed stage. In the 1890s, for example, the Populists swept the state and passed new legislation which aroused the Republicans to fury. At one period a number of Republican legislators, carrying pistols, took possession of the statehouse. The Populist legislature called out the state militia and surrounded the capitol. A cannon was set up pointing at the statehouse. Finally, lending a comic opera tinge to the whole affair, another army under a Republican sherif assembled in back of the Populists and the militia and trained its guns on the besiegers. Those were great days, sigh the somewhat softer Kansans of the present era.

The political scrapping continued to be warlike up to the very moment when Alf Landon first assumed the office of governor in 1932.

Alf liked arbitration and peace rather than the fun of political cutthroating. Somewhat to their bewilderment, in the last four years Kansas politicians have found themselves in agreement with this rule of reason. Despite the calm, or perhaps because of it, a series of important law have been passed.

* * *

What about the background of this man who brought order out of confusion in his own state and who if elected will be faced with one of the most tremendous tasks ever to confront a President of the United States?

The glare of the spotlight must be turned not only upon the public and political career of a presidential aspirant but upon every one of his words and deeds since he left the cradle. Moreover, his ancestry must be inspected, and the discovery of a backsliding uncle may evoke exclamations of horror from his opponents.

Alf Landon did not come to Kansas until he was 16 years old. These articles are intended to tell chiefly of him as he has lived and worked in Kansas since that time. However, the story of his younger years will be presented briefly here for the sake of the record and for those persons who believe in the somewhat mildewed maxim that the child is father to the man.

Landon missed being born in Ohio, "mother of Presidents," only because his mother was visiting her parents back in Middlesex, Pa., when he was born on Sept. 9, 1887. John M. Landon, his father, had moved some years previously from the oil fields of Pennsylvania to the new fields of Ohio in the vicinity of Elba.

The child was christened Alfred Mossman Landon, the Mossman for his mother's family, which traced its American beginning to one John Mossman, a Scotchman, who brought his family to America in 1790 when he was 80 years old. The Landon line started with New England farmers who came to this country in 1650. One branch of the family settled in New Jersey and eventually in western Pennsylvania.

A Landon fought in the Revolutionary war, and another ancestor was Col. William Huston of Pennsylvania, a member of Washington's staf. There were lawyers, doctors, ministers, business men, and farmers in the Landon family tree. Most of them were plain people who lived out their lives quietly and in peace.

John Landon was an independent oil producer who became known for his shrewdness and good sense. This reputation brought him an offer to manage the Kansas Natural Gas company in 1904. When the company went into receivership he was appointed receiver by the courts, and after ten years of fighting to protect the concern's assets against fierce competition the property was sold at a price triple its original value.

A federal judge recommended a bonus for Landon, who had been receiving the substantial sum of $1,500 a month for his services. Much quoted is the Landon answer: "I don't want another nickel. I got my salary without any understanding that I was to be paid any more."

Not so generally publicized is the fact that the owners agreed to a sizable bonus for the receiver and it was readily accepted by him.

The incident is said by his friends to be typical of the elder Landon. He didn't want more money for his services than had been agreed upon. But if anybody insisted there was no more quixotic refusal of the award, not from the descendant of a Scotchman.

* * *

Since his entrance into public life a few years ago a few persons have attempted to set up a tradition about Alf Landon. Probably, however, there never was a presidential candidate whose career has been so devoid of those little anecdotes which are supposed to color the personality of a man.

The boy spent his early years in Marietta, O., a college town. He lived in a big, old-fashioned frame house surrounded by trees on a quiet street. At the age of 9, like any small-town boy, he decided to raise chickens as a career. The senior Landon, in a rare reminiscent mood a couple of years ago, told a story about how Alf, having an order for a dozen eggs, and with only eleven in the basket, held a hen on the nest until she had laid the necessary egg.

Kansas cartoonists used the story in a dozen ways to illustrate various acts of Governor Landon. It was interpreted variously as revealing the determination of the man even as a boy, his insistence upon fulfilling a contract made, etc. Governor Landon finally became a little irritated about all this nonsense.

"Father must have got mixed up on that story," he remarked. "Did you ever try to make a hen lay an egg by holding her on the nest?"

The boy spent his summers in Pennsylvania with his mother and grandparents, the Rev. W. H. Mossman, a Methodist minister, and his wife. Alfred developed an interest in reading which was gratifying to his mother but which horrified some of his other relatives in those sturdy days. He was rescued from such a dangerous proclivity by an uncle only ten years older than he. The boy and young man explored the Pennsylvania hills together, camped out, and rode horseback.

When he entered Marietta academy the 14-year-old Landon entertained athletic ambitions. He weighed only 114 pounds, but tried out for end on the football team and made good. A large and rough opponent in the Parkersburg High school backfield put a rude end to Alf's dreams of all-American. He was knocked out of the game and it was discovered weeks later that he had suffered a broken shoulder which had mended improperly. In college Landon never attempted athletics.

The year 1904 saw the family move west to Kansas in response to that tempting offer of $1,500 a month to the senior Landon to manage that Kansas gas company. On the way John Landon and his 16-year-old son stopped off in St. Louis to witness the Democratic convention. Young Landon heard William Jennings Bryan, the boy orator, and temporarily forgot his Ohio Republicanism. Theodore Roosevelt was his hero at the time, but he admitted that Bryan's glistening periods stirred him.

On an August day in 1904 Alf Landon stepped off the train at Independence, Kas., then a hastily built oil town in the very center of the fields. From that date on he was a Kansan. Thirty-two years later he was to be the first son of the state ever to lead a major party in a presidential election.

Map of countries bordering on the Baltic sea, including Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia, which are commonly alluded to as the Baltic states, although each is an independent nation.

IT USED to be the Balkans. Now it is the Baltic. In the long-past days before 1914 political writers and journalists used to speculate on what would happen when the snows melted in the Balkans. Now they are wondering what will happen when the Baltic boils over.

For years nothing happened in the Balkans. There were disputes and quarrels and even little local wars—little wars by the standard of comparison established by the World war. Then something did happen. The Archduke Franz Ferdinand was assassinated at Serajevo and the world crashed.

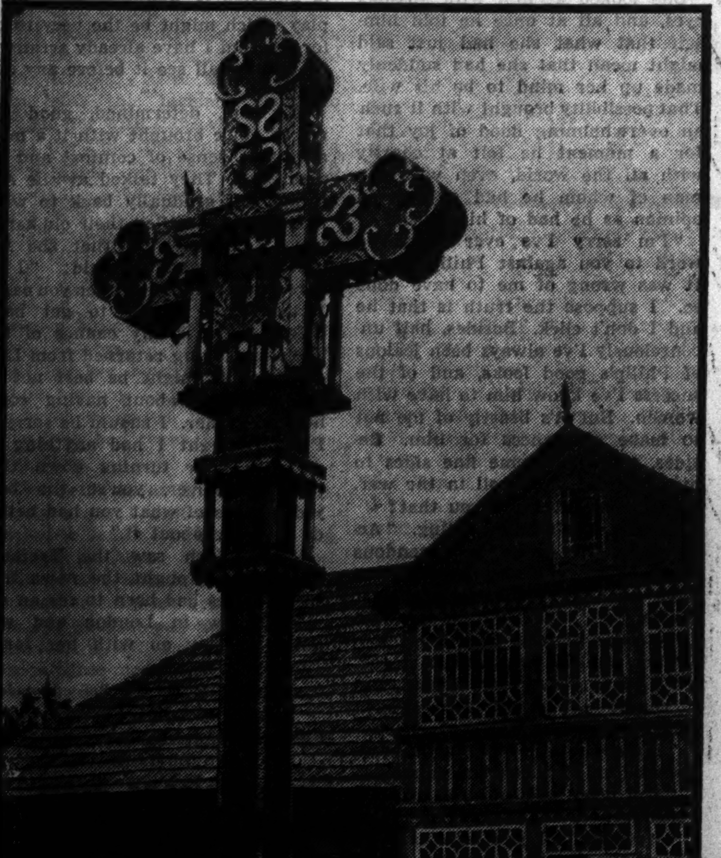
Today writers and politicians are speculating in the same way about the Baltic, which has become the powder magazine of Europe. Germany, Russia, and Poland are planning and plotting for supremacy there, and while no one wants war, the mad action of a fool or a knave might precipitate a conflict which once more would draw in all Europe.

For the purposes of definition it would be well to make clear at th outset that by the Baltic is meant the three Baltic states on its east shore. The Scandinavian nations on the west of the sea are not concerned in these troubles except in so far as any European may be concerned in the maintenance of international peace. They managed to keep out of the last war. They may manage to keep out of the next if there is a next, and one of the objects of this trip which I am making for The Tribune is to find out what the chances of a next are. Right here may I say that I think the chances are against war, but this must be qualified by the realization that there exists in all European countries today what Theodore Roosevelt called the lunatic fringe. Put a lunatic in a powder magazine with a box of matches in his pocket and anything may happen.

≈

The three Baltic states which constitute this powder magazine are Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia. All were Russian provinces under the czar. All won their freedom in the collapse of Russia after the great war. They are little countries, and they have had a hard struggle politically and economically to preserve their independence. That they have done so successfully up to now and even strengthened their position is due to their hard peasant competence and thrift, which has kept them out of monetary adventures and social experiments and which has taught even the great nations that they might be tough nuts to crack.

The largest and the most endangered of these states is Lithuania, from which I now am writing. She has a population of about two and a half million. Next comes Latvia with two million and Estonia with about a million and a quarter. The total population of the three countries, therefore, is something under six million, or less than double that of Chicago and less than that of New York. This population has to support three governments, three armies, and three expensive sets of diplomats. The diplomats are even more important than the armies, for the armies could hope to do little against one of the great powers, but the diplomats may be able to avert the necessity of having them try.



A strangely carved cross in the front yard of a Lithuanian peasant's home. Erection of ornate crosses is a common practice in Lithuanian villages.

At the moment Lithuania is in the limelight. She is the most threatened and in the weakest strategic position. In fact, she has now or has had recently causes of friction or even active quarrel with two of her powerful neighbors, Poland and Germany. One has been settled, or at least quieted down, and the other shows some hopeful signs.

The quarrel which seems to have been settled, for the time being at least, is that with Germany over Memel. Memel is a port on the Baltic which with its immediate hinterland is inhabited chiefly by people of German race and culture. When Lithuanian freedom was achieved it was recognized that the new state must have a port. The powers therefore assigned Memel to her, but under what is known as the Memel statute, which provided for the protection of the Memelanders from oppression by the Lithuanians. This statute was guaranteed by Britain, France, Italy, and Japan, and it provided for an autonomous government of Memel through a directly elected local parliament and a governor appointed by the Lithuanian government. One of the provisions was that the governor must be persona grata to the parliament.

All went fairly well until the rise of the Nazi power in Germany. There had been pin pricks on both sides, but the little difficulties were smoothed out. With the advent of the Nazis, however, German propaganda became intensified in Memel and the Lithuanians became frightened. The Lithuanian governor quarreled with the Memel Germans, and there were unpleasant incidents on both sides. There was the famous trial of a group of German Memelanders charged with treason and plotting rebellion. German language schools were suppressed or discouraged, and a very tense situation developed. The Lithuanians feared that the Germans were planning a putsch to seize Memel and so increased their pressure.

Then at the beginning of this year there was an election for the local parliament. There were all sorts of charges of intimidation and ballot box stuffing on either side and for a few days the situation was tense. An outbreak in Memel against the Germans might have brought German troops across the border, but the trouble was averted. Much of the credit for this is attributed by both sides to British diplomats, who, playing, as is their policy all over Europe now, the rôle of peacemaker, gave good advice to both sides. The elections passed off without serious disorder, and the Germans, as usual, swept the board. The Lithuanians, under British advice, appointed a moderate and conciliatory governor, and both sides now seem satisfied. The great economic advantage is the reopening of the frontier, which is now under discussion.

Since the economic war between the two countries began the frontier has been closed, with serious results to Lithuania's general export trade—Germany having been her largest customer for food products—and disastrous results to the local Lithuanian farmers, who had sold practically all their produce in the German cities across the border. Except for the slight mitigation provided by smuggling, that local trade was wiped out.

In a talk which I had in Berlin with an old friend, a high German diplomat, I was informed that Lithuania now had nothing to fear if—significantly—she behaved herself.

"Memel is an irritating sore," this man told me, "but it is not enough to go to war about. We don't want the territory and we don't want war, but we are irritated when our compatriots are persecuted and badly treated. All we want is the observance of the Memel statute, and while that is observed we will make no trouble. We owe the British a debt of gratitude for their services in bringing about a better psychology. They alone of the four guarantors displayed any interest, and but for their efforts there might have been serious trouble."

While on the subject of Germany it may be worth while mentioning that two other questions affecting indirectly the Baltic situation have been settled at least temporarily to the satisfaction of Germany. One is that of the Polish corridor, which the Germans have agreed to accept for ten years at least, and the other that of Polish Silesia, formerly German and largely inhabited by Germans. Relations with Poland are now good and nothing is likely to be said about Silesia, but if they grow too intimate they may become a danger to Lithuania, for one of the plans of resettlement of Europe which has been mentioned from time to time is that Lithuania should be incorporated in Poland, giving Poland Memel for a port, and that the corridor, with the port of Danzig, should be returned to Germany. At present this solution sounds too fantastic to be taken seriously, but strange things sometimes happen when international good fellows get together and begin to carve the turkey.

The second of Lithuania's dangers is her quarrel with Poland over Vilna. Vilna was Lithuania's first capital, but the Poles claimed it and marched in and took it. The powers recognized Poland's ownership, but Lithuania did not and broke off all relations with Poland. There is no mail or telegraphic communication across the frontier, no trade at all, and no persons are allowed to cross except by special permission. There is some talk of opening conversations to establish a modus vivendi in the near future, but the Poles have just made the gesture of massing an army corps near the frontier, and the Lithuanians are excited and scared. They might be willing to open relations with Poland, tacitly accepting the Vilna situation, if they are not asked to give it official recognition, but the Poles, it is said, will insist on recognition of their de jure possession of Vilna.

As a matter of fact, the recovery of Vilna would not be an unmixed blessing for the Lithuanians. They would be compelled by sentiment to make it again their capital, for which purpose it is inconveniently situated both geographically and strategically. They have built up in the eighteen years of their independence a modern capital in Kaunas. Formerly just a large Jewish village, it is now a well paved, well lighted town of 110,000 people, with fine buildings, good stores, and opera, which would all have to be scrapped if the capital went back to Vilna, a city with few of these conveniences. Lithuanian officials admit that they have little hope of recovering Vilna unless a miracle happens, but they cannot sink their pride enough to admit officially that it has gone for good.

Vilna has also another weakening effect on Lithuania. A glance at the map will convince anyone that the three little states would be much stronger in some form of union. The Baltic union has been the dream of Baltic statesmen since the great war. It has been partially established by a military alliance between Latvia and Estonia, to which Poland is also an adherent. The other two are anxious to have Lithuania join, but will not have her until she has settled her quarrel with Poland, as they will not involve themselves in any commitments which might lead to a quarrel with their friend Poland. Moreover, the three Baltic states as neighbors and former possessions of Russia have much to fear from soviet Russia in common with her greater neighbor, Poland. There is therefore a task for Baltic statesmanship in making the Baltic safe for freedom and democracy.

Antanas Smetona, president of Lithuania.

Lithuania has been described as the Ireland of the Baltic, and the two countries have much in common. It is even possible that they may be racially akin. The origin of the Lithuanian race is lost in the mists of prehistory, but many anthropologists believe that they are a Celtic tribe left behind on the Baltic in the great trek of the Celts from east to west. They were the only Druids and tree worshipers in eastern Europe, and their music and folk songs and tales bear a strong resemblance to those of the Irish.

Coming down to present days, their history has not been dissimilar. Like Ireland, they were for centuries oppressed by a great neighbor, and, like Ireland, they seized the opportunity given by the great war to win their freedom. Like Ireland, they set about reviving their language, with more success than the Irish, for it was not so near death as the Irish tongue; and, like Ireland, they adopted a policy of strict state economy and avoided dangerous financial and social experiments, with the result that, although poor and with a low standard of living according to western ideas, they are as solidly rooted economically as any nation in Europe.

≈

The parallel with Ireland follows down to the present moment. A couple of years ago Ireland lost her only market when the economic war broke out between her and England. Just about the same time Lithuania lost what was pactically her only market when she got involved in an economic war with Germany over Memel, which might almost be described as the Ulster of Lithuania. Even here the parallel does not stop. Ireland was forced by the war with England to become self-supporting in industry, and there has been a great flowering of factories and workshops until today she is almost self-contained. She has also managed to regain most of her cattle export trade and is on the way to prosperity. Lithuania, forced to seek new markets, found them in Britain, Russia, Spain, and France and is now shipping butter, dairy products, eggs, bacon, and the like to all these countries. Now that the Memel trouble seems likely to be settled and the German frontier reopened, she will be sitting pretty with half a dozen nations clamoring for her food.

Here, perhaps, the parallel ends, for Lithuania has made more material outward progress than Ireland, which was well supplied with old government buildings and other plant of government. Lithuania, having lost Vilna, had to start with nothing, and has made a modern and efficient town out of Kaunas, which is described not as the capital—that title is still reserved for Vilna—but as the seat of government.

But it is not only in outward things like new buildings and paved streets that the Lithuanians have achieved progress. From a rude and rough peasant country with the crudest kind of farming for home consumption they have become exporters of high-grade agricultural products which will compare in quality and packing with any in the world. Their butter is famous throughout Europe, and their hams, bacon, and other pig products are in the first class. In 1924, when they first turned their attention to export trade, they shipped abroad 1,000 tons of butter. Last year the figure was 15,000 tons. When the economic war with Germany broke out, and that market was lost, the government subsidized the farmer to help him win other markets. In 1934 the subsidy was 14,300,000 lits—there are about six lits to the dollar at present values. In 1935 it had falen to 9,300,000 lits, and this year it will be about half that. The Lithuanians did not need a supreme court decision to scrap their temporary AAA when the need for it had passed.

Similarly they have resisted the wiles of the strange women of finance—inflation and devaluation. The lit is fixed firmly on gold, with an adequate reserve behind it, and although the crisis of the last two or three years has tested the lit's stability severely, it has been maintained at its full value. The gold reserve of the Bank of Lithuania, on which the currency is based, reached its peak in 1934 when it stood at 55 million lits, which meant a gold coverage for its paper of 66 per cent. Then came the strain of the last two years, intensified by the fact that a number of payments abroad for bridges, harbors, and other public works, together with the redemption of the Lithuanian Liberty loan, fell due, and the coverage fell in 1935 to 35 per cent. By the end of the year, however, it had risen to 41 per cent, and there has been little change since then, though no figures are available. There are many larger countries which would be happy to have a currency so thoroughly covered.

≈

The public debt has also been kept low. On Jan. 1, 1935, it stood at 90,114,629 lits, representing 36 lits, or about $6, per head of population. Like all other European powers except Finland, Lithuania has defaulted on her debt of $1,844,800 to the United States, but has not repudiated. The exact method was to extend by unilateral declaration the redemption date of the bonds from 1935 to 1945, so there is some hope that America may get some of her money after all.

Lithuania lives by agriculture. She has no manufactures of any importance and imports most of her needs in manufactured goods. In spite of that fact she has managed to maintain a favorable balance of trade since 1930, when her exports were 333,000,000 lits and her imports 312,000,000 lits. In 1934 the figures had fallen, but the balance was still on the right side. The exports were 147,000,000 lits and the imports 138,000,000 lits. Some but not all of this fall was explained by the fall in agricultural prices, but there was also a fall in volume. Some idea of its cause may be gleaned from the fact that in 1930 Germany led the list of Lithuania's customers with 200,000,000 lits, Britain coming second with 65,000,000 lits, while in 1934 the position was reversed, Britain leading with 62,000,000 lits and Germany a poor second with 31,000,000 lits. Since then, however, new markets have been found and old ones extended, and the figures for last year and this year will be up again.

Lithuania's biggest export in 1934 was bacon, of which she sent abroad 43,000,000 lits' worth, practically all of which went to Britain. Next came butter with 23,000,000 lits, of which Britain took 10,000,000, and then timber, 16,000,000 lits, and flax, 16,000,000 lits. This last item will be much increased this year, owing to Britain's rearmament program, which calls for immense yardages of airplane linen from Belfast, which in turn buys its flax from Lithuania—another link between Ireland and Lithuania. Some idea of how far dependent on foreign trade the country is may be gained from the fact that 150,000,000 lits of its total agricultural production of about 500,000,000 lits is exported.

All through the crisis Lithuania has set her face against any monkeying with the currency. She has been urged to join the sterling block, like the Scandinavian countries, which followed Britain off gold because she was their chief customer. The Lithuanians figured, however, that their country was too small and too dependent on one industry to take any chances.

In the same way they have not played with doles and subsidies for idleness, nor have they tried to bring about prosperity by destroying food and other crops. Instead their peasants have been urged to produce more and still more, and the government has busied itself trying to find markets, in which it has been remarkably successful. It is true, of course, that it has not been bothered with industrial unemployment, for, as there are few industries, and those small, there was no mass of industrial unemployment. What there was was solved by that simple expedient in a peasant country of going back to the farm. Here, too, a benign circle was established. The workers who went back to the farm didn't go to loaf. They worked and produced more food, which was sold abroad and more money brought into the country. Today the small industries are all reviving and the production of food at the same time increasing.

One great advantage a small country has over a large one in preserving its economic sanity lies in its very smallness. Effect very quickly follows cause and cannot be camouflaged. And the rulers are close to the soil and its homely virtues and sound common sense. They know that if they sow oats they will not reap wheat, and they don't expect to get butter from a sterile cow. The people equally know their rulers, who are their friends and neighbors, and if these rulers are sometimes a bit tough with each other and are inclined to help along an election with the aid of the army—well, that is the Baltic way of doing things. They don't expect to be treated any better themselves when their time comes.

No Pig Massacre in Latvia!

- No plowing under of crops in a strange quest of abundance.
- In fact, the Letts, who are mostly farmers, have recaptured prosperity in a measure by the simple process of working.
- In Latvia one must work to eat. There is no dole for the able-bodied. No dole to demoralize.
- Latvia, one of the Baltic nations and an independent unit of the so-called Boiling Baltic, will be described politically and economically by John S. Steele in next Sunday's issue of the Graphic Section. Other nations bordering on the Baltic sea will be subjects of subsequent articles by Mr. Steele.

A Conversation on the Terrace Brings New Romantic Interest Into the Life of Ruth Starling, Lovely Heiress from America

THE STORY TO DATE

Though her childhood sweetheart, faithful George Dwight, pleads with her to come home to America and marry him, Ruth Starling insists on staying in London and using her recently inherited wealth to go on the stage. Through her London lawyer, Mr. Singleton, Ruth meets Capt. Philip Trefane, who is interested in theatricals, and his wife, Iris, two scheming adventurers. Ruth offers to finance a theatrical venture under Trefane's management. His aunt, the marchioness of Cicester, has loaned the Trefanes her old castle on the Cornish coast for the summer, and Ruth accepts their offer to stay with them as a paying guest. Lady Cicester's manor house is near by. Captain Trefane secretly insures Ruth's life in his favor. Lady Cicester's son, Lord John, is attracted to Ruth, and Ruth, though the man is horribly ugly, likes him. Philip rows Ruth out for a swim, then lets the boat drift away, expecting Ruth to drown on the long swim back to shore. Philip pretends to have a cramp. Iris races out in a motor boat and rescues Ruth. Ruth gives Iris a check to pay for the installation of a bathroom. Philip insists it can only be built in the annex, a forbidding, isolated building, and that quarters for Ruth shall be arranged there. Helen Bates, Trefane's stepdaughter by a previous marriage, uses the studio on the first floor of the annex. Helen lives in fear and hatred of her stepfather. During her second night in the annex Ruth awakes to find the building on fire. Helen Bates saves her life. Philip and Iris go to London to inspect a furnished house Ruth has agreed to share with them.

INSTALMENT XI.

LORD JOHN was in his workshop, finishing an elaborate carved mantelpiece. It was a commission from a wealthy man who had settled down in the neighborhood five years ago. As is generally the case with a man who has plenty of money, the future marquis of Cicester was much pleased with this commission, and he was ashamed to see how very little he had got on with the work since the castle had passed into the temporary possession of the Trefanes.

The knowledge that he would not be able to see Ruth Starling today brought with it a sense of frustration and right down unhappiness of which he felt ashamed. And yet he had made up his mind, since the week-end she had stayed at the manor house, that it would not only be useless to ask her to marry him, but would injure that which he so greatly valued—their already close friendship. What had brought him to this conclusion was watching her at what had been a merry house party. Everybody had liked her, and she had seemed to like everybody.

After he had spoiled various pieces of wood he got up and, leaving his workshop, went off for a walk, during which he felt full of bitter thoughts.

And then when he came home, his mother observed: "I'm sorry now we didn't ask Ruth Starling to lunch, but I only heard a minute ago that she is spending the day alone in the castle."

"I think you are mistaken, mother. The whole castle party have gone to London, including even Helen Bates."

"I'm not mistaken," she said with spirit. "How long will it take you to learn, John, that I very seldom am mistaken when I make a statement? Iris and Philip, together with that tiresome girl, did go off to London early this morning to see a furnished house they've persuaded Ruth Starling to share with them this autumn. But for some reason or other they left her. Troutbeck was with me this morning, and told me. But Ruth is what I call foolishly kind. Troutbeck says that she had given the two young maids the day off! I hope that doesn't mean she is the kind of person that thinks all men and women are equal!"

Lord John looked at his mother with a twinkle in his eye. "I have always understood that we are all equal in the sight of God," he observed.

"O, but that's different! Still——" She smiled, too. She had noticed the alteration in the face to which, though she would have endured torture rather than admit it, she had never become wholly reconciled through her son's forty-odd years of life.

"I shall rest all the afternoon," she said slowly. "So I sha'n't want you to go with me to Lilyford today after all, my dear."

A grateful feeling filled his heart, and with a most unwonted gesture of affection he bent his head and brushed her cheek with his lips, "You'll come down for tea, won't you?"

"I'm not sure that I shall even do that. We'll meet at dinner."

After she had gone upstairs she moved about her overfull sitting room restlessly for a while. Then she went over to the bow window which commanded a view of the winding road toward the castle and she had not long to wait, for soon she saw her son striding along the avenue toward the road which led to Perranuth castle. And though she was a most worldly old woman there did go up from her heart a prayer, simple and sincere, that John might have the wish of his heart, and so enjoy what she knew had so far completely eluded him—that is, a measure of real happiness.

It was true that Ruth had told the two girls who came up early each morning, and stayed till late, that they could have the day off. They both feared and disliked their employer, but they had become very fond of the American young lady. She was so kind, so generous, too, as regarded little thoughtful acts of kindness.

⁂

THIS was why Ruth now had the great castle alone to herself, and in a sense she enjoyed the silence and quietude.

Before starting Philip Trefane had handed her a copy of a new play by a famous dramatist. He had explained, with more eagerness than he generally showed, that to produce any work by this man would put her on the theatrical map in London in a way she could not hope to be for some time. This had naturally interested her very much. But, having read the play, she felt doubtful. The part which would be hers was an unpleasant part. Willing as she was to take Philip Trefane's advice, she yet had a mind of her own when it came to a matter of acting, and she made up her mind to consult Lord John.

The two maids had suggested that Miss Starling should leave everything for them to clear up in the morning. But that was not Ruth's way, and after having read the play for the second time she had gone to the kitchen and was actually engaged in washing up the two plates and the two dishes which were used for her late lunch when she heard the front door bell.

Quickly she dried her hands, pulled down the sleeves she had rolled up, and hurried off to the door, expecting a note from Lady Cicester, or even from Lord John.

She opened the door, and then her face became full of welcome. "Do come in"—and rather shyly she added—"John."

"I thought you had gone up to London. I understood Iris to say you were going there today."

He paused and saw her face registered surprise.

"There was never any thought of my going to London."

"Perhaps I misunderstood Iris," but well he knew that his cousin's wife had lied to him.

As he followed her into the hall: "Do you mind waiting here for a few moments? I've given the maids a holiday and I'm just washing up my lunch things. I won't be more than five minutes more, but I don't like to leave it all in a muddle."

"Mayn't I come and help you?" he asked eagerly.

She laughed gayly. "Why, of course you can if you like!"

When they reached the kitchen she rolled up her sleeves again, and merrily they ended the washing up, he drying the plates and dishes after she had washed and rinsed them.

"In the old days I never did this kind of chore without feeling I'd like to be a vegetarian," she exclaimed. "And today I have been a vegetarian, for I've only had some salad and fruit."

Doing that little task together seemed to bring them very near to one another, at least so the man felt, and he was full of inward delight at finding himself with her alone within four walls.

"Iris spends quite a lot of time in here, but she will never allow me to help her, and it's too bad, for I should enjoy it."

"My sister goes out and camps alone in Scotland sometimes with my brother-in-law," he observed. "He kills the birds, she plucks them and cooks them, and then I hope they wash up together! But she told me once she never thought much of love in a cottage after she had been out doing that kind of thing even for only a very few days."

"Iris makes a very good thing of 'love in a castle.' She is so absolutely devoted to Philip. The first thing she told me after I arrived was that they had spent their honeymoon here."

And then, as they made their way along the stone passages which separated this part of the building from the great hall, Lord John said in a musing tone: "I used to adore the castle and felt sorry we didn't live here instead of in the manor house. But somehow I've lately taken a kind of dislike to this place."

"Why that?" she asked.

"I can't say exactly, but I now feel that there's something sinister about the atmosphere. I suppose you've never felt that?"

"On the contrary—I feel very happy here."

"And yet, even in the short time you've been within these walls you've twice faced a terrible death," and he spoke with restrained emotion.

"But neither time was it in the castle," she said quickly. "Once it was in the sea, and as for the fire—well! You couldn't call the annex—the castle."

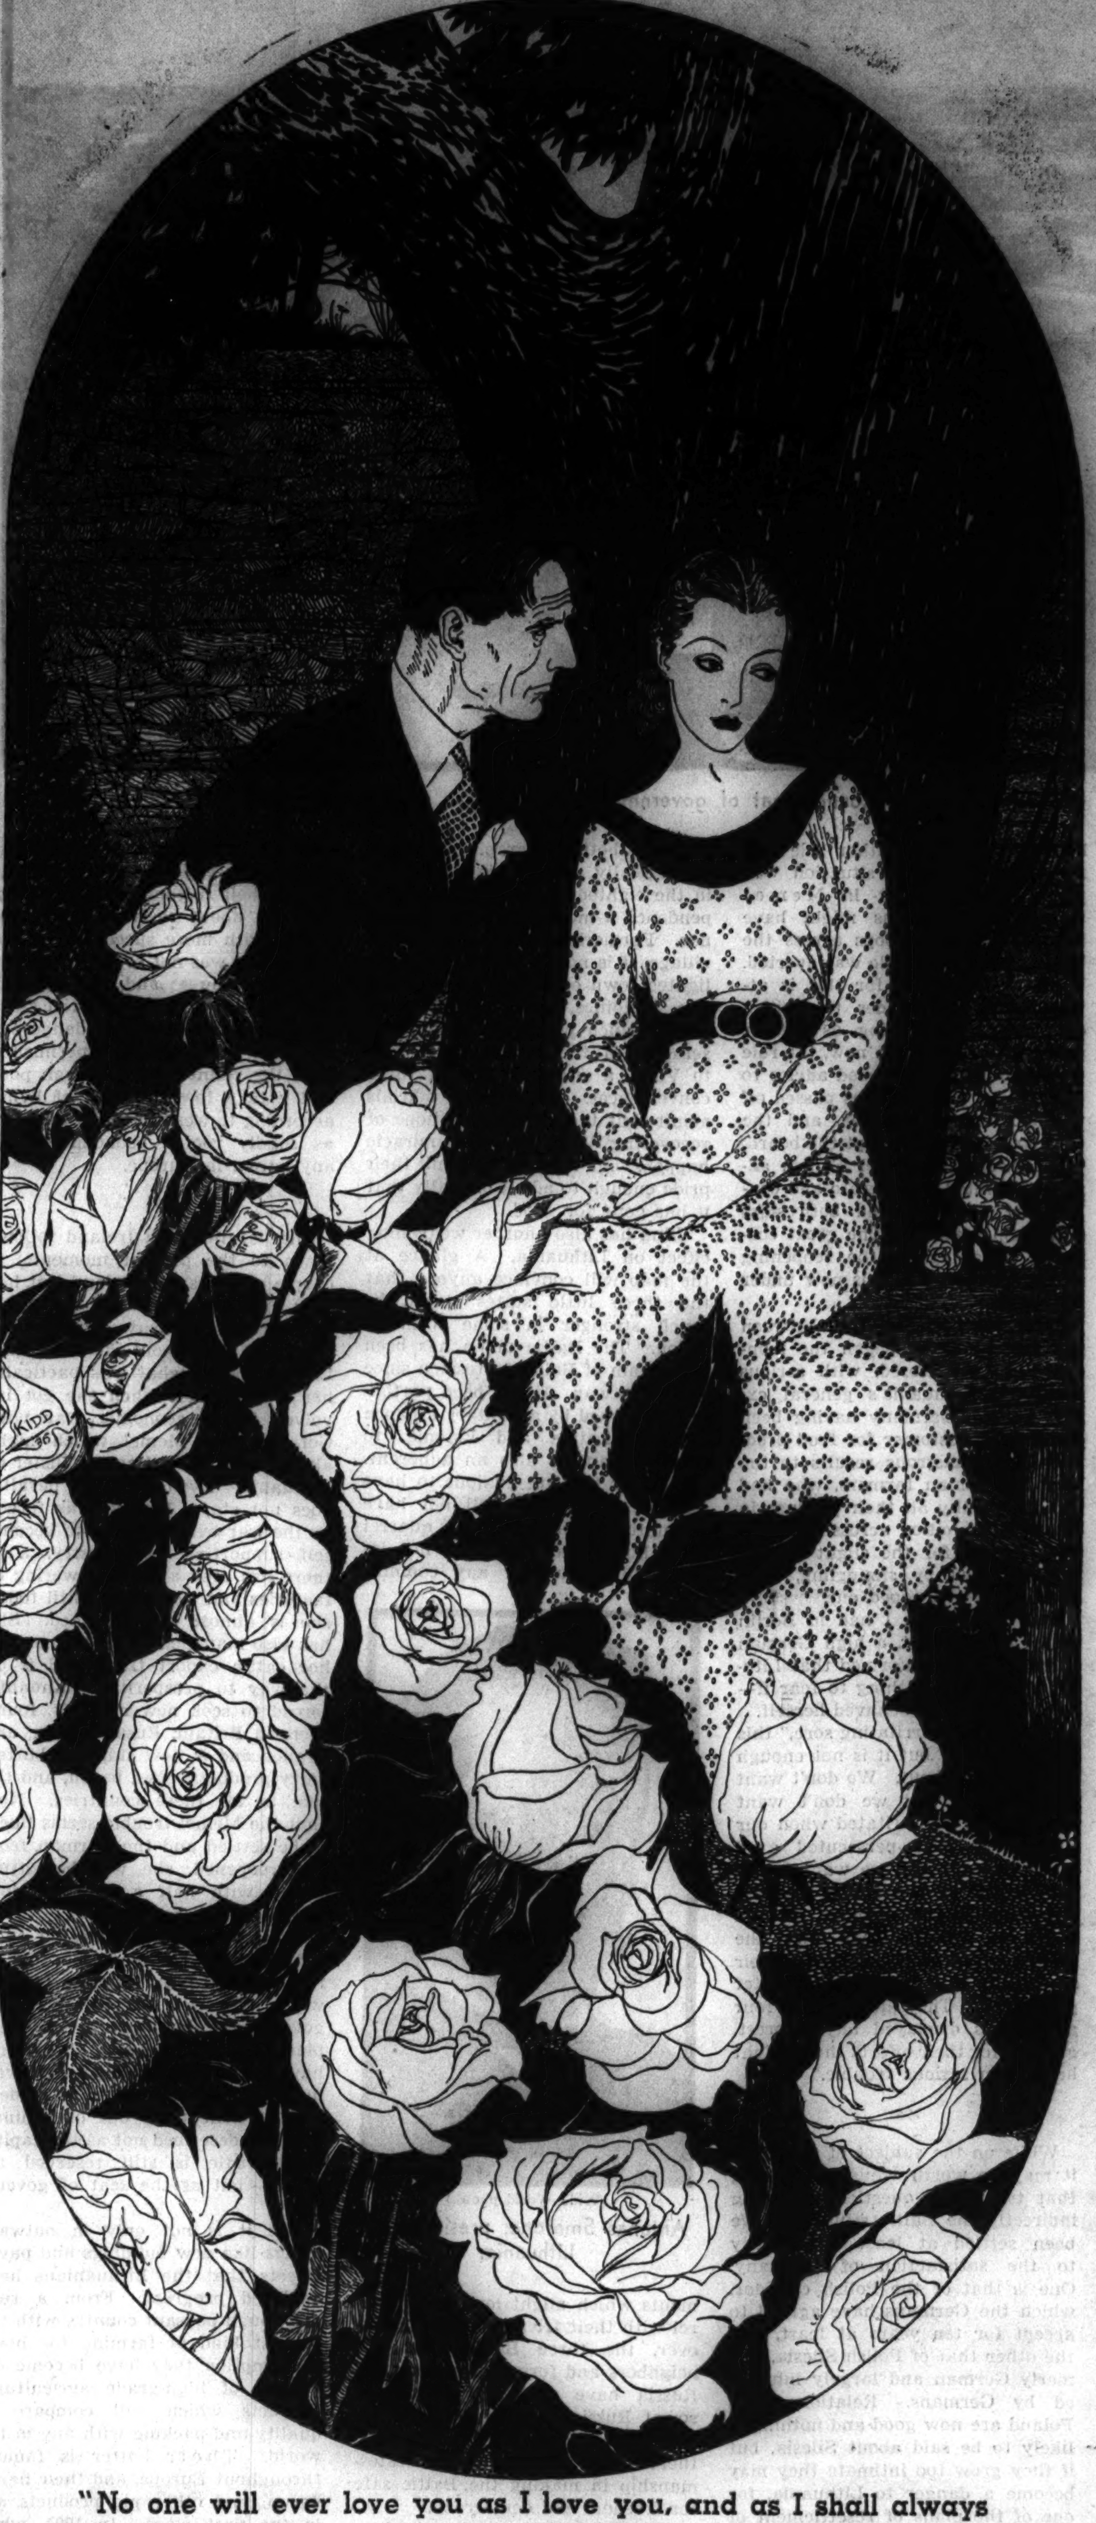
"Still, both times it happened here."

And then she rather surprised him by saying: "Why shouldn't we go and sit on the terrace for a while? It's perfect out there, and I've been sitting out of doors reading a play which I want you to read. Philip would like us to buy it, so as to have it in reserve for our second production. But I'm not sure that I altogether like it."

"Let's sit out there now, but let me take it away to read. I like talking when we're together."

His voice sounded strange to himself, for he had suddenly made up his mind that he would tell Ruth he loved her.

She opened the narrow door which led from the hall into the sitting room. "This is the nearest way to get out of doors."



"No one will ever love you as I love you, and as I shall always love you till I die."

It was pleasantly cool on the terrace and Lord John saw that to their left, just under the further wide bay window, was an oak bench. On it lay a much thumbed manuscript play.

They both sat down, and all at once he put out his hand and took hers. She was surprised, indeed very much surprised, but she allowed her hand to rest confidingly in his. He pressed it with a murmured "Ruth?" and looking straight before him he said in a low voice: "Surely you know that I love you, that I have loved you from the first moment that I saw you?"

She said nothing, only looked at his now rigid side face. That profile which most of the people who knew him would have said made a grotesque outline. But there was nothing grotesque in John Pendervil's countenance to Ruth Starling. She had come to care enough for the man's soul to accept his painfully plain visage.

As if he could not help himself, he slowly turned his head, and she saw that his face was working with emotion.

"I shall never care for any one—I never have cared for any one—as I care for you." The words came in gasps. "And yet, Ruth, I know I should be doing a selfish thing if I asked you to marry me."

She whispered: "No, no," and he cried out: "Then I do ask you to marry me! O, Ruth, do you think you could ever care enough for me to marry me?"

She made no answer to that plea, but she allowed her hand to go on resting in his.

"I don't want you to answer at once," he said eagerly. "I know you ought to have time to think over your answer. If you feel you must say 'no,' don't let it be an eternal no. Remember that I shall always be there, and always longing to hear that you have changed your mind. But if—I can hardly say it, Ruth—but if you do consent to become my wife I want you to know that I shall be quite content for you to go on with the life and career that I know you have planned out for yourself."

⁂

HIS fingers closed on her hand with a strong grasp, and again, to his trembling delight, she did not withdraw her hand.

"I was utterly miserable during those days you spent at the manor house. I felt as if you were drifting far away from me, Ruth, and I had made up my mind that I would never ask you to be my wife. I was afraid that to do so would only spoil our friendship. But I wasn't able to help myself just now."

Again he stared out at the sea. Then he said slowly: "Even in these days it's a good thing for a woman to have a man to look after her. And in this case it's a man who would let himself be cut to pieces for her. No one will ever love you as I love you, and as I shall always love you till I die."

He took his hand off hers as he added, "But again I say, do not decide now. I simply want you to think over what I've said. What's more, I want you to have as much time for thought as you feel will help you to make up your mind. Of course I know you will be making a much bigger decision about this matter than an offer of marriage means to most women."

Tears welled up into Ruth's eyes. This man who was offering her everything he had, and everything he ever would possess, might have been a beggar asking a favor from a queen.

"I need hardly add that I don't want to touch a penny of your money," he said hurriedly. "As far as I am concerned you can spend it all in connection with your theatrical productions. What's more, I promise you I would never dream of interfering with any plans you made. I realize that you would wish to follow up any big success you had in London with a season in New York."

"I can't think why you are so good to me," she said falteringly.

"It's only because I love you."

He looked at her with an expression which transmuted his homely face, at any rate in her eyes, into something noble and almost beautiful. Very nearly did Ruth Starling exclaim: "I don't want to wait! I'll say yes now."

She longed for the man who loved her so selflessly to taste real happiness. Utterly different though she was from his mother, she knew just as surely as did old Lady Cicester that he had had a frustrated life. She felt no repugnance for John Pendervil. Yet something still seemed to hold her back from making a promise she knew would be irrevocable.

And now he spoke again. "I marvel at my own temerity in asking you to give me even a very small part of your existence. And yet, O, my dear, may I say again that I believe I could make you happy?"

She murmured in a broken voice, "I'm so grateful for your love, John."

"There's nothing to be grateful for, my darling."

And then with a sensation of dismay Ruth realized that when he had called her his "darling" she had shrunk a little inwardly. That familiar term of endearment evoked another man who had loved her, and who still loved her.

But resolutely she told herself that George Dwight belonged to a life that, for good or ill, she had given up forever. George hated the career, that of the stage, that meant so much to her.

How different the attitude of the man now sitting by her side! Lord John Pendervil was almost as absorbed in the art of the theater as she was herself.

"And now look here, Ruth! I give you my word that I won't speak of this matter again until you are ready to discuss it. Indeed, I shall be more than satisfied if you say you will think it over, and don't want to make any decision for a long while."

He was pitifully anxious, she could hear it in his voice, to be left with that sweet companion, hope.

"I don't know why you're so good to me," she murmured.

And then there came a strange and touching expression on his ugly face. "I am not good to you, Ruth. It's simply that I love you, and that I long above all things in the world to be able to prove my love."

There followed a long silence between the two of them, and suddenly, with a gesture which was inspired wholly by gratitude—and with that second sight love sometimes gives to a man he knew that it was so—she thrust her hand through his arm and pressed up closely to him.

"We are going on being friends, aren't we, John, just as if we hadn't had this talk?"

"Why, of course we're going on being friends! Indeed, if you like, we'll pretend I've never told you how much I love you. We'll go right back to where we were half an hour ago. I don't think I've ever been so happy before in my whole life as I was when you left your hand in mine—I mean before I'd said a word to you."

She said tremulously, "I felt very happy, too."

"Did you, Ruth? Did you?" There was such a note of passion in his voice that she suddenly grew afraid.

"Let's go back into the hall," she suggested in a shaky voice.

He sensed her change of mood, and was troubled by it.

"Let us stay out here for just a little longer," he asked pleadingly. "And then you must promise to tell me when you've had enough of me!"

⁂

RUTH felt suddenly oppressed, and again she grew afraid. This was a new John Pendervil. No longer was he the easy-going, authoritative, and yet most kindly friend he had been till a short time ago. She made a determined effort to bring him back to their old terms of intimate, confiding friendship.

"I wish you thought better of Philip Trefane, John; I don't see how I can avoid going on being associated with him."

She looked at him with anxious eyes, and all at once he told himself that what she had just said might mean that she had suddenly made up her mind to be his wife. That possibility brought with it such an overwhelming flood of joy that for a moment he felt at charity with all the world, even with the man of whom he had so low an opinion as he had of his cousin.

"I'm sorry I've ever spoken a word to you against Philip, Ruth! It was wrong of me to have done so. I suppose the truth is that he and I don't click. Besides, half unconsciously I've always been jealous of Philip's good looks, and of the success I've know him to have with women. But it's beastly of me not to make allowances for him. Besides, there are some fine sides to him. He did very well in the war. Did any one ever tell you that?"

Ruth couldn't help smiling. "According to Iris he was a tremendous hero! Why, she said he ought to have won——" she knitted her brows.

"——the Victoria Cross?"

"Yes, the Victoria Cross."

"He is a brave man, Ruth. But of course——" he hesitated.

"Yes?"

"I feel that the fact he is brave makes him at times unscrupulous."

"You mean he's not afraid of the consequences?"

"However, all you have told me about him has to a certain extent changed my views. I did think he would try and get money out of you, and now I know that he has not done that."

Ruth remained silent. As a matter of fact her own view of Philip Trefane had altered for the worse. Also he had had a good deal of money from her.

He got up. "I won't stay any longer now." He was telling himself that she looked tired, and his love for her had in it a rare, because a most selfless, quality.

He took both her hands in his and looked down into her face. "We're still friends, Ruth?"

"We'll always be friends," she said firmly.

He left her, then, and she did not follow him to the door.

She made her way up to her room and, walking across to a window, watched the ungainly figure walking toward the lane which led to the manor house. She felt bewildered, uncertain, yet, on the whole, happier than she had been before he had spoken to her.

She told herself that she would almost certainly say yes to that quiet, and yet passionate appeal. In a sense she knew very little of life, but she had learned enough to know how rare a man was this man, and how rarer still is the kind of love he had offered her. Something had happened, though she had no idea what it was, which had in a certain degree spoiled what she thought was to be a perfect partnership with Philip Trefane. Her first warm liking had faded. She could not but see that he was almost terribly fond not so much of money but of what money can buy in the way of luxury and what he thought pleasure.

And then Ruth did a thing she had hardly ever done. She lay down on her bed and tried to go to sleep.

⁂

AFTER a while she actually did go to sleep, and had a curious dream.

She heard herself say, "I will marry you, John, and I'll do my best to make you happy. But you mustn't expect me to love you as you love me. In fact, I like you because you are more like a friend than a husband." She found herself in his arms, and she felt suddenly terrified, for he was holding her so tightly she could scarcely breathe. She would have done anything in the world to rush away and hide herself, and then all at once she gave a sobbing sigh of relief, for the face into which she was looking up changed—and instead of John Pendervil's face it was the smooth, young, eager face of her old love, George Dwight.

Then she awoke, trembling, and bewildered.

Plaintively she longed to be back where she had been only this morning, when she had run about singing and happy in the great empty castle, and filled with a sense of peace.

There fell on her ears the distant sound of the front door bell.

She went downstairs and took the note brought by one of the marchioness' footmen. It contained an invitation to dinner and she was asked to give a verbal answer. Though she shrank from seeing John Pendervil again so soon, she said that yes she would come.

The man smiled broadly as he pocketed her half crown. Miss Starling was a generous young lady and no mistake, very different from that proud madam, Mrs. Trefane, who bestowed a mean little gratuity.

Ruth thoroughly enjoyed the evening to which she had looked forward with something like nervous dread.

When after a while the two were left together Lord John had gone back, it seemed effortlessly, to his old ways. The first thing he said was this: "I have read that play with care, and what's more, I walked to the postoffice and got a call through to London. That play has been knocking about for a long time and it will have to be radically altered before the censor will allow it to be played. It would not do you the slightest good, either with the public or the press, to take that part. I therefore advise you strongly to turn it down. And there's another thing I feel I must tell you. Whoever gets it will receive a large fee from the dramatist. All this being so, I'm afraid I must revise my good opinion of my cousin Philip. I feel extremely angry with him for trying to stick you with that play. The playwright in question is, however, finishing a play which might be the very thing for you and I have already arranged that you shall see it before any one else."

His firm, determined, good humored voice brought with it a most agreeable sense of comfort and reassurance. They talked awhile and things got gradually back to what to herself she called their old happy ways. So much so that she felt quite sorry when he said: "I ordered my mother's car for you early. I think you ought to get back before there is any chance of the Trefanes having returned from London, and it might be best not to say anything about having come here to dinner. I should be sorry if Philip thought I had anything to do with your turning down that play. However, you're the best judge there of what you had better do and say about it."

When Ruth saw the Trefanes again they brought the news that Helen Bates had been to see an old schoolfellow in London and was going to stay on with her for a time.

Flush Poisons From Kidneys and Stop Getting Up Nights

Live Longer
Be Healthier, Happier

When you can get for 35 cents a supremely efficient and harmless stimulant and diuretic that will flush from your kidneys the waste matter, poisons and acid that are now doing you harm, why continue to break your restful sleep by getting up through the night? Just ask your druggist for Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules—but be sure and get GOLD MEDAL—right from Haarlem in Holland. Other symptoms of weak kidneys and irritated bladder are backache, puffy eyes, leg cramps, moist palms, burning or scanty passage.

A Crisis Is Nothing to Harlow, Child of Headlines

Storms Fail to Dim Her Star

By ROSALIND SHAFFER

Hollywood, Cal.

JEAN HARLOW symbolizes the glamor of Hollywood to the public in a way that no other screen star does. She is a completely Hollywood product; her only professional work has been entirely for films.

A child of the headlines, Jean has ridden out storms of publicity, seemingly insurmountable situations that would have wrecked the careers of half a dozen other stars. In the old days Hollywood humorists would say:

"Let's go shooting; they'll blame Mabel Normand anyway."

Mabel was the hard-luck artist of the town, but the things that happened to Mabel weren't half what's happened to Jean. Yet Jean Harlow has survived and is doing very well. A soft-spoken, friendly girl of evident breeding, she welcomes an interviewer cordially, offers hospitality, and settles down for an informal chatter.

The "Blonde Bombshell," as one of her films so aptly called her, burst on the Hollywood horizon when she was selected to play the rôle in "Hell's Angels" left vacant at the time Howard Hughes, millionaire producer, decided to junk his silent version and make the spectacular airplane feature over again with sound. Greta Nissen, Scandinavian star, looked great in the silent rôle, but her accent made her useless in the new sound version.

* * *

What Harlow did with that rôle is history. At the time it was so sensational people prophesied that Jean had made her film debut and her exit all in one picture. Hollywood and the film public never had seen anything quite that sexy before. It hasn't been willing to give her up since.

Jean Harlow, born Harlean Carpenter on March 3, 1911, is the daughter of Dr. Mont C. Carpenter and Jean Harlow Carpenter of Kansas City. Her mother's parents, well off, maintained a beautiful home in Kansas City, where her grandfather was a successful real estate dealer. At the time of her birth her parents were living with the Harlows, as Jean's mother was an only child, and the Harlows, always a closely knit family, did not wish to lose the company of their daughter. The baby granddaughter was the center of interest and attention, and the name Harlean was chosen as the nearest feminine equivalent for Harlow, which she would have been named if she had been born a boy. Fortunately for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, she wasn't.

When Jean was seven her parents separated. At ten Jean had her first look at the town that was to bring her fame, fortune, trouble, and happiness. Her mother took her to Los Angeles, where they resided for three years. During this period Jean attended the Hollywood School for Girls, now defunct. Becoming homesick, the two returned east and settled this time at Highland Park, north of Chicago. Jean was enrolled at Ferry Hall, Lake Forest, which she attended two years.

* * *

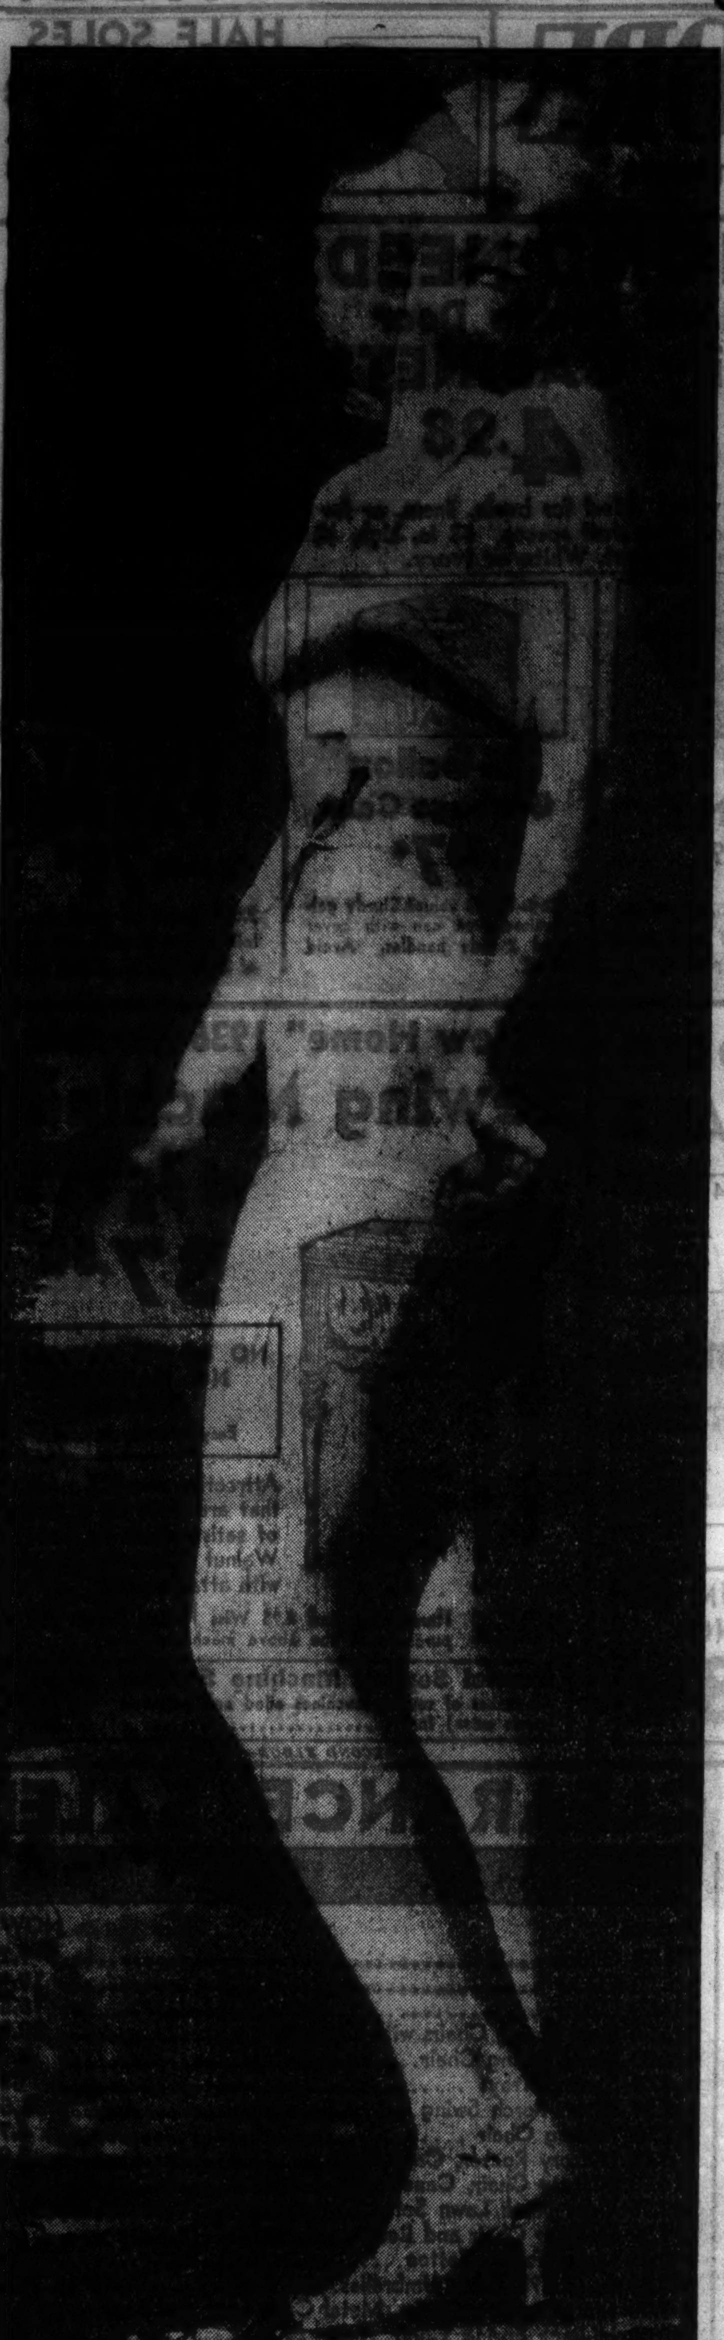
When she was sixteen she met Charles F. McGrew at a school dance. The couple fell in love in the tempestuous way that sixteen and twenty-one can. In September, 1927, they eloped to Waukegan and were married. At the time Jean gave her age as considerably more than sixteen. After she became a film star this incident arose to plague her with those extra years.

At the time the families accepted the marriage, though it was a shock to them. Jean and her new husband took up their residence with Jean's family in Highland Park. A little later they went to California, where Jean and her young husband lived in a fashionable district in Beverly Hills and entertained lavishly. Things did not go well. Jean sent for her mother, who took a house near by. Soon Jean and her husband separated, though not before Jean had taken her first flyer into films.

This came about through another young bride, Lucille Lee, who belonged to Jean's crowd. Lucille had worked in films. When she announced at a luncheon that she had to rush to keep an appointment at the Fox studio Jean was intrigued. She went along. Lucille introduced her to three men, who gave her letters to casting directors. Jean thought it a great joke. Later, on a dare, she used the letters, applied for work, and got it. She refused the first several calls, but one day decided to take a chance and go to the Fox studio, where she got some extra work. Then at Paramount she played an extra rôle in "Moran of the Marines," with Richard Dix and the aviatrix Ruth Elder. Next came work in two short comedies at Roach's. Soon Jean was offered a five-year contract and given leads in two-reelers, "Whoopee" and "The Unkissed Man."

* * *

With things going badly matrimonially, Jean turned to films to keep busy. One day a long-distance call from her grandfather in Kansas City reported that he, with her grandmother, had seen their darling grandchild prancing across the screen in black lace underwear. What made it still tougher on grandpa was that Jean had taken her mother's name, Jean Harlow, as her screen name. Grandpa Harlow made Jean promise to give up films. Tearfully she explained things to Hal Roach, who tore up her contract, and for eight months the hand of fate was thwarted. Then quite unexpectedly she got a call to come to work for a bit in Clara Bow's vehicle, "The Saturday Night Kid." She went; and then came a few days' work at the Christie studio. Ben Lyon and James Hall met her there. They wanted her to meet Howard Hughes, who was looking for someone to take Greta Nissen's rôle in "Hell's Angels."



Delightfully graceful though she is, Jean prefers acting to mere posing.

* * *

"It was one of those things," says Jean in speaking of how she got the rôle after a film test. Once she knew it was certain she phoned Grandpa Harlow and had a long talk with him. She told him how unhappy she was and how much she needed to be busy and how she liked the films. He finally consented. The platinum blonde was on her way at last, though what a devious, perilous, discouraging, and headlined way she could scarcely have foreseen. Incidentally, the term "platinum blonde" was the inspiration of one Lincoln Quarberg, then press agent for Howard Hughes and now working for the Selznick corporation. Harlow's type of hair, called tow-headed on children, was something new in films. It took the light like a flame. It was no trick to photograph.

* * *

The release of the three-million-dollar epic of the air, "Hell's Angels," was a huge success. Overnight Jean Harlow found herself a celebrity, though her rôle was so salacious and provocative that it stamped her with a tag that she has never escaped. It was the beginning of the misfortunes that have harried her career before the camera.

"Hell's Angels" was released in 1930. In 1929 Jean had sued Charles McGrew for divorce, mentioning drunkenness and cruelty. A settlement of $200,000 was agreed on and alimony of $375 a month. Her final decree was granted in January, 1931. When there was some delinquency about payments Jean told a reporter: "I gave McGrew back his $100,000 trust fund; I'd rather have his good will, and I can make my own way, anyhow."

Howard Hughes never employed Harlow in a film again, but loaned her most lucratively to other studios. It looked as if the tag would never be removed; Columbia used her in a film, "Platinum Blonde," directed by Frank Capra. Fox used her in "Goldie"; "Iron Men" at Universal; "Public Enemy" with Cagney; "Three Wise Girls" at Columbia, with Bobby Williams, since dead, Loretta Young, Mae Clarke, and Marie Prevost. Then "Beast of the City," with Walter Huston, at Columbia; all of which films used her as a blonde vampire. Unhappy in this continued line of rôles, Jean sought permission to take the offer of a tour of personal appearances, which she did for eighteen months. Her contract was bought from Howard Hughes by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer after she was used in "The Secret Six," a film with Wallace Beery and a then rising young player, Clark Gable.

* * *

The man behind the buying of Jean's contract was Paul Bern, important Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, who was immensely attracted to the vital Harlow. In this lay the germ of the tragedy that was to cost Bern his life and Jean Harlow a narrow escape from the loss of her career. Bern, able, intelligent, well educated, but generally accepted as a platonic friend by the exotic women of the screen with whom he liked to be seen, fell deeply in love with Harlow. His devotion in years past had been marked for Barbara La Marr. It was Bern who assisted Barbara when she was dying and almost deserted. Bern had helped the tragic Mabel Normand with his friendship and with business counsel after the Taylor murder case had ruined Mabel's film career. Pola Negri had turned to Bern for counsel and advice; Estelle Taylor had valued his friendship. Jetta Goudal, French star, called by Cecil De Mille "a cocktail of emotions," found her only understanding and sympathy in Bern. Hollywood, accustomed to this peculiar devotion of Bern, adjudged his attention to Harlow just another of those things. The film world was amazed with the announcement of their engagement, for Bern had never been considered exactly husband material.

Under the able advice of Bern, Jean Harlow began her career at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "The Red-Headed Woman." Bern, realizing the danger of that stamped title, platinum blonde, if the career was to progress, deftly seized this rôle for her and arranged for the use of a red wig. Harlow scored. After the completion of that film the couple were married, quietly as Hollywood would consider it.

The bridegroom at the time of their marriage, July 2, 1932, was 42 years old, twice the age of his bride. As is common in film circles, the honeymoon was deferred because of pressing studio work. The couple went to live in Bern's charming home at 9820 Easton drive in Benedict canyon, that beautiful wooded canyon that harbors the homes of Harold Lloyd, Carl Laemmle, and others of film prominence, north of the exclusive Beverly Hills section.

* * *

Jean began work on "Red Dust"; Bern was busy with his duties as studio executive. Rumbles came along the Hollywood grapevine almost from the first that all was not well; and, for obvious reasons previously stated, no one was very much surprised. Your correspondent met the couple at a preview at the Ritz theater at this period; the change in Bern was startling. He seemed in a daze, hardly spoke to old friends. On his arm leaned the lovely, scintillant Harlow, smiling and greeting every one.

The terrible dénouement occurred on Sept. 6, 1932. Two months after the marriage the bridegroom was found dead in his room, a gun clutched in his hand, and a note, addressed to his wife, reading:

"Dearest Dear: Unfortunately, this is the only way to make good the frightful wrong I have done you and to wipe out my abject humiliation. I love you. Paul. You understand that last night was only a comedy."

Thus was born one of Hollywood's historic mysteries. Holiday crowds coming home from the dual holiday, Sunday and Labor day, found papers spread with headlines carrying the names of Jean Harlow and Paul Bern. Hollywood was rocked by the biggest scandal it had ever known since it became a big-time town.

Details were forthcoming. On the Saturday preceding the shooting Jean stopped at the home of her mother following her day's work at the studio. She was tired. Bern, talking to her on the phone, urged her to stay there and rest rather than come home on Sunday. Jean later denied any quarrel between the two. Early Monday morning one of the servants, Carmichael by name, discovered the body and summoned studio executives, who rushed to the house and later summoned the authorities. Jean was notified, and collapsed. She attempted to hurl herself from the high balcony of her mother's house, which overlooks a steep rise of ground, but was restrained. She gave no explanation of the suicide note. Her stepfather, Marino Bello, said, "If you marry a girl and a short time after commit suicide, that is something to apologize for," and viewed the note as an apology for wrongs at which he hinted.

* * *

As the storm of publicity raged about Jean's head, Bello expostulated: "I don't like the way this is being handled. Jean belongs to the public, and they have a right to know the truth. I see no reason for all this mystery." However, studio executives, or pressure of some sort from potentates within the industry, persuaded him to the course of silence. It was an extremely difficult situation for the studio; Paul Bern was an intimate friend of Irving Thalberg and Louis B. Mayer.

With Paul Bern, her second husband, whose strange death brought tragedy into her life.

Yet Jean Harlow was a valuable piece of property, with millions involved as an investment in her two films and in her possible future if she could be saved from this catastrophe. Her stepfather, Bello, was dubious. "I believe Jean's contract will be broken very soon." He reckoned without the powerful forces at work in her defense; without the amazing stamina and courage of the girl herself.

* * *

Hollywood gossips still like to mull over the Bern mystery and ask each other questions in the case that have never been answered. Was there a second suicide note, lengthy and explaining the first, as the gardener, who was later hushed up, stated to a motion picture magazine editor who lived in the neighborhood? Who drove the powerful sedan at such high speed from the house at midnight on Sunday night that skid marks 100 feet long were found in the road? Was Paul Bern married to Dorothy Millette, the woman whom he had supported as his wife for nearly twenty years, who committed suicide from a Sacramento river boat soon after the news of his death was broadcast?

Why did Henry Bern, brother of Paul, who came from New York in hot haste to ask a lot of questions about the mystery, suddenly become silent and leave town without giving reporters any of the promised information that he was to divulge? There are many more whys and wherefores, but they will probably never be answered. Bern's personal physician, who promised revelations that would solve the mystery, hastened to town from a vacation; but he made some perfunctory statements concerning Bern's melancholia.

* * *

Marino Bello was wrong; Jean's contract was not broken, and she returned to work on Sept. 13, not two weeks after the tragedy, after begging for a chance to work to take her mind off the matter. No closeups were made, but long shots with Clark Gable and the rest of the cast were made. Jean was protected from interviewers while on the set. The lightning rod that had attracted the thunderbolt was undamaged. Her picture was completed and was one of Harlow's big successes. The public did not blame the candle for burning the moth.

Behind the camera on "Red Dust" was Hal Rosson, ace camera man, who had a fine chance to know and form an estimate of Jean during the time she was going through this trouble. He was there when she made "Hold Your Man" and "Blonde Bombshell," following "Red Dust." Meanwhile the acquaintance ripened on the golf links at the Lakeside Country club.

Jean returned to the social life of Hollywood, being seen about with the beaux of the town; W. S. Van Dyke, director; a famous Italian air ace, and many others. Max Baer in a foolish moment announced that he was going to marry her when he was divorced. Jean promptly denied it.

Not long after the golf course romance with Hal Rosson came to sudden blooming when the couple eloped to Yuma by plane and were married on Sept. 18, 1933. They took no friends with them, but had as their witnesses the pilot of the plane and the manager of the air field where they landed.

December of the same year found rumors already started about the couple's planning to separate, but it was not until the following May 7, 1934, at the wedding of Carmelita Geraghty and Carey Wilson, that Jean announced that they had separated. Jean again denied rumors of an engagement to Max Baer. The divorce was not obtained until March 12, 1935, Jean mentioning Rosson's sarcasm and mental cruelty and proneness to read papers in bed when she wanted to sleep. Asked about a possible marriage, Jean told reporters: "I should get burned three times and let myself in for more trouble! I will never marry again as long as I stay in films, and I'll stay in films as long as the public wants me."

* * *

Ever since last year Jean has been silent on queries about a possible engagement between her and William Powell, but when your interviewer in Jean's garden the other day stopped a friendly chat long enough to ask a pointed question, Jean laughed and said: "The answer is no. I won't marry as long as I am in films."

Carried away with the whirlwind of Harlow's romances, we have forgotten to mention that there was a third crisis in Jean Harlow's affairs when the much advertised League of Decency criticized films starring Mae West, Jean Harlow, and others. Some whole scenes from "The Girl from Missouri" had to be reshot to pass the censors. Jean at the time was frank enough to say that it was a relief to her, as she'd like a chance at acting instead of having her body photographed. Harlow again scored where lesser souls would have fallen by the wayside.

"Reckless" followed "The Girl from Missouri," with William Powell, and here the Powell-Harlow romance had its inception. Then came "China Seas," with Gable and Beery; then "Wife Versus Secretary," with Gable and Myrna Loy; "Riff Raff," with Spencer Tracy, and "Suzy," with Franchot Tone and Cary Grant.

On the day we saw Jean, who had just moved from her pretentious white house with its fabulous white furnishings, including a white fur rug on the bathroom floor, into a small but charming home in Beverly Hills, done in the Spanish manner. She lives with her mother, who is now separated from Marino Bello. The old house was too large for two women, Jean thought.

"We didn't entertain, and almost never used the dining room; we're a family of tray eaters," says Jean.

The Jean Harlow of today is a mature person; the harum-scarum love of fun and life has been tempered by the experiences of the last few years.

Harlow as a child.

NED WAYBURN'S
Dancing Teachers choose Nonspi
TO BE SURE!

* Ned Wayburn's charming dancing teachers are careful in choosing a preparation to overcome underarm moisture. They must keep themselves fresh through a strenuous evening, guard their frocks against underarm stains... and yet use a deodorant that does not irritate their flawless skin.

They've found that when deodorants are used half-strength, they give only half-way results. So they choose Nonspi which can be used full strength, because:

1. Nonspi has been pronounced entirely safe by highest medical authority.
2. Nonspi can be used full strength by women whose delicate skin forces them to use deodorants half-strength, with only half-way results.
3. Nonspi protection lasts from two to five days ..and you can depend on it.
4. Nonspi's siphon-top bottle prevents contamination. And there's no dripping or waste with this patented Nonspi applicator.

To be sure of protection... to be safe from skin irritation... insist on genuine Nonspi at all drug and department stores in the U.S.A. and Canada. It's 35c and 60c a bottle. Slightly more in Canada.

Being Chorus Girl in Films Is Hard Work

Strenuous Rehersals and Irregular Employment Are Part of Routine.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Watching a dance director pick a chorus of beautiful girls for a big film production is an experience for which plenty of people would pay big money. Hollywood had a double occasion of that sort the last week when Leroy Prinz, dance director at Paramount, selected 350 girls to be used in "Champagne Waltz" and "The Big Broadcast of 1937."

Over a thousand girls answered the call for dancing girls at 6 o'clock in the morning. They crowded the pavements in front of the studio and filled the street, the hallways, and the offices of the studio building where the casting department functions.

"Every girl at heart is a chorus girl," says Prinz, and it looked like it, for no sultan ever had such an assortment of beauty of all types from which to choose. Redheads, the occasional platinum blonde, the brownettes, brunettes, and real blondes; the tall, small, slender, and seductive, many beautiful enough to make an observer wonder how they possibly could be passed up in the struggle for screen fame. Yet cold statistics show that not one in a thousand ever gets past being dancers, if they get that far.

Life of a Dancer in Films About Two Years.

"There are about 2,000 dancing girls in Hollywood at present," says the dance director. "Their chances for crashing film rôles are very small. The life of a dancer in films is, at most, two years, frequently three months. There is no department in films in which the turnover is so rapid as among the dancers. Styles of dancing change. Types needed for different ensembles vary. The girls themselves tire of the work which is strenuous in the extreme. They must reherse for hours at a time with scarcely a break, because film work is more rapid than stage work in preparation.

"Girls who dance in films can't have any fun going on dates. When her day's work is over it's bed for her. Our rule is 9 o'clock bedtime, for the work is so tiring that if a girl doesn't keep curfew rules she doesn't photograph well in the morning, and the strenuous routine demands alert, rested bodies."

An enormous number of girls who work in dancing ensembles develop varicose veins, foot trouble, and various ailments. It is a rare girl who stands the strain for two years. Their pay is not large, ranging from $50 a week up, according to ability or specialty numbers that can be used.

Prinz Decides Whether Dancers Are In or Not.

Returning to the tryouts, one finds the girls clothed in pajamas, shorts, play suits, bathing suits, any sort of loose garment that displays the body and allows freedom of movement. Prinz sits in one corner of the rehersal hall, with its bars and mirrors about the walls, and takes the names of all applicants.

Assistants herd the girls into groups of forty, which are lined up before the director. Stripping to shorts or bathing suits, the girls walk slowly before the director. In sixes they are taken as partners to dance by six chorus boys trained by Prinz. A bored pianist pounds out a melody and the dancing begins. Only a few measures are necessary. Prinz signals and the boys go on to the next six girls. A "no" or a "yes" is noted after each girl's name.

Director Rates Girls at Time Try-outs Are Given.

Five hundred were selected by this system. These then passed in review again and received a rating on their name cards. Prinz rates them first as "A preferreds." These are good looking, dance well, and have style and good carriage. In short, they are as near perfection as a harassed dance director can find them.

The next group includes the "A four plus" girls. They're beautiful and can dance, but have some minor defect. Then come the "A three plus." They're not so good but can be improved by training. Other ratings follow through two more classifications. All these ratings are confidential and not known to the girls themselves.

Asked about his way of rating them, Prinz says: "First, a girl must be beautiful. That is, she must have a face that you'd look at again and again. Not perfection classically, but beautiful enough to make the customers feel they're getting their money's worth. She also must have the ability to wear clothes well, or her beauty doesn't mean anything. A girl has to know the small tricks of setting herself off well.

"Second, a girl must carry herself well. A dancer can't slouch or the snap goes out of her performance.

"Third, she must have personality, the factor that lends brightness and charm to her face and form.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER SOCIETY

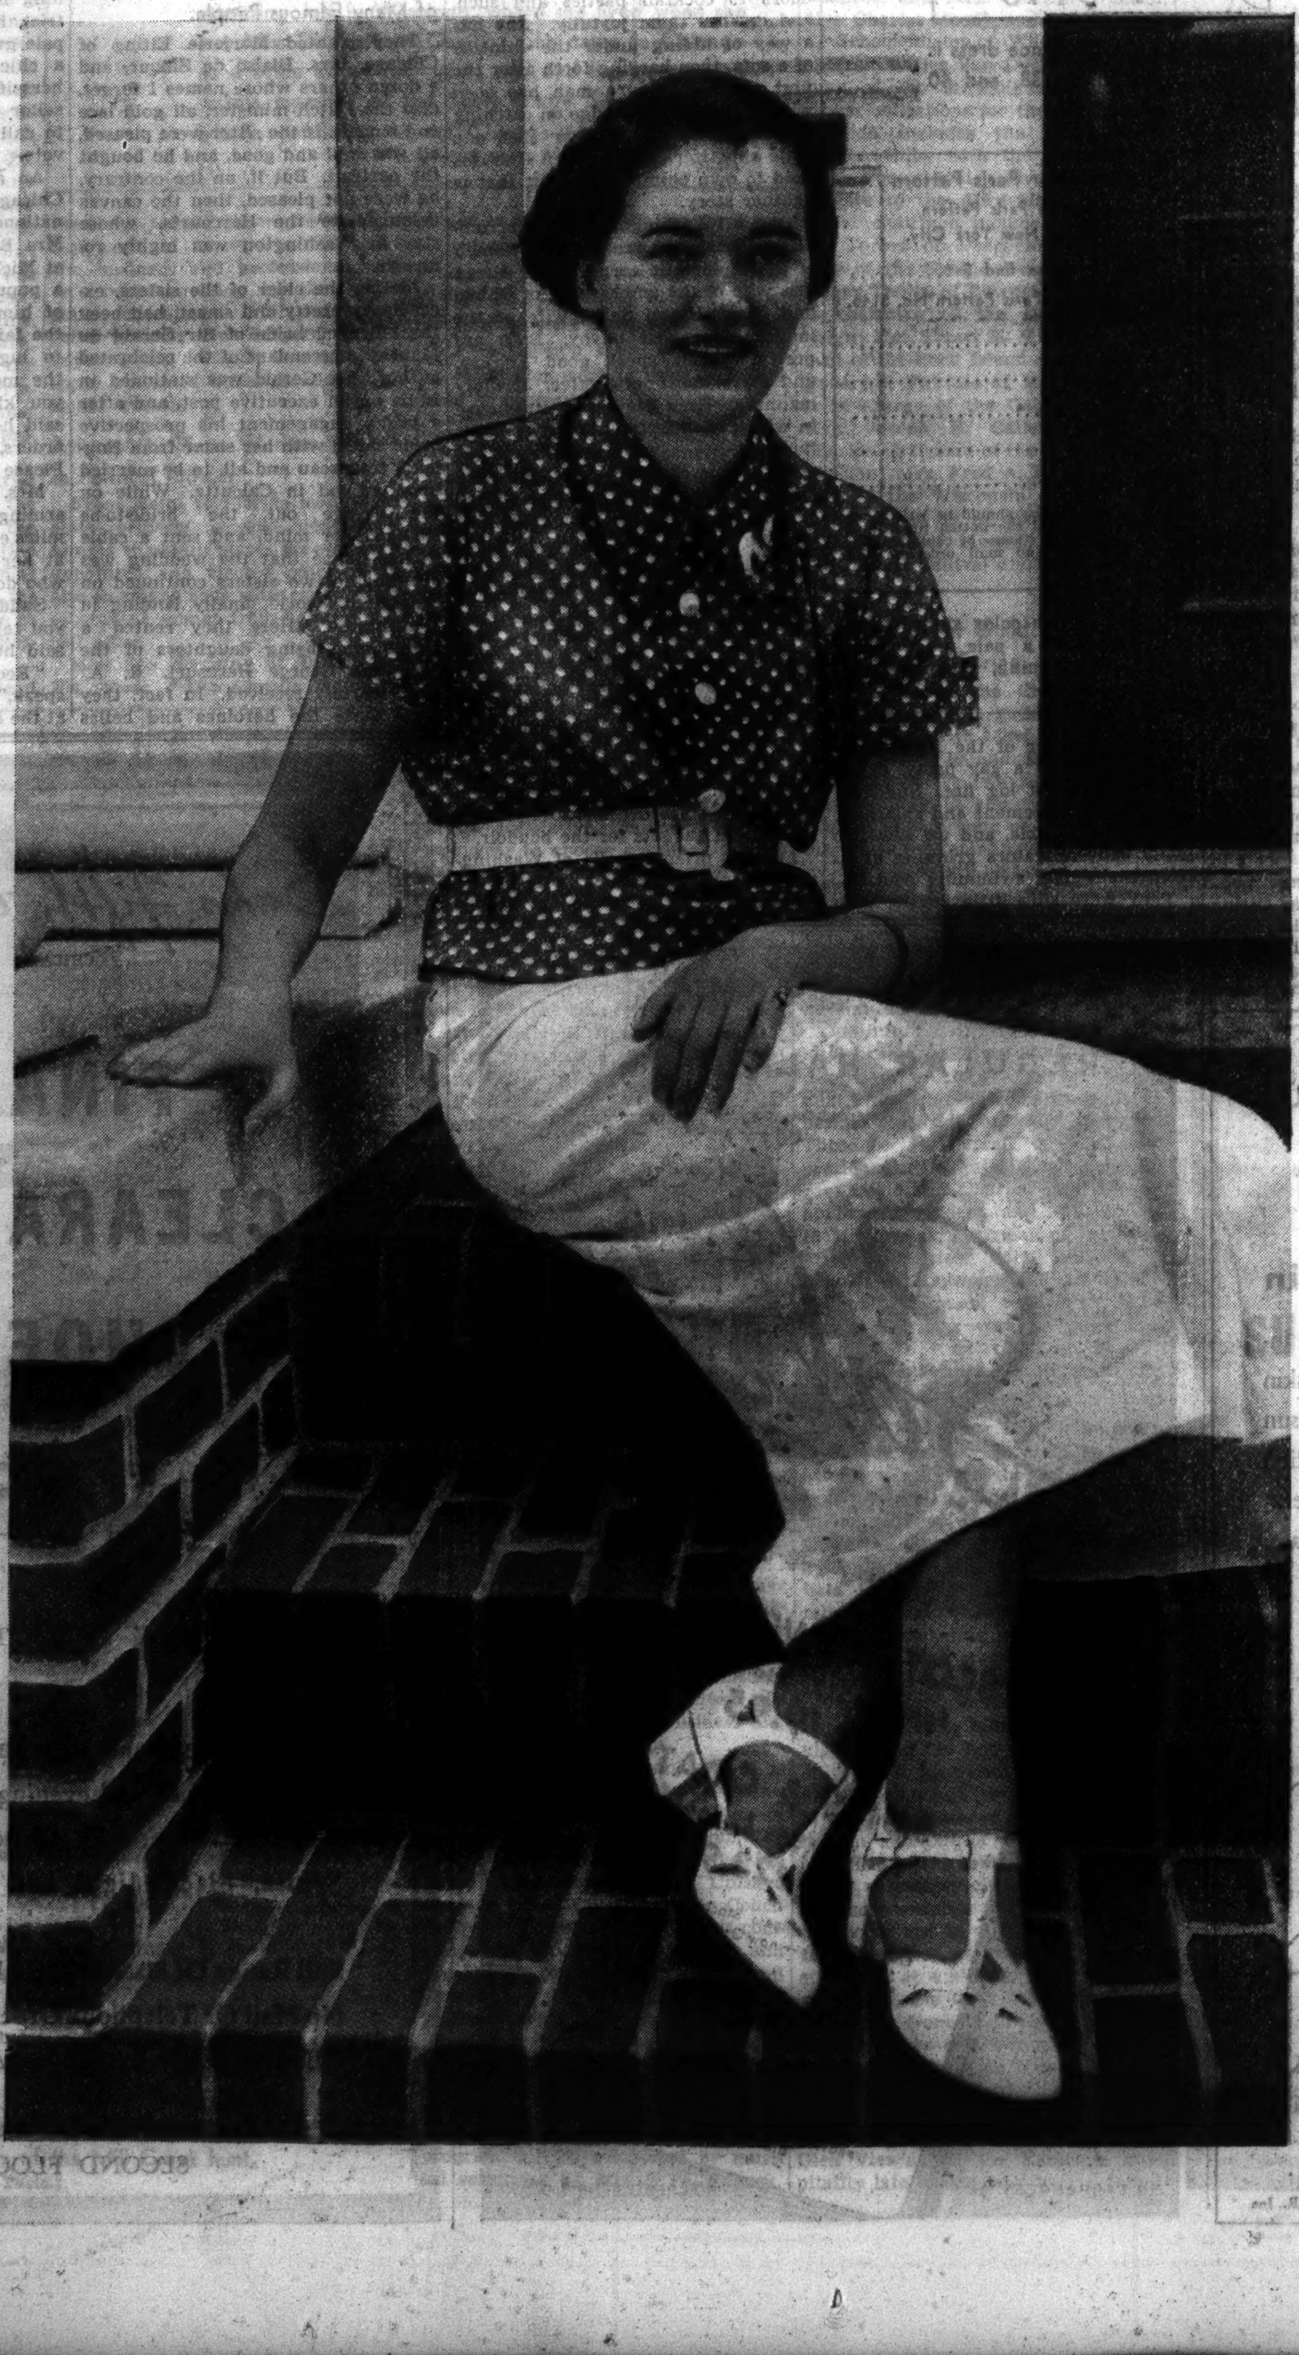
JULY 19, 1936.

Miss Margaret Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy S. Wright of Hinsdale, takes a sun bath and dries her suit after a dip in the pool at the Hinsdale Golf club.

At right: Miss Nancy Lewis, daughter of Edward Z. Lewis, ready to dive into the Glen View club pool on the day of the meeting there of the Evanston Junior league.

Dancing is an exercise for which the weather is never too warm, if one is the age of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Thomas' pretty daughter, Jane (below). Here she is, all ready for a party given recently by the Colony club of the University of Chicago.

TRIBUNE PHOTOS



At right: Miss Mary Elizabeth King smiles in anticipation of the happy time she will have next autumn when she enters Radcliffe college on a scholarship. The eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. King Jr. of Winnetka was awarded the scholarship last month shortly after her graduation from high school.

BRIDE OF THE MONTH

Mrs. Robert Edward Walsh is the former Miss Catherine Marie Palandech. The wedding took place on July 11 at St. Bride's church at high mass, with a reception following at the Drake hotel. The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Palandech of 7617 Phillips avenue, was voted the most popular girl on the campus at the University of Illinois. The bridegroom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Walsh of 7151 Luella avenue, is a graduate of the University of Chicago.

Society Going Abroad Despite General Unrest

Old Fashioned Custom of Steamer Presents Is Revived by New Exodus.

By Cousin Eve.

ONE hops off these days for the adventures of travel on land and sea. Never have ocean liners sailed so crowded. Does one go east, or does one sail west, the ships are packed. A possible war in Asia only seems to encourage the stampeders. Hey! Hey! What matters a little war more or less between friends!

And the old-fashioned custom of steamer gifts blooms anew. Scores of intriguing boxes arrive, in one a little Red Ridinghood outfit to keep off the tropical rains. Looks like Venetian glass, and is more chic than carrying an umbrella.

One of the loveliest afternoons of the spring was a drive to Lisle, Ill., to visit the Morton Arboretum. I would say we motored southwest of Chicago, about 30 miles. We were a small party of friends, and some Washington guests of Mrs. Joseph Cudahy who was waiting at the beautiful new administration building for us.

The Morton Arboretum is not a haphazard purchase of forest land, but a scientific collection of woody plants founded by the late Joy Morton. Trees were Mr. Morton's hobby, and for the study of these he left a foundation. This is carried forward by his only daughter, Mrs. Cudahy, who is chairman of trustees, and Mrs. Joy Morton, Mark Morton, Edward Stearns, Joseph M. Cudahy, Wirt Morton, Sterling Morton, and Daniel Peterkin. Clarence Godshalk is the superintendent of the park.

Library Has Collection of Horticultural Works.

First of all we admired the splendid office building, the information office where planting problems may be considered without charge. Then came a superlative library where there is a large collection of horticultural works, and current publications on shining tables in a great, well lighted room whose walls are covered with old prints and fine engravings.

In the Herbarium are dried specimens of the flowers, fruit, and foliage of all woody plants growing in northern Illinois. Also indigenous flora, ferns, mosses, fungi, and grasses are piled here.

Finally we went out in the garden where were exquisite young fruit trees covered with blossoms pink and white. Ahead of us ranged in serried rows on each side of a grassy lane were short hedges, specimens of every known hedge that grows in this climate. After this, we took to our three motors, and drove up and down and across the 700 acres which are the Arboretum, on roads which are leafy lanes full of charm. Mr. Godshalk, the superintendent, gave a little travel talk on this and that principally on the difficulties of planting fir trees and their tendency to winter sunburn, also on the replantings according to four classes. First in systematic botanical landscaping; second, in geographical groups; third, in ornamental planting for landscaping, and, fourth, in economic plots where trees are tested for their timber value. All this was most thrilling. I have always loved trees, and wish the world were covered with them, so this trip to the Arboretum was a red letter day affair. The woods were blue with blue bells. Violets and the May apple flourished, too. Nobody lays waste these banks of flowers, so they grow lovelier from year to year.

Joy Morton's Mausoleum Among Peaceful Scenes.

Mrs. Joy Morton was in California, but Mrs. Cudahy took her guests to her father's house for a lemonade. It was one of those really hot days. To the left of the house, in a grove of most beautiful trees, is the mausoleum of Joy Morton, peaceful among the scenes and friends he loved best.

An interesting fashion of the times is the liking that people one meets in high places have for strange pets. One Sunday this spring I was sitting in the living room of Langley Park, Washington, D. C., the home of Leander McCormick-Goodheart, commercial councilor of the British embassy. We were a gay party, drinking tea before a log fire. Suddenly there was a movement and splashing on a window table, and we saw two lively baby alligators grinning at us from their glass swimming pool.

They were silly little beasts, with tiny markings on their slim bodies, and snapping jaws. The British councilor found them amusing to look at, and quite good company in odd moments, he said.

The Italian ambassador, Augusto Rosso, who has a beautiful embassy far out on 16th street, has an Italian garden, and in it a fleet of turtles sunning themselves vigorously. Signor Rosso also has two silky spaniels quite the most spoiled darlings in Washington. I asked the ambassador if the pampered ones knew any tricks, beyond certain cajoleries, such as teasing for food at table.

"No," said the handsome Italian, "we do not like dogs to do tricks. Everything perfectly natural is our idea." I quite agreed with him.

Chicagoans Have Collection of Unusual Tropical Fish.

Here, at home in Chicago, Col. and Mrs. Ralph James have had fascinating Pekingese dogs, but the two really specialize in tropical fish. Every room has its bowls, great and small, of gleaming bodies, which, after all, are as decorative as book shelves, if not more so. Nobody could think of being lonely in a library full of favorite books, and the silent companionship of scores of pretty, shining, opalescent tropical fish enchants the James family. How many know that there are gangster fish, who are out to kill their brother and sister fish? And that the little boy fishes are quite choosey and selective in picking their brides?

One of the oddest pets, and perhaps the most pampered I ever heard of, was a goose owned by the late Richard T. Crane Jr.—Dick—a so-charming kind man. Somehow, Mr. Crane met up with this bird and they became fast friends. The goose spent his winters in Chicago, his summers in Ipswich. He had his own goose quarters, and I have heard that Mr. Crane's real reason for keeping a private car was to transport in safety the goose and an old dog that belonged to his father-in-law, Harlow Higinbotham.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fenton became owners of Mona, a great big, personable turtle, through no fault of their own. They bought a house in Lake Forest, originally built by the Albert A. Spragues, from the Byron Harveys. After they were installed Mona came to light. "J'y suis, j'y reste," she seemed to say. And stay she did. The Fentons did not especially care for turtles, but it seemed to be like getting rid of an old automobile—it's yours and nobody else wants it.

Mona Has Habit of Crashing Cocktail Parties and Such.

Then, too, Mona likes to come indoors to cocktail parties and such, and crashes them joyfully. She has a way of hiding under the chintzes of a sofa, then barging forth after the first round. Many a man has been willing to sign the pledge on catching a glimpse of Mona, after just one little appetizer. The Hayden Harrises used to own chimpanzees, but that is another story.

Two of Washington's most accomplished hostesses are oriental women of the diplomatic corps, Mme. Alfred Sze, wife of the ambassador of China, and Mme. Hirosi Saito, wife of the imperial Japanese envoy. Both are pretty women, speak good English, and have most attractive, friendly manners. Each has a beautiful house in which to entertain, and a brilliant husband.

Both have children. Alice, the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sze, was on the New York stage this winter in the "Lady Precious Stream," one of the plays of the season. Alice, too, is greatly admired in New York society.

When Mme. Saito returns from Japan, she brings exquisite gifts from her native land for her American friends—beautiful party bags, kimonos, too adorable to wear, and fans. And Mme. Sze brings treasures of China to her Washington friends, the sheerest handmade lingerie, chiffon hankies that are dreams, lovely ornaments, and gadgets for the boudoir.

Another oriental belle of Washington is Mme. Razputiana, wife of the Siamese minister, a young beauty with ebon hair and smooth skin deeper than ivory, and perfect features. She was painted this winter by those two English artist sisters, Aletha and Ann Harcourt of London, who were in Washington taking artistic shots at all the beauties of the younger set.

Two Have Done Portraits of Many Famous People.

They painted Marjorie Elting of Chicago, Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, and a dozen others whose names I forget, also the Dutch minister, all gold lace and medals. If the sitter were pleased, all was well and good, and he bought the portrait. But if, on the contrary, he were not pleased, then the canvas belonged to the Harcourts, whose stay in Washington was highly romantic.

Aletha, the elder of the sisters, exceedingly pretty and smart, had been the affianced bride of Sir Gerald du Maurier, descendant of the celebrated author. Sir Gerald was stationed in India on an executive post, and after a year's engagement his prospective bride sailed with her sister from England, trousseau and all, to be married upon arrival in Calcutta. While on the voyage out, the bride-to-be changed her mind, and sent a cable to her fiancé that the wedding was off. So the two sisters continued on around the world, finally landing in Washington. Here they rented a studio and, being daughters of the renowned George Harcourt, R. A., were warmly received. In fact, they were quite the heroines and belles of the Washington season. They gave many parties themselves, also an exhibition of their paintings. Meanwhile, the beautiful white satin wedding dress and veil never have left their box.

For dinner and luncheon cards this spring, Mrs. Jacob Baur, who is running for congress in the Ninth district, has a new idea. She uses her pale green campaign card, which has a chic little full length picture of herself in trim walking suit, with sailor hat, brief case in hand, about to call on a neighbor and ask for a vote.

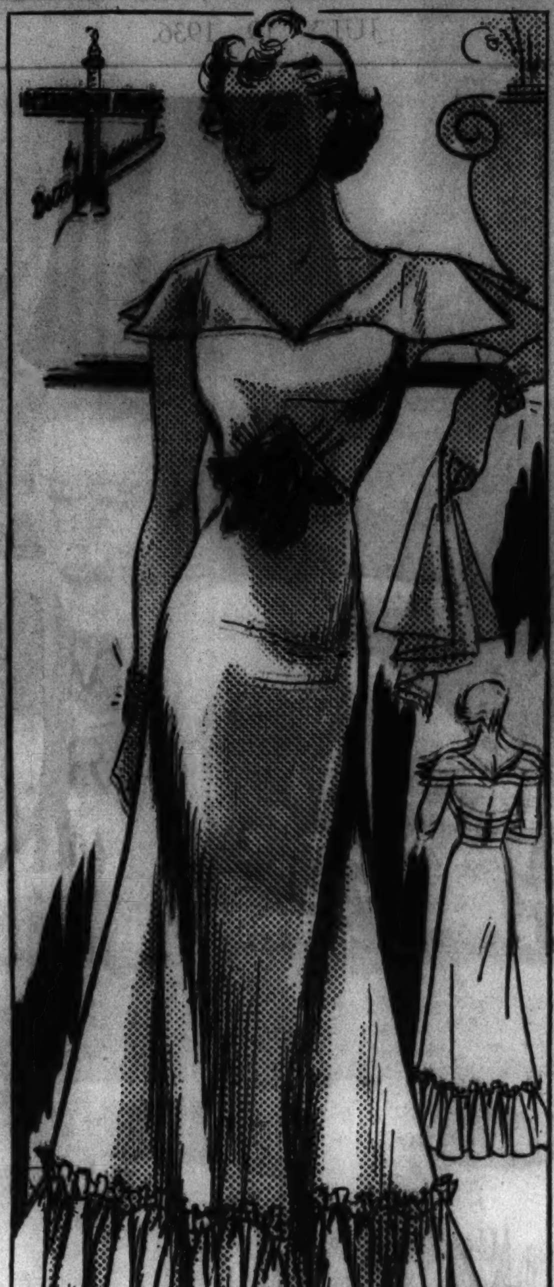
An amusing story of the brilliant Chicago member of the Republican national committee is on its rounds. Mrs. Baur was going to a house party at Michigan City, and her escort was a popular beau who thought highly of himself. They left by train, and the fair Bertha gave many orders as to luggage, seats, etc., until finally the mere man became irate. "Will you kindly let me run this trip?" said he, "and allow me to give the orders, and tell you what to do. Please don't say another word."

Mrs. Baur settled herself with disarming sweetness, but about twenty miles east of Michigan City she looked at her escort with the gaze of one who doesn't quite understand.

Suddenly he came to. "Why didn't you tell me we passed the station?" said he.

"Because you asked me not to speak," she replied, full of secret joy at the dénouement.

Paris Pattern Dance Frock Is Ideal for Schoolgirls



No. 5146—The Paris pattern for this dance dress is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Girls who are getting ready to go away to school in September will need dance dresses that are not too formal and yet are smart and charming. Girls who want a new party frock, although it may be to wear at home, will find this Paris pattern, No. 5146, as delightful for them as it is for the girl who is going away to school.

This dress should be made in the newest French style of the original model, with the blouse in pale pink and the skirt of dark blue or black silk crepe, if you can do so. It may, of course, be made all of one color and one material. I have had a rose drawn at the waistline in front, which I suggest you get and attach if you can, a pink rose if you make the blouse pink. If you like, you may make the blouse of printed silk and the skirt of one color silk. A dark red skirt and a pale pink blouse would be stunning, and new and charming, too.

THE SNAPPER SNAPPED

Stunning Miss Carlotta Lagorio was about to take a picture herself when the photographer took this picture of her one afternoon at the Arlington Park Jockey club, which is having its annual racing season this month. Miss Lagorio, one of last season's debutantes, and her mother, Mrs. Frank Lagorio, often motor to the park from their summer home at Delavan lake.

Annual Lenox Horse Show Starts Friday

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Robert G. Stewart of Chicago and Eden hill, Stockbridge, is vice president of the Lenox horse show association which is to hold its ninth annual show at the Dan R. Hanna farm, midway between Lenox and Stockbridge, Friday and Saturday. Miss Kate Cary is honorary president, and R. Jay Flick of New York, president. Mr. Stewart has a large stable of riding and driving horses at Eden hill. There will be forty-eight classes in the show. Twenty-five years ago the son of Senator Mark Hanna of Cleveland had over one hundred saddle and driving horses on the thousand acre farm which he gave to his fourth wife, Molly Covington Hanna, as a wedding present. Her estate recently sold the property to a Cleveland syndicate.

Mrs. George O. Forbes of Rockford, Ill., and Mrs. Aubrey T. Barnes, formerly of Rockford, were among the twenty-five guests whom Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett [Margaret C. Kendrick] entertained at luncheon at Terrace Inn, North Egremont, in honor of Mrs. Albert Britt of Galesburg, Ill., and Mrs. Donald C. Richberg of Chevychase, Md.

Dr. and Mrs. Britt are leaving Great Pine farm tomorrow for their summer home at Nonquit, Cape Cod.

Mrs. George O. Forbes and Mrs. Bernhard Hoffmann, who is the former Irene Botsford of Chicago, contributed papers on garden literature at a meeting of the Lenox garden club council at the Sedgwick mansion, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William Ellery Sedgwick of Cambridge. Mr. Sedgwick, who is on the Harvard faculty, is the fifth generation from father to son that has cultivated the Sedgwick garden. A hedge that his great-great-grandfather, Judge Theodore Sedgwick, set out in 1785, is still thriving.

Count and Countess Giovanni Cardelli of Chicago were the honored guests at a dinner which Albert Spalding, the violinist, and Mrs. Spalding gave at Aston Magna, Great Barrington. Mr. and Mrs. Spalding left yesterday for Hollywood, Cal., where, on Thursday and Friday, Mr. Spalding is to give recitals in the Bowl.

◆

Mrs. Hermon B. Butler of Winnetka is visiting Mrs. Frederick T. West at Court hill, Pittsfield.

Among those who registered at Williams inn, Williamstown, were Dr. and Mrs. Budd C. Cochran of Evanston, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Heald, Miss Jennie and Norvel Heald of Oak Park, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Falk, and Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Blair of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. James Monroe Walker and two sons of Dedham, Mass., were guests last week of Mr. Walker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Ransom Walker at [illegible] Acres, Stockbridge.

Frank Hibbards Give Welcoming Party for Honore Palmers

WATCH HILL, R. I.

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard of Chicago gave a luncheon as a welcoming party for Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer and Mrs. Palmer's sister, Mrs. Walter Keith, at the Misquamicut Golf club. The Palmers are now installed in one of the hills' most charming villas, and have found many friends in the summer colony. The Hibbards' guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson E. Perin of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Hope of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Parsons Cross of Providence, and Mr. Walter Herrick of New York.

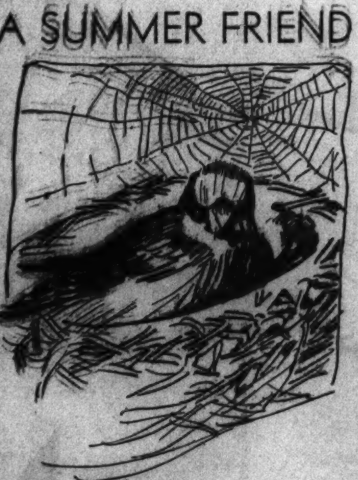
Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy Jr. of Chicago arrived Tuesday to occupy Stonyhurst, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Rea of New York which they have taken for the season.

Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr., of Chicago entertained Mrs. Wilson G. Wing of Providence over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer had their son, Mr. Honore Palmer Jr., of New York, and the former's niece, Mrs. John Wentworth of Chicago, as week-end guests at Arcadia.

Mr. Frank Hibbard and Mr. J. Russell Forgan are entered in the men's invitation golf tournament at the Misquamicut Golf club this week-end. Mr. Forgan is paired with Mr. Allen T. West of St. Louis, and Mr. Hibbard with a Clifford Shinkle of Cincinnati.

A SUMMER FRIEND



By Eleanor Jewett.

Another summer and the little bird
Which last year sat serene upon her nest
In our old boat-house with its raft of boats
Again warms tiny eggs beneath her breast.

She is a friendly creature, not too shy.
The clatter of the children at their play
Does not disturb her; busy with her cares
She lives her life and lets us go our way.

A bird of habit! Now we look for her
And feel that summer would be incomplete
If her flight did not suddenly attend
The shouts of children and their running feet.

Miss Williams Off to Women's Meet in Paris

To Speak at International Congress of Business and Professional Group.

MISS CHARL ORMOND WILLIAMS, center of attention here the last few days during the board meeting of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, will pause in her home town, Washington, D. C., this week only long enough to refresh her wardrobe and book passage to Europe.

She is crossing the Atlantic to attend the congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women July 26 to Aug. 1 in Paris. Miss Williams will be one of several American speakers at the congress. Others will include Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Miss Emma P. Hirth, chairman of the research committee of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women and associate general secretary of the Y. W. C. A., and Dean Maria Leonard of the University of Illinois.

Miss Phillips in Europe Several Weeks Making Plans.

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the international federation, has been in Europe several weeks making plans for the meeting, the general theme of which is to be "Women's Contribution to the Modern World."

The first formal session of the congress is scheduled for a week from tomorrow evening when Miss Phillips will deliver the keynote address. Business sessions will begin on July 28 and continue through July 31, interspersed with public meetings and forums.

On the evening of July 30 American radio audiences will be privileged to hear a part of the convention proceedings during a half hour international broadcast arranged by the Columbia Broadcasting system. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Miss Amy Mollison, aviatrix, and Miss Phillips will be heard in this broadcast program. The time of the broadcast is 5:15 to 5:45 p. m. eastern daylight saving time.

Duchess de la Rochefoucauld to Speak at Dinner Meeting.

The duchess de la Rochefoucauld is scheduled to speak at the dinner meeting the evening of July 30 with Secretary Perkins. Other Europeans who will have a part in the week's program include Mme. Cecile Brunschweig, assistant secretary of education in the new French cabinet; Dr. Maria Castellani, head of the statistical bureau of the National Insurance Association of Italy and the first woman to be named a bureau chief after the Mussolini government was established; Mme. Marguerite Thibert of the international labor office; Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, Paris couturiere; Senator F. F. Plaminkova of the Czechoslovakian parliament, and Princess Alexandrine Cantacuzene, founder and president of the business and professional women of Rumania.

Women from twenty-four countries in which there are branches of the federation are expected to attend the congress. The Canadian delegation will be headed by Miss Mary C. Mount of Hamilton, Ont. Headquarters for the international meeting are to be in the Hotel Lutetia, 43 Boulevard Raspail.

Miss Williams and her sister board members found reason for rejoicing last week in the reports returned at the business and professional women's board meeting by the various state federations. Thirty-nine indicated projects that definitly tend to improve the political, economic, and social status of business and professional women.

Attempt to Place Women in Political Offices.

From Maine to Florida many of the state projects showed definite attempts to obtain places for women as appointed and elected officials, and also to amend such state constitutions as prevent women from holding political office.

Miss Zoe Manning of Tallahassee, Fla., said: "The Florida federation voted to sponsor legislation for a constitutional amendment, if necessary, designed to clarify the legal status of women in the state of Florida so that all women may have equal opportunity to develop their own abilities, whether they work in their own business or profession or in the home.

"This proposed legislation is designed to remove the penalty from marriage, and to permit a woman to be considered an intelligent human being whether married or single. It will also permit a woman to do jury duty in our state and provides that no person shall, on account of sex, be disqualified from entering upon or pursuing any lawful business, vocation, or profession. Men and women shall have equal rights in every way.

Florida Federation Out for New Legislation.

"It has been my purpose in selecting a legislative chairman for the new year to choose a woman who is heartily in sympathy with the movement and who will go forward with the program, as already mapped out and voted on by the Florida federation, to the end that a bill to this effect will be presented to the 1937 session of the Florida legislature."

MRS. WALTER H. HERMSDORF.
[Monfort Photo.]

Mrs. Walter H. Hermsdorf, recently elected president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations, will preside Wednesday noon at a luncheon meeting in Henrici's, given for the purpose of promoting recreational facilities for school children. To reduce the auto accident and death toll to children left playing in the summer on the streets, the federation is asking that school playgrounds be kept open under proper supervision during the summer months. Mrs. Hermsdorf and the other federation officers are enlisting the support of business and industry in its campaign.

At the luncheon Wednesday it is expected that there will be representatives of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Chicago Motor club, the Chicago Real Estate board, the National Youth administration, Chicago Surface Lines, Chicago Motor Coach company, Chicago Rapid Transit company, the Chicago playgrounds, and the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Miss Dorothy Helmuth is to present a program at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. Miss Helmuth is reported to give delightful programs, sketching as she talks. The program will be completed by musical selections by Mrs. S. V. Robuck.

VACATION IN WINNIPEG

Mrs. John Sproehnle wears blue trunks and a white shirt when she plays tennis at the South Shore Country club, but she is not playing there this month, for she is spending July in Winnipeg, where she lived when she was Miss Elizabeth McCombs. She came to Chicago as a bride about four years ago and has become an active member of the South Shore Service league, which contributes to the Chicago Maternity center.

MUST HAVE A WINNER

Mrs. Prentice Porter certainly had the winner in the race she was watching when this picture was taken, for nothing short of that would account for her wide smile. She and her husband are almost daily visitors to the Arlington Park Jockey club this month, for they live in Lake Forest and it is just a short drive from their Phantom Fox farm to the race track. Both are keen equestrians and are members of the Mill Creek hunt.

Flower Guild Work Attracts Many Matrons

Suburban Gardeners Share Blooms with Tenement Dwellers and Sick.

By Judith Cass.

ANY one who has spent time in a sickroom or hospital knows what a cheery lift to the spirit a fragrant bunch of flowers can bring. But few of us know of the work done by the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which all summer long collects blossoms in the vicinity of Chicago and distributes them through the Visiting Nurses' association to hot tenement bedrooms and to various settlement houses and hospitals. The guild's eloquent plea for people with gardens to share them with the city's unfortunates who have none has not gone unheeded, but during this hot and rainless summer the chairmen in various suburbs have been hard pressed to collect enough flowers to help the guild in its kind thoughtfulness.

Every suburb has its day for collecting blooms and putting them on trains or trucks for transportation to the guild's headquarters in town. Every Wednesday either Mrs. William D. Truesdale of the Winnetka Garden club or Mrs. Harry E. Eldridge of the garden department of the Winnetka Women's club, as co-chairmen of collections for that village, is at the Elm street station to accept offerings of flowers for the guild. And as do the chairmen in every other contributing town, Mrs. Truesdale and Mrs. Eldridge emphasize the fact that it is not necessary to bring a large armful of flowers as an offering, but that the small bouquets are just as acceptable and just as pretty.

Winnetka's Matrons Are Generous Contributors.

Among Winnetka's most generous contributors of flowers are Mrs. William Darrow, Mrs. Robert H. Ripley, Mrs. Alice Drake Miller, Mrs. Langdon Pearse, and Mrs. C. Colton Daughaday, who is president of the Winnetka Garden club. Other north shore gardeners who have given generously of their garden blooms are Mrs. John Armstrong and Mrs. Samuel Rothermel, whose homes are in Glencoe, and Mrs. William Weedon, Mrs. Charles Moody, and Mrs. Edward L. Scheidenhelm of Wilmette.

Mrs. Charles Van Duersen is chairman of the Milwaukee division of flower collections for the guild. This division includes the north shore garden clubs with the exception of Lake Forest, which gives its surplus flowers to the Alice Home hospital. Other chairmen include Mrs. Albert W. Torbet of Deerfield, who takes care of the Skokie division; Mrs. K. Edgar Tholin of Downers Grove, who is chairman of the Burlington division; Mrs. Stuart M. Murdock, chairman of the Rock Island division; Mrs. Robert J. Pabodie of Maywood, who is in charge of the Galena division; Mrs. Joseph E. Callender of St. Charles, chairman of the Aurora-Elgin division; Mrs. Fred A. Record, chairman of the Wisconsin division, and whose home is in Barrington, and Mrs. Herschel Missey, chairman of the Illinois Central division of collections.

Work of Flower Guild Begins in Late Spring.

The work of the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild begins late in the spring with Lilac day, which is between May 10 and May 20. This year there were two such days, the first on May 15 and the second on May 19, and in spite of the fact that there was only one-third of a normal crop of the lovely blossoms, the campaign was a successful one from every standpoint. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE coöperates with the guild in the "Share Your Lilac" campaign and furnishes trucks and helpers to distribute the flowers.

One hundred and twenty-eight hospitals received lilacs in this year's campaign, which was the eighth annual event, and blossoms were placed beside the beds of 20,000 patients. Theodore V. Purcell of Evanston, president of the guild, took a personal part as did Mrs. Charles Gates Dawes, honorary president, and Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, chairman of the executive committee. Mrs. William H. Schultz of Maywood was general divisional chairman, with eight suburban chairmen working under her.

"Share Your Lilac" Campaign Attracted Wide Attention.

The "Share Your Lilac" campaign is unique and has attracted so much attention all over the country that several eastern cities have written to officials of the guild inquiring about the procedure for staging such a campaign. Thousands of individuals in the Chicagoland area, 100 miles long and 50 miles wide, contributed blossoms this year, making the campaign such a successful one in spite of the poor lilac crop.

Clubs and individuals with swimming pools have been extremely popular during the hot weather for the only way to keep cool, unless one was fortunate enough to live or to work in an air conditioned building, was to hop in and out of the water. The chairmen of the committees that plan meets at country club pools and have the more arduous job of seeing that the pools are in the pink of condition have been as busy as bees. This afternoon at 4 o'clock there is to be a meet at the Glen View pool with swimmers from the Indian Hill and Exmoor clubs competing, as well as swimmers from Glen View. Several weeks ago the Highland Park club [Exmoor] was host at a similar meet. The Winnetka club will return the Glen View's and the Exmoor's hospitality late in August.

Chicago Artist Has Study Group at Ephraim Studio

EPHRAIM, WIS.

Mrs. Edward M. Tourtelot Jr. of Evanston and her son Teddy arrived a week ago Saturday for several weeks at Oak Ledge, the Ephraim cottage they have leased for the season. Mr. Tourtelot will spend week-ends with them. While here Mrs. Tourtelot and Miss Martha Hachmeister of Evanston and Ephraim are joining the group studying and painting under Walter Rousseun, well known Chicago artist. Mr. Rousseun has converted an unused chicken house near Fish Creek into an attractive and much frequented studio.

Mr. James Field Jr. recently joined his mother, Mrs. James W. Field, at her Ephraim cottage. After leaving Harvard in June he visited in the east before coming to Wisconsin. Other Chicagoans have been entertaining friends at their Ephraim summer homes this week. The Frederick Wolfes at Stock Cliff had Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kebon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward George, and Mr. and Mrs. John Newey, all of Highland Park, as their house guests over last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brown of Fox lane, Winnetka, with their daughter Betty and their niece, visited the Charles G. Fishers for several days. Their younger daughter, Nancy, is traveling in Europe with a chaperoned group of friends. Mrs. A. W. McDonald of Evanston arrived a week ago Saturday from a visit with relatives in the western mountains to spend several weeks with her sister, Mrs. Ella Cutler, and her nieces, Mrs. George Mulford and Mrs. Judd Biddle. Mr. and Mrs. F. W. McDonald Jr. of Highland Park, Mr. Park Ross, and Mr. George Mulford of Evanston were week-end guests at the Cutler cottage. Mrs. Park Ross arrived earlier in the week.

Last week the Warren T. Davises of Chicago entertained Mr. Davis' mother, Mrs. Robert T. Davis, and his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Warren, of Chicago, at their Ephraim home, The Mooring.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Paine, Gilbert Paine Among Brief Sojourners There.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, N.H.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Paine and Gilbert Paine of Chicago were visitors last week at Pecketts on Sugar hill. Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Peckett, who motored to Quebec last week, visited Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Foster of Chicago at their summer home at Derby, Vt., en route. The Fosters expect many Chicago society people to visit Derby some time during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Dodds of Champaign are at Pecketts for a short sojourn. Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Mrs. Hughes are occupying a cottage there for the season. Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tennant of Chicago arrived at Pecketts on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Torcom of Evanston have arrived for an indefinite visit at the Mount Washington hotel, Bretton Woods. Mrs. Torcom's mother, Mrs. M. Bashore of Brooklyn, N. Y., accompanied them.

Leonards Are Guests at Cocktail Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Leonard of Chicago and Miss Billie Goasaway of Tuscola were among guests at a cocktail party given at the Crawford house, Crawford Notch, Tuesday evening, and later attended the annual dinner given the players in the 31st annual tennis tournament. While vacationing here, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard have met several members of the Breakers hotel colony at Palm Beach, where their winters are spent.

Mr. Louis Howardson and Mr. E. Howardson of Chicago are at Hotel Randall, North Conway.

Mrs. George D. Brown of Chicago is at Hotel Randall, North Conway, where Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Lancaster of Chicago arrived last week.

Mrs. John Broeksmit of Chicago and children arrived in Chocorua, where she has taken a villa for the summer near Chocorua lake. This is the most exclusive cottage colony in the hills. Here Marshall Field, with his children and their tutor, usually come for an annual holiday to enjoy the mountain climbing and fishing.

Mrs. Grant Bulkley of Chicago joined a party of fourteen led by Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Baldwin, who are spending two weeks in Franconia at Mackenzies, and playing much golf there.

Harts Spending Week at Forest Hills Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Hart of Chicago are spending a week at the Forest Hills hotel at Franconia.

Miss Hodge of Evanston is paying her annual visit to Pecketts on Sugar hill, her sister, Mrs. Colin McK. Tennent of Jackson boulevard, Chicago, and Mr. Tennent accompanying her.

Mrs. C. R. Adams of Maywood, Ill., is visiting Miss Ethelyn Pattee at Colebrook, who gave a luncheon in her honor at Polly's place.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Ball, Miss Kathleen Ball, and Edward H. Ball Jr., who are spending a week at the Mountain View house at Whitefield, were among those attending a putting match followed by tea, given last Saturday by Mrs. Van H. Dodge and Mrs. Frank S. Dodge on the hotel lawn. They came here from Lake Placid club, New York.

Mrs. John G. M. Glessner was among guests at a luncheon given by Mrs. Arthur Hall Smith at the Mountain View house. Coming from her estate at Littleton, she arrived some weeks ago with Miss Emily Glessner for the season. Miss Emily Glessner and Mrs. John G. M. Glessner attended a meeting of the White Mountain Garden club last week at the Franconia residence of Mrs. Richard W. Neff. Mr. Neff formerly resided in Chicago.

Mrs. Hamilton Allport and Miss Allport of Glencoe, who are spending some time in the White mountains, were among guests at the first of a series of teas given by Mrs. Clinton McLane, head mistress of St. Mary's Episcopal School for Girls, which recently moved there from Concord, N. H., and observed its 50th anniversary last month.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellerton A. Lodge of Sunnyside avenue, Chicago, arrived Monday at the Mount Washington, Bretton Woods.

Mrs. R. N. Daniels and group of Chicagoans arrived that day at Bretton Arms, an inn affiliated.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Buckley and Misses Shirley and Patricia Buckley of Chicago are at Russell cottages, Kearsarge village.

Polo Matches to Open Fall Season in N. Y.

International Games Are Big Feature of Unusual September Schedule.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK No doubt it's these parched days that make all of us look forward to September, when both the heat and the humidity should be under control.

But, if one wants a more robust motive, he can point to the extraordinary polo schedule for that month just announced by the United States Polo association. Once more there is to be an international season at Meadowbrook, New York. The gallant Argentinians are sending a quartet to play the winners of the American open championship late in September.

In addition to the first international matches in several seasons, there's the autumn debutante season on the North Shore during the middle of the month. For ten days, there should be innumerable dinners, and from one to three dances per night.

Purse strings are loosened and the polo and deb seasons should be as brilliant as any.

Expect All Boxes to Be Taken by Aug. 1.

Boxes for the polo matches, which open at Meadowbrook on Aug. 29, are going like hot cakes. It's doubtful if there will be one left by Aug. 1.

Some of the turf fans who've already sent in their reservations are Pete Bostwick and his brother, Dunbar Bostwick, David K. E. Bruce, Andy Mellon's son-in-law, Mrs. Middletown S. Burrill, and J. Averell Clark, brother-in-law of Tommy Hitchcock Jr. It goes without saying that 'Brose Clark would rush his name in early, and likewise James W. Gerard, our one-time ambassador to Germany.

The Hon. Mrs. Freddy Guest will be there to see her son, Winston Guest, swing the mallets 'round. Tommy Hitchcock Jr., Stew Iglehart, and Devereux Milburn, players all, have box reservations, too.

Mr. Milburn passed his 50th birthday some years ago. Way back in 1908 he was a nine goal player, and he's been playing hard and riding hard ever since. A broken rib or a splintered collar bone is just an incident to this great veteran. They can't make the game too rough for him!

The Phipps clan is down for two boxes so far. Seymour Knox, who probably has more of the Woolworth money than the Woolworths have, and who owns one of the finest string of ponies, is on the boxholders' list with Laddie Sanford, Johnnie Schiff, and Skiddy von Stade.

Owners of Omaha Will Be on Hand for Matches.

Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, owners of Omaha, will be on hand. Their daughter, Sarah Woodward, is being married next Thursday to Charles A. Moore III. The wedding will be extremely simple, and will take place at the Cloisters, the Newport home of her parents.

Jock Whitney is down for a box. Undoubtedly his Greentree team will play in the Open championship that starts at Meadowbrook, Aug. 29. Mr. Whitney's Greentree four won the Open in 1935.

The Robert Livingston Gerrys, whose four sons form a team of their own, have a box. Two more are reserved for the younger members of the family.

Mrs. J. C. Rathborne is on the list. Her son, Cokie Rathborne, is something to see on the polo field. Marshall Field has sent for reservations. Ogden L. Mills, Paul D. Cravath, head of the Metropolitan opera. William K. Dick, Robert E. Strawbridge Jr., chairman of the U. S. Polo association, are others who will be in the boxes.

The winning team of the Open championship will play the Argentines for the cup of the Americas, presented in 1928 by the then President of the Argentine republic, Don Augustin P. Justo. The cup is almost as large as a swimming pool, and only a ten goal player could lift it if he won it. Play for the Argentine cup will begin about Sept. 19.

Victors Over British May Enter Meadowbrook Play.

The Americans are considerably set up by their victory over England in the play last month for the Westchester cup. Eric Pedly, Mike Phipps, Stew Iglehart, and Winston Guest played on the winning team. No doubt those who went over to ride against the British will be on hand at Meadowbrook. However, Eric Pedly may not be able to play because of business affairs on the west coast.

Lieut. Alessandro Pallavicini and his wife, the former Margaret Roosevelt, are setting out on a trip around the world. They will return to their home in Rome, Italy, by way of the orient.

The Pallavicinis arrived from Rome last spring to visit Margaret's parents, the George Emlen Roosevelts. When the Roosevelts sailed for Bermuda in June, the Pallavicinis went along. After they returned to New York, all went down to the Roosevelt summer place in Oyster Bay. Margaret's sister, Medora, was one of last season's most publicized debbies.

One by one, New York's famous private homes are going. Herbert Lee Pratt has sold his beautiful mansion at 1027 5th avenue to the Marymount school in Tarrytown. In the huge rooms which were the scenes of the late Mrs. Pratt's brilliant parties, blackboards are going up, and school desks going in so that the place will be ready for September classes.

Marymount already has a branch school next door, at 1028 5th avenue, for the junior classes. The Pratt residence will be turned into a high school and junior college where book larnin' can be dispensed to future Manhattan debs.

In the next block, at 5th avenue and 91st street, is the former residence of the late Otto Kahn. Two years ago, it too was turned into a modern version of the little red schoolhouse by the Society of the Sacred Heart.

The covent on the northeast corner of Madison avenue and 54th street, in which for fifty-four years they'd taught children of the wealthy, was sold and torn down to make way for a group of modern buildings, one of which contains Helen Morgan's House of Morgan, an expensive night club which shut up shop not long after opening last year.

5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠ (final bid)

West opens the jack of hearts, dummy covers, East wins with the ace and returns a heart. How must declarer play to fulfill his small slam contract?

ANSWER: Dummy wins second trick and leads a club. The ace and king are cashed and then a diamond is led to the ace. A heart is ruffed with three of trumps, another diamond is led to the king, and a third round of diamonds ruffed with the five spot. Now a club is ruffed with the spade king, a diamond with the spade nine, the last club with the spade ace, and a trump finesse to South's remaining Q-10 gives declarer his contract.

Typographical Hair-Raiser Outlined

By Ely Culbertson

THE deletion of a single letter from a word has been known to cause complications ranging from the serious to the merely embarrassing, with a large sprinkling, fortunately, of the hilarious. Many of the newspapers carrying my daily article run a small "box" suggesting that readers who have bridge questions they would like answered write to me, care of the paper. (For the hundredth time let me state that this service is free, gratis, and for nothing—a stamped, self-addressed envelope being the only prerequisite.

Recently I received the following letter. Its contents bewildered me completely until I glanced at the "inclosed clipping." The light was not slow to penetrate after that.

Mr. Ely Culbertson, New York City.
Dear Sir:

The inclosed clipping may be of interest to you. It has been and is of great interest to us at ——. In fact, there have been so many questions asked that I am writing for the following information: How does one obtain a teacher's certificate for this new subject you are now teaching? Are the certificates blue? White? And do you have master's? Must one have been or be married to obtain a blue certificate? Married five years for a white certificate? And ten years for a master's?

I would appreciate very much any information you can give me.

Are you also running the column "Pointers for Parents"? If you are, may I suggest it be moved below your "Bride Troubles" column, merely for chronological correctness?

Sincerely, C. S.

This was the clipping:

> Write your bride troubles and problems to Ely Culbertson, care of this paper, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Thank heaven that so far no beleaguered young husband has taken advantage of this kind offer—my capacities do not extend to such transcendental feats!

⁂

I know a life insurance actuary whose daily bread, in a manner of speaking, consists almost exclusively of tables and percentages. He has a lightning mind for calculations within his field, yet he is confounded by the absurdly simple mathematical problems of the bridge table. The explanation must be that he has never learned how to approach these problems; or perhaps he confuses the issue (and himself) with considerations that have no actual bearing. It was he who managed to defeat himself in a slam contract on the following hand:

NORTH
♠ Q J 9 2
♥ K 10 4
♦ A J 10 5
♣ 8 3

WEST	EAST
♠ 8 3	♠ 7 4
♥ 6 3 2	♥ Q 9 8 5
♦ 7 2	♦ Q 6 4
♣ K J 7 6 5 4	♣ Q 10 9 2

SOUTH
♠ A K 10 6 5
♥ A J 7
♦ K 9 8 3
♣ A

The bidding (North-South vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	5 ♦	Pass
5 ♥	Pass	5 N. T.	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South, with 4½-plus honor tricks, naturally became slam-minded when his partner jumped from one to three spades (which was a slight stretch, but the best bid available) and used asking bids for investigating purposes. When his successive asking bids (four diamonds and five hearts) located respectively the diamond ace and second-round heart control, the slam became an odds-on chance.

Unfortunately, South's play did not match step with his bidding. West selected, as the safest lead apparent, the eight of trumps. Declarer won, drew the other outstanding trumps, and, after agonizing over which way to finesse, laid down the diamond king and finessed through West. He cursed when East gobbled up the trick with his queen and returned a club; as he ruffed the club he groaned over the thought that now he had to find the other red queen. On the naive theory that, since East had held the diamond queen, West should hold the heart, declarer laid down the heart ace and then finessed to dummy's ten spot. East swooped down again and the contract was defeated.

A knowledge of bridge percentages would have dictated the proper line of play. After drawing the adverse trumps declarer should have eliminated clubs by cashing the ace and ruffing dummy's remaining one. Then he should have laid down the ace and king of diamonds! If the queen should fall, the contract of six would be safe and a heart guess would affect only the extra trick. If the queen should not fall (there is almost as good a chance of it falling with only five outstanding as there is of finessing successfully for it), there would still be a splendid play for the contract without guessing. A third round of diamonds would throw the holder of the queen on lead, and now, unless he originally held at least four diamonds, he would have to give declarer a "free" finesse in hearts, or lead a club, which would allow a ruff and a discard.

Surely this reasoning should have been well within the capabilities of an actuary!

Today's Questions

Question: North, dealer and vulnerable, bid one club. East, not vulnerable, bid one spade, and South held:

♠ Q J 8 6 ♥ J 8 5 ♦ Q J 3 2 ♣ 9 5

South passed. (Was that correct?) West also passed, and now North, the opening bidder, doubled. East passed. What should South have bid in response to the double?

Answer: South's first-round pass over one spade was correct. Now, after his partner's take-out double, he should weigh two logical responses open to him. One of these would be to pass for penalties. The other would be to go out for his own vulnerable game. In this latter case he would probably have to make a stronger bid than one no trump to convince partner that there would be a good play for game. Thus if South can depend on the take-out double's soundness he should stretch slightly and bid two no trump rather than try to penalize nonvulnerable opponents.

Question: My partner and I are in the habit of reserving forcing bids in another suit for cases where there is a good fit with the opening bid. Also we both make very light opening bids. As second hand, not vulnerable, I bid one diamond on the following hand:

♠ Q 9 6 ♥ Q 8 6 ♦ A K J 7 6 5 ♣ 6

Partner responded four clubs. I read his bid as purely preëmptive, showing a long line of clubs and little or nothing else, hence I passed. His actual holding was:

♠ 10 ♥ A K 3 ♦ Q 4 ♣ A K Q J 10 8 7

Naturally we made six, and the fireworks started. Was I wrong to pass the four-club bid? (We have not yet started to use asking bids.)

Answer: No, you were not wrong! There was no reason or excuse for partner's four-club bid; his hand was beautifully suited to a forcing bid of three clubs. Your interpretation that he was making a preëmptive bid was quite logical.

Beverly Resort Having Annual Horse Show

Col. Langhorne and Leiter Entries to Represent Chicagoans in Colony.

BEVERLY, MASS. All roads lead to Hamilton today [Sunday] for the twelfth annual legion horse show, one of the early season events in the Myopia district, and which will bring entries from some of the best known jumping stables on the north shore. Col. Frank T. Colby is the chairman of the show committee, and the show will feature divisions for hunters.

Col. George T. Langhorne, U. S. A. retired, of Chicago, who is passing his first summer at Ipswich, will have several entries, as will Thomas Leiter and Miss Nancy Leiter of Chicago and Edgewater house at Beverly farms.

Mrs. Florence K. Dibble of Old Newbury, who recently made a new coaching record between New York and Atlantic City, will show her coach and four.

The annual street fair at Manchester will be held on Thursday. It will aid the orthodox Congregational church, more than two centuries old.

Fiesta Held for Church Is Interesting Event.

Interesting events of last week included the fiesta held to aid the Christ church in Hamilton, the fashionable church of the hunting district at Myopia, and the opening of twenty of the loveliest gardens on the north shore to the public Tuesday and Wednesday. Mrs. William Endicott Dexter of Prides Crossing was chairman of the committee of the North Shore Garden club that sponsored the tour. Mrs. William F. Moore, formerly of Chicago and now of New York City, opened her gardens at Orckmarge at Prides Crossing for the viewing.

Miss Evelyn Lilly of Indianapolis is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Clay Bartlett of Chicago, at Tree Tops, their summer home at Chapmans corner, Beverly.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett loaned their attractive studio for an exhibition of pictures by Mrs. Marion Monks Chase of Beverly farms. It was opened for a private viewing yesterday [Saturday], and will continue through Sunday, July 26. Mrs. Chase has often exhibited in Chicago, New York, Boston, and Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Groverman Ellis of Chicago are at their summer home in the eastern point district at Gloucester for the long season on the north shore.

Chicagoans Staying at Oceanside for Season.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Waller of Chicago are at the Oceanside in Magnolia for the remainder of the season. Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Hunter of Chicago also are at the Oceanside.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marchant of Chicago have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Marchant at their Riverdale home in Gloucester.

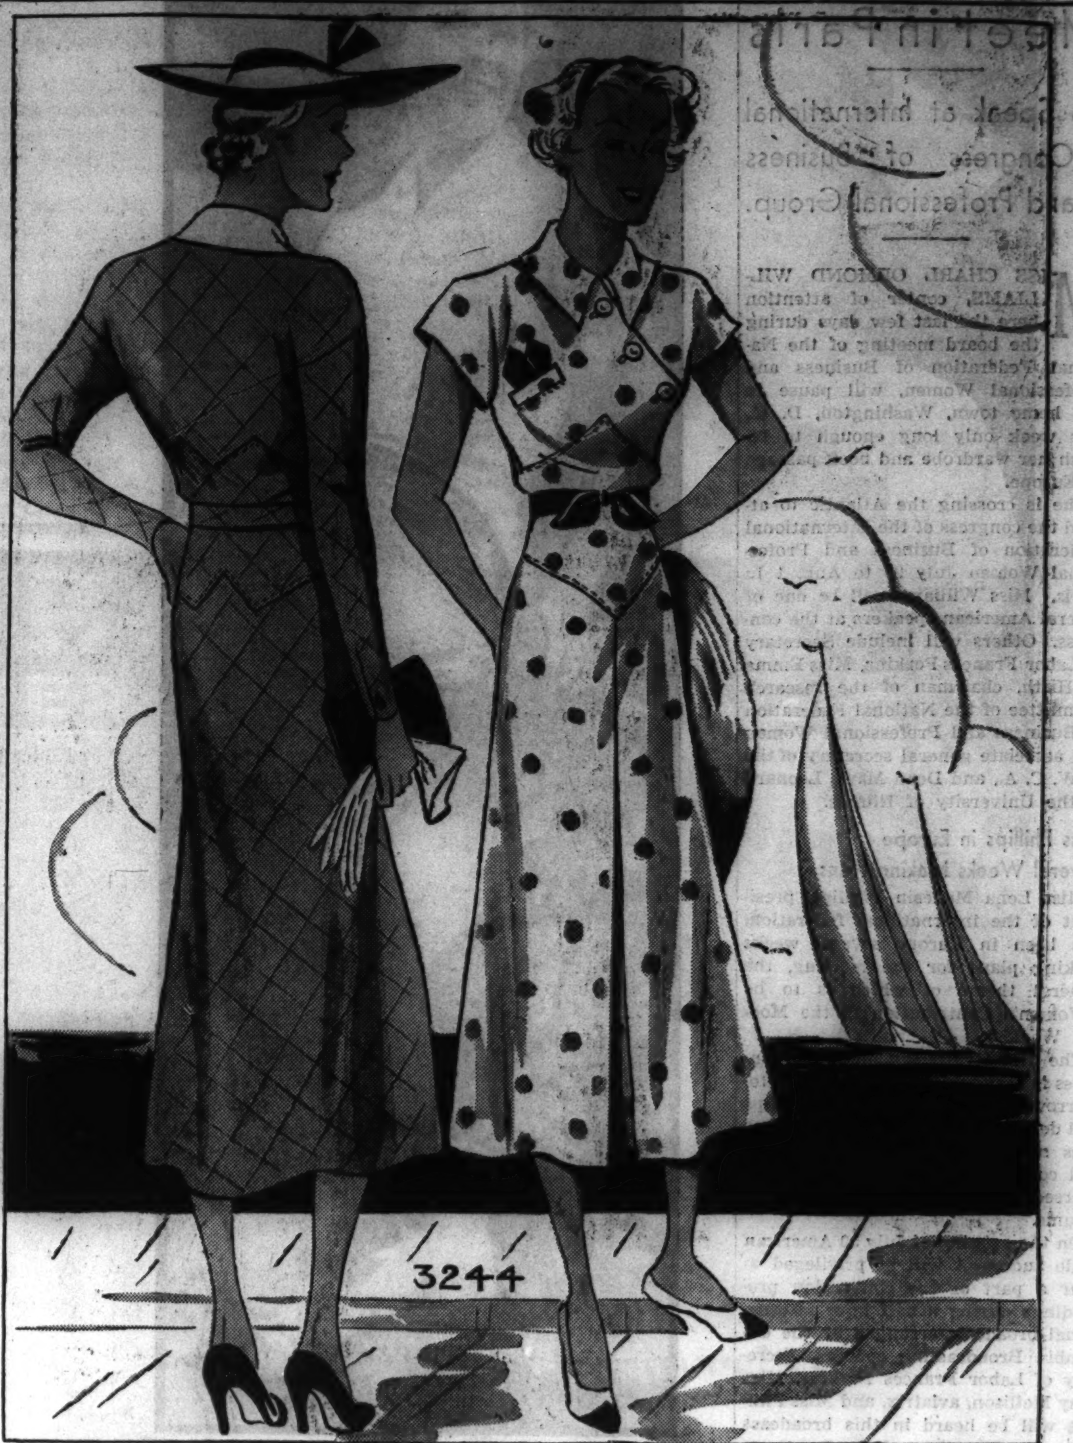
Prof. and Mrs. Francis P. Shepard of Urbana and their children, Thomas H. II., and Attorney Lee Shepard, have been visiting the professor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Shepard at their Marblehead summer home.

John Mechem of Chicago, who is at his Annisquam home on Cape Ann for the summer, has been elected a member of the regatta committee of the Annisquam Yacht club. An interesting race scheduled over Labor day has been arranged at the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins have returned to their home in Warrenton, Vt., after a visit with Mr. Thomas Leiter at Edgewater house, his summer home in the west beach district at Beverly farms.

John Clay II., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clay of Chicago, who are at their Eastern Point home in Gloucester for the summer, is becoming a real yachtsman. His Cape Cod knockabout, Clipper, finished well up to the front in the race of the Eastern Point Yacht club last week. Leonard Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Groverman Ellis of Chicago, also of the Eastern Point colony, brought in his sonder boat, Tid III., second in his class in the Eastern Point series. Mary Ellis, a sister of Leonard, cleverly handling her Cape Cod knockabout, Arethisa, was among the contenders in her class.

Patterns by Clotilde



Trimly Tailored Frock Is Attractive for Varied Daytime Social Events.

By Clotilde.

THIS spectator frock is as trim as a sail in the wind. Its lines are exceedingly simple, but are designed dashingly and youthfully. It is ideal for a wide variety of outdoor occasions and, if it is created in a rather dressy fabric, it will do duty for informal social events, too.

As you have guessed, this frock is a new version of the shirtwaist dress. It has the clever shirt collar and brief tailored sleeves, but it departs from the customary pattern of shirtwaist dresses by having most of its seams diagonal. The bodice closing, smartly enhanced with buttons, pets of fashion this season, is cut on the diagonal. The tiny pocket for your sports "hanky" also is set slanting, and the waistline treatment consists of a pointed yoke effect, up into the bodice, and down into the skirt. The latter is cut comfortably full, and an inverted plait lends grace to the front. A soft belt is attractive with a neat bow.

If you want the dress definitly for sports, select the fabric from among the gay array of cotton shirtings, crash, seersucker, piqué, shantung, and novelty cottons to be found in shops everywhere. These tubbable materials have a way of looking crisp in even the hottest weather, and they launder beautifully.

For town or travel, a dark sheer is perfect, made with the longer sleeves, as illustrated in the sketch at the left, and with the collar in crisp organdy or net.

For the rather dressy version, white or pastel tub silks are lovely, with the contrast in buttons, collar, and hanky. Figured chiffon, voile, and net also are possibilities for this edition of the versatile summer frock.

Style No. 3244 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material for dress with short sleeves.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to the Chicago Tirbune, offering constructive information to women who enjoy making their own clothes, and presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

Be smart this season! Select your warm weather wardrobe from the sparkling modes presented in the summer edition of the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions. We Paid $50,000 for this Daintier Way to Check Perspiration

Seeing opportunity for certain improvement in perspiration preventives, we sought the best formula, paid $50,000 to get it. Its name is Ever-Dry.

In this $50,000 formula we use only the most expensive ingredients. Our applicator, unlike others, is made of pure white wool. And we've added a very delicate, fresh, clean fragrance.

Ever-Dry checks perspiration instantly (use it day or night) yet so gentle is its action that it won't irritate the tenderest skin.

Notice how long Ever-Dry's effect lasts. This means complete confidence and carefree peace of mind, convenience because used less often, and economy for the same reason.

Tests have shown that 88 out of 100 women who once try this daintier way, remain steady users.

The Good Housekeeping seal is on every bottle. 50c.

Dresses to fit any budget

To be thrifty is a matter of knowing where style and value combine to your best advantage. Keeping tab on women's apparel advertising in the Tribune every day is the best way to pack into your clothing budget every dollar's worth of fashion and value which your money can buy in Chicago stores. The Tribune prints more of this kind of advertising than any three other Chicago newspapers combined.

When Chicago Was Young
The Elegant Eighties
By Herma Clark

Letter from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, July 28, 1887.

DEAR Julia: We spent Sunday with some agreeable friends on the west side, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Daniels, attending church with them . . . at the church of the Epiphany, on Ashland avenue, where their rector, Mr. Morrison, gave us a good sermon . . . and then going to the Daniels home, 690 West Adams street, for dinner. We found as fellow guests Mrs. Selfridge and her son, Harry Gordon Selfridge, a serious young man who is working hard in Field's store. He is a bachelor, and I should think a great catch, for he will succeed in business, if energy and ability count.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Britt. Mrs. Britt was, before her marriage, Miss Carrie Spofford of Rockford, the fiancée of the late Elmer Ellsworth, our great civil war hero. You recall how mourning spread over the north, when he fell at Alexandria, Va., the first commissioned officer to be killed. The terrible tragedy clouded her life for some years, but I'm glad she didn't remain unmarried.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels are social favorites. The latter was a Miss Cady of Cincinnati, a member of that family to which Elizabeth Cady Stanton belongs, and she possesses some of the gift of speech which we admire in the eloquent suffragist. I tell Mrs. Daniels she has only to go around the corner in her quiet neighborhood to have an interesting experience. Perhaps it's just because she recognizes the element of drama in every happening, and is able to recount it so well.

She told us today about the time she went to the Derby day races, and was the center of attention at the Washington Park clubhouse. She described her dress, a fashionable taffeta, with puffs around the overskirt, her hat, with its two stiff bows at the back, and a chiffon veil draped carefully around the crown and hanging in folds over her face, which, she said, she felt was quiet fetching. Her small carriage parasol was coquettish. Altogether, her day had been a success, for she had put a small amount of money on the winning steed, the luncheon at the club had been delicious, and, as she stepped into her carriage to return home, there seemed nothing left for which to wish. But, just as she sat down, and before the others in the party could get in, the horses, frightened by the blare of a brass band, reared and plunged, and the carriage seemed about to overturn.

"Jump!" called her friends. And she knew she ought to do this, but she couldn't gather courage for motion. Her limbs seemed paralyzed. Holding her skirts about her, she tried to summon strength to move.

Then, from the veranda of the club, a stockily-built man in the uniform of a United States army officer pushed through the crowd, and rushed toward the carriage, calling in a voice that left her no choice but to obey: "Madam, JUMP!" And she jumped . . . right into the arms of Gen. Sheridan, who, though not stationed in Chicago at the time, was here attending a reunion of veterans.

Mrs. Alfred Daniels, socially prominent in the '80s.

I think we all envied Mrs. Daniels the experience. It was worth getting into danger to have that happen.

"I realized then," said Mrs. Daniels, in ending her story," why his soldiers would have followed him to death, and why he was so universally popular."

The west side looked most attractive, today. After dinner at the Daniels home, we took a long drive and saw many lovely homes. The Andrew MacLeish family has a beautiful house on Adams street, and on Ashland avenue many new residences lately have been erected. The neighborhood most favored on Ashland seems to be the three blocks south of Jackson street. The Featherstones have recently built a handsome house at the northwest corner of Congress street. The Pinkertons have a lovely house. So have the J. Harley Bradleys. The Wilson house, next to Epiphany church, is a dream. The Carter Harrison mansion, at Jackson and Ashland, reflects the hospitable fashion of Kentucky.

The only defect in the aristocratic neighborhood is that it is so far from Rush street. I do wish Chicago weren't so large. It is impossible to see as much of our friends as we should like.

And now I must say good-by for this time. Your loving friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Daniels were parents of Miss Mary Eleanor Daniels, Mrs. Robert Forsyth, and Mrs. Ralph Fox, of Chicago, and of J. Fred Daniels of Lake Bluff.

OLD CHICAGO HARTHSTONES.
501 South Ashland Boulevard.

Now a girls' club, this old gray stone house was known for years as the old Fick home. Not of so handsome design as many Ashland boulevard houses of the period, it yet has interest because of its size and its location. A long hall runs through the center of the house, with a large living room on one side. A massive built-in sideboard used by the family is still in the house. The carriage block, once outside the house, with the name "Fick" on it, was shipped some time ago at great expense, to descendants of the family who now like on the west coast. We admire the sentiment which leads members of a family to preserve such a family relic, but few of us can afford to do this.

We always are glad to receive information about old homes of Chicago. Address Herma Clark, care Chicago Tribune.

Sunday Buffets Popular Events at Bar Harbor Colony

BAR HARBOR, ME.

The Sunday buffet dinners at the Bar Harbor club are becoming increasingly popular with the younger set. Among the younger members of the social colony at the Junior club table last Sunday were Miss Pauline Palmer, Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne, and Frank Howard of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Clement More, Tony Stewart, Miss Hermoine Barrett, and Frederick W. Whitney. Miss Palmer is one of the more enthusiastic swimmers who gather daily at the club pool. Often seen with her are Peggy and Jack Dorrance and Larry, Josephine, and Natalie Munson, all of Philadelphia. To its other activities the Bar Harbor club added daily buffet luncheons Thursday, and these have become popular with those of the colony who come to the club in the morning for swimming or tennis.

What promises to become a weekly feature of the social calendar is the putting contest being held at the Kebo Valley club on Monday afternoons, after which tea is served. Further ahead on the Bar Harbor club calendar is the annual ladies' luncheon, which will fall on July 31 this year. The event is one of the most pleasant of the season, coming as it does when the grounds of the club are at the height of their beauty.

You Go North to Get Warm in Australia

Topsy-Turvy Land Bewilders Stranger with Its Inverted Seasons and Geography.

By Mason Warner.

SYDNEY N. S. W., Australia—Try this interesting little stunt: Take a map of Australia, turn it upside down, and hold it before a mirror.

You will find the reflection so near a reproduction of the map of the United States that the resemblance will startle you.

At the top of the reflection the Great Australian Bight makes an indention similar to that of the Great Lakes on the northern boundary of our country.

The outlines of the east and west are like the coast lines of the Atlantic and the Pacific. The northern coast line of Australia is almost a replica of the southern boundaries of the United States. Cape York peninsula imitates Florida, the Gulf of Carpentaria is a sister, if not a twin, of the Gulf of Mexico, and northern Australia gives a good impersonation of Texas.

"That Balmy Breeze from the North."

While you study the inverted map of Australia, consider that in this topsy-turvy land you are looking at the hot and cold zones of temperature as they appear on a map of the United States.

Oranges, lemons, bananas, sugar, and tropical fruits grow in the north; the south is the land of snows. It is rather difficult to orient yourself when you hear references to "that cold south wind" and "wasn't that balmy northern breeze pleasant this morning?"

The seasons, too, keep a stranger constantly readjusting himself. When you are told, "It's almost as cold as a July day," or "It's hotter than January," you wonder if you've heard aright.

Department stores feature sales of woolens in June; summer frocks are displayed in October. Australian women are smartly dressed. Paris and Hollywood set the fashions followed here.

But adaptations must be made. The styles and fabrics shown in Paris for spring are worn at the same time for autumn in Australia. It is not so easy to translate winter materials and trimmings into models for summer wear; so in the extreme seasons Australian fashions may lag behind those of Europe and America. This may result in the well dressed Sydney woman being six months ahead of Paris two seasons of the year, and behind the mode prevailing in the northern hemisphere in winter and summer—thus preserving a fair average.

Where a Chicagoan Feels at Home.

Notwithstanding the contrary seasons and traveling north for warmth and south to enjoy cool weather in winter months, Australia is so like the United States in contour, topography, distances, and people that the American feels at home here.

The crowds in the Sydney streets have a familiar look. There are the same confusion, hurry, and noise that prevail in Chicago. Men in their swinging stride, with high held heads, indicate an independence of spirit, a self-reliance and resourcefulness that are common in all countries recently emerged or emerging from a pioneer state.

The amazing and amusing flora and fauna of Australia are something else again. I saw a eucalypt and a dingo today. Neither had any bark. The first is a tree; the second is a dog. Descriptions of Australian animals are too long for the present letter and will be reserved for the future.

Six Days to Cross the Continent.

Distances in Australia sound like travel chatter around the radiators at home. Crossing the continent from Brisbane to Perth, an east to west railroad journey similar to going from New York to San Francisco, one travels a distance of 3,384 miles in six days, with too many changes of cars to meet the enthusiastic approval of Americans. There are five different gauges of tracks, varying in width from 3 feet 6 inches to 5 feet 3 inches.

Mountains, fertile plains, and barren deserts are traveled in going from the Pacific to the Indian ocean. In crossing the treeless Nullarbor plain the railway runs without a curve for more than 300 miles—the world's top for straight line railroad building. The track does not cross a single permanent stream of water for more than a thousand miles.

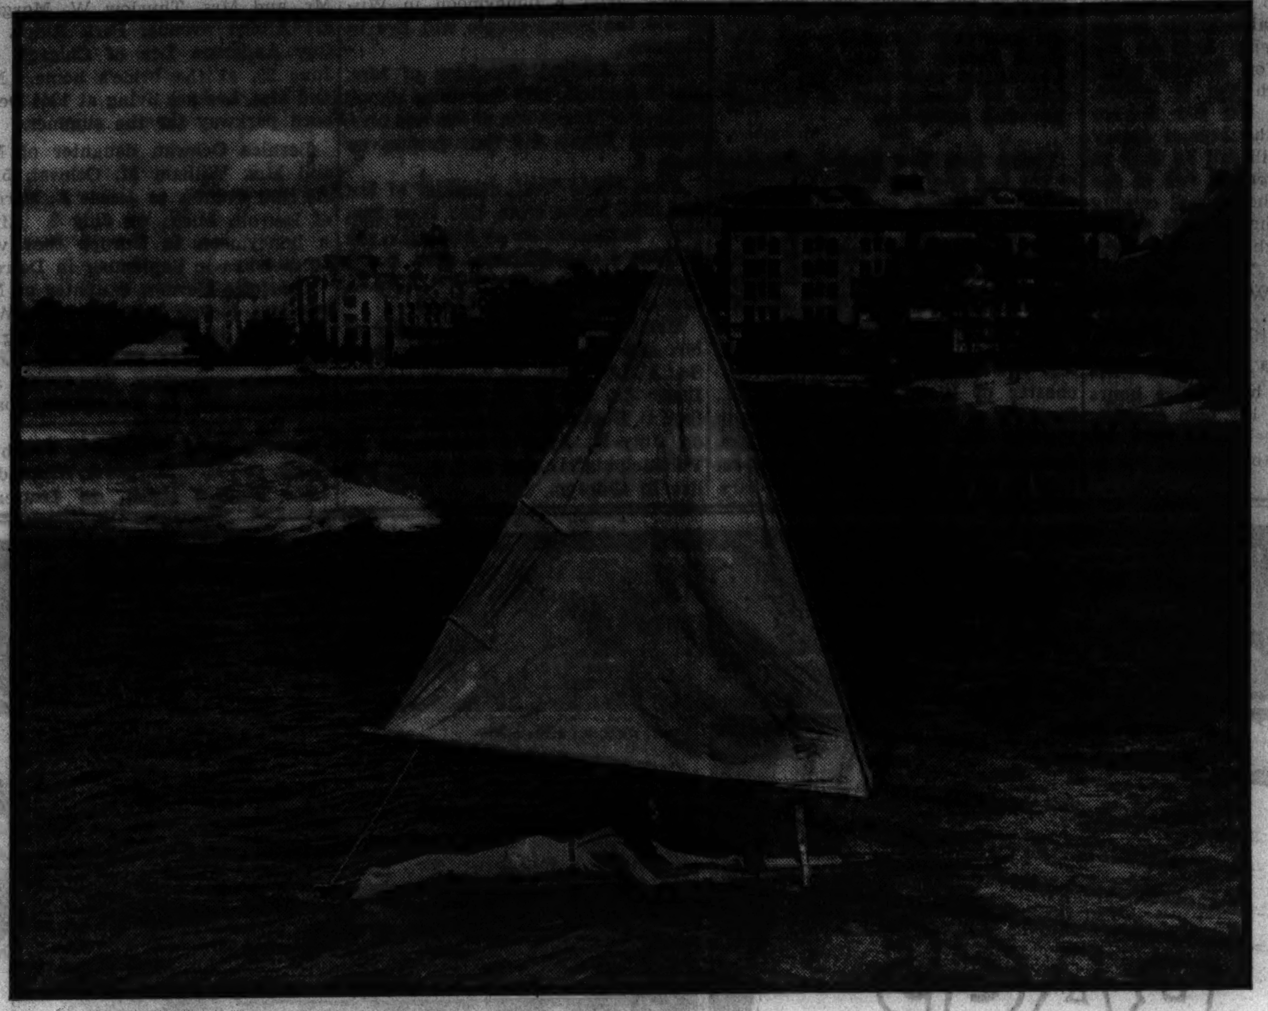
There is no railroad from Melbourne on the southern coast to Darwin on the north, comparatively situated as are New Orleans and Duluth, but the distance straighter than the crow flies is 1,950 miles. It is a voyage of four to six weeks around the coast, according to the speed of the ship.

A Land that Needs More People.

All distances between cities are important in Australia. From Sydney to Melbourne is 589 miles, from Melbourne to Adelaide is 483 miles, from Sydney to Brisbane is 613 miles. Sleeping cars are comfortable. It would be easy to improve the meals in the dining cars.

Australia is keenly sensitive to the need for more population. One hears on every side that "the land must have more men." Wool and wheat are two great sources of wealth. In the one state of South Australia there are still 60,000,000 acres of unoccupied land, said to be capable of carrying more than 20,000,000 sheep.

Australian cities have a prosperous look. Everybody seems to have money to spend. Labor is well organized and wages are comparatively high. This is a "white man's country," and immigration from oriental and far eastern countries has been restricted for many years; the ports are closed to yellow, brown, or black laborers. The unions are a power in the land and the labor vote has great influence on all legislation.



WIND AND WAVES BOTH PROVIDE THE LOCOMOTION HERE

Something new under the Waikiki sun is this surfboard rigged with a special sail. It's just as tipsy as the other variety, but perhaps it can develop more speed.

Answers to Travel Quiz

Question 1—According to legend, Dr. Schuckburgh, a British surgeon stationed with the Rensselaer, N. Y., garrison, wrote the song as a satire on provincial troops in 1768.

Question 2—Vassar college, founded in 1861.

Question 3—Cheboygan, Mich. The lumber mills of the '80s left it.

Question 4—250,000.

Question 6—Albania.

Cattlemen Once Carried Powder Boxes in Hungary

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—That most needed requisite of modern women—the powder box—was once toted by man, although for a different purpose.

This has been revealed through recent excavations near Lake Balaton, and confirms stories told by old cattlemen of the Hungarian plains.

According to these tales, Hungarian cattle and horse dealers of centuries ago always carried small round boxes having a mirror on the inside and containing a scented pomade. The pomade, it is stated, was used by the men to give their long whiskers, extending about one foot on each side, the necessary support and glossy appearance.

Quebec Nuns Guard 200 Year Old Flame

QUEBEC.—Nuns of the Ursuline convent, one of the oldest cloisters in this French Canadian city, guard a flame that has been burning steadily since 1717.

Lighted in that year by a young French girl, Marie Madeline de Repentigny, when she entered the convent upon the death of her fiancé, the flame has been tended by the nuns since her death. When in 1759 the British general, James Wolfe, besieged Quebec part of the convent was destroyed. But ten nuns remained in the ruins to protect the light from extinction.

Another church here visited by many American tourists is called the Lady of Victories. Although started in 1688, it received its present name when prayers of the French Canadian inhabitants were answered for protection of the city against two invasions by English forces.

A church with a name that fires the imagination of visitors is the Church of Perpetual Adoration. In it white hooded nuns with veiled faces pray before an altar night and day. The devout believe that when this worship is discontinued the world will come to an end.

Not in the Black Belt.

Three-fourths of the population of Cuba is white.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

I once read that there is a place where people who walk are looked down upon. Can you tell me where it is? G. B.

In Urumchi, capital of Sinkiang. Every one of importance rides, and the better the mount the greater the respect accorded the rider.

What is the fare for a four day vacation tour by railroad and Great Lakes steamer from Chicago to Niagara Falls and return? P. D. M.

The price is $32.50, and this includes all expenses.

When does the hunting season open in Quebec? R. C.

Sept. 1.

Where is the best place to see the Great Wall of China? H. D.

The best preserved section may be seen at Shanhaikwan, once the door to all northern China. There the Wall runs into the sea.

Is it true that lipsticks come from the Canary islands, and what are they made of? W. E. S.

1. Yes. 2. Cochineal. Formerly used in making dye stuffs, cochineal had to bow to new inventions in coloring extracts. Now it is used in the manufacture of lipsticks. It is extracted from the dead bodies of insects that thrive on cactus and other tropical plants.

Premium on Height.

In Italy full fare is collected on trains for youngsters over a certain height. This relieves conductors of arguments with thrifty mothers who insist that their little boy is still under age.

Guatemala Is Summer Mecca for Travelers

Highlands of Republic Have Much in the Way of Scenery and History.

By E. S. Whitman.

GUATEMALA is rapidly becoming one of the most popular centers of travel interest in the western world. It is the most northern of the five republics of Central America and lies only six steamship cruising days from the port of New York and four from the port of New Orleans.

Every week American liners serve that colorful republic. Ships land their passengers at Puerto Barrios, the Atlantic seaport of Guatemala, at which point the visitors are transported to the mile high mountain capital by a day's ride in modern parlor cars. During this day's journey, which may be compared with a trip through the Swiss Alps, the traveler passes through the lush lowland country made famous by the Maya civilization of nearly twenty centuries ago.

The Mayas were a race of remarkable qualities and characteristics. There is no question but that they gave the western hemisphere its greatest intellectual culture. It is probable that they spent thousands of years in attaining their degree of civilization. They built cities whose ruins today excite widespread curiosity and admiration. In art, astronomy, and many other fields of human activity these ancient people achieved a distinction that cannot be denied. Among other things, they invented a remarkable system of hieroglyphic writing by which they were able to record facts and events of importance, and they built stone cities that attest a wealth and a splendor beyond anything seen elsewhere in the new world.

Reminiscent of Babylonia.

Visitors are fascinated by these crumbling monuments, the stone turtles and frogs weighing twenty to fifty tons, all intricately carved and strangely reminiscent of the carvings unearthed in Babylonia.

After this exciting day's railroad journey the passengers find themselves in cool, mile high Guatemala City. From there they are conveyed in private automobiles on a week's tour, out through the highlands, into the old-time villages, past monasteries and churches, past the bluest of blue volcanic lakes, over mountainous divides that stagger the imagination, and then to peaceful hamlets where they not only find excellent hotel and inn accommodations, but also are in position to witness what goes on in the famous markets held inside the walls of roofless, ruined churches. Here Indians come to town—straight, brown-skinned women in those bright costumes of the mountain villages, vigorous Indian men in their colorful aprons—bringing piles of strange fruit, native pottery, native woven textiles, flowers, many curious things that are offered eagerly for sale.

Relics of the Culture of Andalusia.

Oxcarts creak past on their way to the coffee plantations, blossoming vines run riot over the ruined cloisters, and above many of the old doorways one can still make out the carved armorial crests of the leading families of ancient Spain. For it is to these highlands that Pedro de Alvarado, 400 years or more ago brought the culture of Andalusia.

Street pageants, wandering marimba bands, importunate Indian peddlers offering their hand-woven, naturally-dyed woolen blankets, so finely made that they are waterproof—these are only random examples of the features that await the traveler to these mountain fastnesses.

Don't be surprised if a modern automobile and an oxcart challenge one another for the right of way. Don't be surprised if a motor launch and a primitive dugout canoe challenge one another on the waters of a sapphire volcanic lake, for this is a country of old and new—where a span of twenty centuries seems only a day. A remarkable country, a remarkable people—and all to be seen within a vacation period of three weeks.

Comfort and Friendliness.

One of the chief charms about this visit to Guatemala is that it may be made so readily and so comfortably. The ships which sail with the regularity of railroad trains were built to cruise tropical waters. Rooms are amidships, each faces the sea, each is mechanically ventilated, and every passenger is a first class passenger. There is only one dining saloon sitting, at which time every passenger on the ship may be accommodated.

Sea Voyagers Forget Cares of Homeland

Turmoil of Business and Politics Left Behind with Receding Shore.

By Frederic Babcock.

ON BOARD THE S. S. PARIS—[Special.]—Wheeling shadows in the dawn fog, silhouettes against the midday sky, riders of evening's somber surf. The shrieking gulls, as much a part of the seascape as the breakers themselves, blend their plumage with blowing spindrift as we set sail on a midsummer cruise to western Europe.

Just as the political and atmospheric conditions in America start getting all steamed up, we take to the coolness of the Atlantic and the quietude of lands far removed from the hubbub. We haven't even waited to hear the President accept renomination. For all we know, perhaps he didn't even accept. Such a contingency might cause excitement in the homeland, but out here it doesn't matter. Nothing much matters.

A hundred of us from the middle west are among the 512 passengers. Raymond-Whitcomb has chartered the Paris to take us away from our somewhat shopworn surroundings and to show us twenty-four ports in nine countries. We shall visit every European land touching the Atlantic, and two others on the North sea. Many of our stopping places are off the usual paths of travel. We hope to have the thrill of finding scenes that hitherto we have only dimly imagined.

Travel a Real Way of Acquiring Knowledge.

If Dr. Johnson were alive today he probably would be one of us. Did he not say that the "true use of traveling is to regulate the imagination by reality"? In cruising, perhaps more easily than in any other form of travel, there is the opportunity to see things they really are, instead of thinking how they may be.

A cruise is a highly agreeable way of acquiring knowledge—about the sea, the stars, the ship's lore, and foreign peoples and their countries. It is one thing to know that a large part of the world's fancy lether goods is produced in Morocco, but quite another to see the natives at work, squatting in their doorways or in the dim recesses of their shops; one thing to know that much fine embroidery is made in Madeira and then sold for a song, but quite another to see the patient's brown fingers fashioning the pieces; one thing to know that corals come from Naples, but quite another to see the stones being shaped and graded in the shadow of Vesuvius.

However much we may know in theory about eight bells, lifeboat drill, the phosphorescence of the sea, bazars, native boys diving for pennies, and Portuguese men of war, they do not assume real significance until we have seen or heard them in reality. We may know that jacarandas and bougainvillæa flourish in Mediterranean latitudes, but until we have seen the trees in mauve bloom or the blood-red riot on the white walls we cannot fully appreciate their splendors.

Memory Long Retains Experiences of Travel.

We may think that upon our return to prosaic and perhaps unglamorous surroundings the hundreds of mental pictures we have assimilated in a hurry will escape us. But time will prove us wrong. We shall become a part of all we have met. Personal experience impresses as no story or picture postcard can, and we shall find that those mental pictures are safely lodged in our memories. Like Wordsworth's daffodils, they will "flash upon that inward eye" at unexpected moments as long as we live.

For some of the passengers such a cruise as this one is purely a marine affair. The blue days at sea are enough. These travelers wish for no better sights than the ship and the ocean. To stand aloof in the stern and watch the wake plowing its endless white furrow, to hazard guesses as to the nature of strange coasts, to scan the horizon for other craft and try to figure out whether the speck is a liner, freighter, tanker, trawler, or humble tug—these things provide full contentment for the devotees of the sea. For them the white, green, and red lights of passing ships have a greater fascination than the white lights of the big cities. To them the hundred and one minor surprises that punctuate a ship's life from sunrise to sunset are of greater account than the more sophisticated pleasures ashore.

A cruise can satisfy all tastes, on land or sea. And nowadays it does. Not so long ago cruising meant adventure for the few. Today it means adventure for the many.

Cruise to Many Ports Is Made in Comfort.

It would be hard to imagine a more comfortable ship than the Paris. This French liner is a quadruple screw, oil burning affair of 34,569 tons. Her cabins are unusually spacious. She is a mid-Atlantic reproduction of the real Paris. Her decorations are more restrained than those of the Normandie and the Queen Mary, and she carries herself like the aristocrat she is.

Furthermore, she has a double hull and watertight bulkheads, with hydraulically operated doors that close from the bridge, thereby making her cellular—the safest form of ship construction. She is manned by sailors from Brittany and Normandy, men whose ancestors have sailed the seas for centuries.

It is stated that never before has a ship of the size and luxury of the Paris been chartered for a cruise to so many out of the way places in western Europe. Comparatively few of the twenty-four ports we shall visit in Madeira, Portugal, Spain, France, England, Ireland, Scotland, the Shetland Islands, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark are seen by the thousands of Americans who pour into Europe every summer. By the regular means of travel it would take several trips, or one trip of rather formidable length and repeated changes, to cover this territory. We expect to do it in a little more than a month.

One thing has been rather a surprise to this correspondent, whose business it is to keep track of travel matters for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and who is now taking a bus man's holiday by traveling. That thing is the lack of whoopee. In other days cruises were patronized largely by persons of the type you find hanging around the night clubs, but these people are traveling for the sake of travel itself.

Seven Prizes Awarded for Articles on Italy

IN a contest originated by the Italian ministry of press and public relations for the best article on the advantages of Italy from the tourist's standpoint, a decision has been made as to the winners. The offer was announced as of four prizes of 10,000, 5,000, 3,000 and 2,000 lire. The committee of judges, however, decided that the first prize could not in justice be awarded to any one of the many contestants and the prize money was divided as follows:

First—5,000 lire—to Lisa Sergio for the article, "Ancient Rome Emerges from Ruins Under the Hand of Mussolini," published by an American newspaper.

Second—3,000 lire—to Valentino Bellia for "Petite Histoire du Tourisme," published by a French magazine.

Third—3,000 lire—to R. Gelinet for "L'Effort Italien," published by a French magazine.

Fourth—3,000 lire—to Giovanni Cenzato "Invitacion a un Viaje por Italia," published by a Spanish magazine.

Fifth—2,000 lire—to Ernest de Weerth for "Italy Outdoors," published by an American magazine.

Sixth—2,000 lire—to Genevieve Pankhurst for "City of Dreams Come True," published by an American magazine.

Seventh—2,000 lire—to Bruno Albori for "Fahrt durch Italien," published by a German magazine.

Toy Railway Takes Care of Tourists

HAMILTON, Bermuda. — Come streamlined engines, come Lockheed-Vegas, come rocket ships, and Bermuda's toy railway will continue to travel its own leisurely, "subject to change" way, and island visitors will continue to like hitting Bermuda's high spots of interest via this quaint, restful method.

The Bermuda railway is the choice of most visitors as the best conveyance for obtaining a comprehensive idea of the island—and one of the least expensive. For $3, and in four hours, passengers can make the twenty-two mile trip from one end of the island to the other.

Along the beach, through a deep ravine whose flower covered walls are lovely with flaming tropical blooms, and over the trestle high above Hamilton harbor, every type of scenery is visible from the car windows. The train stops at old St. George's, where so much of Bermuda's history has been made; the government aquarium, Crystal and Leamington caves, Tom Moore's tavern, Swizzle inn, Gibb's Hill lighthouse, Waterlot inn, and Hamilton's Front street, with its displays of British sportswear, English china, and burnished Sheffield plate.

Dig for Rare Coins.

HARRISMITH, South Africa.—(AP)—Digging potatoes, a farmer found a double shafted Krueger half sovereign, one of the world's rarest coins. Within half an hour the fields were alive with feverish diggers, spurred by legends of treasure buried in Boer war days when the vicinity was a battlefield. Half ripened potato crops were ruined and several military landmarks destroyed.

Ireland's Forests.

There are 300,000 acres of woodland in Ireland.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

TOURS of the all-expense sort are proving increasingly popular for both home and foreign travel. Among those operated out of Chicago, the series which takes in the southwest and west has been liberally patronized. On these trips the traveler may visit the Texas exposition at Dallas and then the wonders of the Grand Canyon with its constantly changing vistas. After the attractions of the Los Angeles area there are the lands of the giant trees. From San Francisco the route leads through the Shasta ranges and on to Portland, the Columbia river and Mount Hood. Vancouver offers many points of interest and from there the return is through the Canadian Rockies with stops at Lake Louise, Banff and other spots famed for their beauty.

Whether mountain peak golf differs from sea level golf except in scenery, is open to debate but for those who prefer the heights, Switzerland is offering the real article. At Lucerne, Saint-Moritz, Zurich, Berne, Geneva and Interlaken there are courses at various levels, from 5,000 down to a mere 1,000 feet. The golfer can play in sheer isolation between snow-capped peaks, alongside the beautiful lakes of Lucerne, Zurich or Geneva or choose a mineral spring resort, such as Ragaz. On Aug. 8, Ragaz offers the flag competition, and on Aug. 9, the Ragaz cup, 18-hole stroke. A bogey competition will be staged on Sept. 7. The season ends with the Ragaz "championship knockout" on Sept. 12.

One of the exciting experiences that will be offered those who attend the rodeo and carnival week in Halifax, beginning Aug. 3, will be a dash to sea on the champion fishing schooner of the Atlantic, the Bluenose. At this time there will be held in Halifax the International Gyro convention and members have chartered Bluenose for a trip on Aug. 4. Capt. Angus Walters will be the skipper.

Trolling for steelhead trout is furnishing diversion for fishermen on Lake Charlevoix, Mich., and revives the story of the steelhead's appearance in Great Lakes waters. It is related that when the World's Columbian exposition closed in Chicago in 1893, an exhibit of steelhead trout was released in Lake Michigan. They multiplied prodigiously, especially in the rivers along the eastern shore. Shortly after 1900 the fish disappeared, either caught off or migrating to other waters. Several years ago the Sportsmen's club of Charlevoix decided to restock the Charlevoix lake and since then has yearly imported from 100,000 to 500,000 steelhead eggs from Oregon, hatched them in the federal hatchery at the lake and released the fry or fingerlings to build up the reserve. It is believed there are more than one million steelheads in Lake Charlevoix. Off Harbor Springs in Little Traverse bay the fishing for Mackinaw trout has been reported unusually good. One catch of mackinaws weighed 70 pounds. The trolling is done with 1,000 to 1,200 feet of copper wire.

About 400 persons of Polish ancestry will leave Chicago Aug. 16 for Dallas, Tex., under the guidance of the Travel Service Bureau, Inc. Heading the group will be the Polish Inter-Organization committee, of which John E. Niklibore of the Polish National alliance is president and Frank V. Zintak is honorary chairman. The purpose of the trip is to honor the memory of Gen. Felix Wardzinski, who fought with the Texans against Mexico in 1836.

Setting the Pace for France.

PARIS.—(AP)—Marseille is one of the fastest growing cities of France, census figures show. The population for 1936 is 914,232, an increase of 110,000 over 1931. Marseille is France's second largest city.

These Bibbers Slide for Home

NEUSTADT, Germany.—(AP)—The fame of the restaurant shaped like a wine barrel at Duerkheim, wine growing center in the Palatinate, inspired this town to go its neighbor one better.

A switchback slide built here is shaped like a wineglass 60 feet high and 36 feet in diameter. Inside steps lead to an inn.

Guests who have imbibed enough to make the downstairs journey hazardous can take the speedier route and switch back home around the outer edge of the "wine glass."

But even this project has not exhausted the possibilities of local ambition.

Rare Exhibits Lure Lovers of Art in Paris

Notable One Represents Five Centuries' Range in French Portrait Painting.

FOR the American tourist to France who is interested in art there is on view at the Exposition de Portraits in Paris five centuries of French portrait painting. This is one of the series of events staged for the Paris art season and is considered by experts worthy of rank with the Cezanne display at the Orangerie and the exhibit of Baron Gros' pictures at the Petit Palais.

Notable in the exhibition are the primitive portraits of Marie d' Anjou, consort of Charles VII, painted by an unknown artist about 1440. There also are a number of Clouets, one, the famous portrait of Marguerite de Valois, queen of Navarre, considered a masterpiece of psychological art. The French school of the 17th century is represented by a series of works by Mignard, Nanteuil, Largilliere, Rigaud, Menil de la Tour, Jouvenet, and Santerre. From the 19th century are Courbet's likeness of Jules Valles, the revolutionist; Delacroix's self portrait, and other famous canvases.

In the third exposition of Anglo-American works in Avenue Victor Emmanuel are nearly one hundred paintings, among them the attractive landscapes by Michael Baxte and John Allan Wyeth.

Chicagoans Continue Trek to Europe.

In the eastbound stream of Chicagoans in the last week were Judge and Mrs. E. K. Jarecki and their daughters, Marie and Virginia, sailing yesterday on the Rex for a tour of Europe. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Maclear with their sons, Allen and James, were on the same ship, as were Dr. Joseph Allegretti, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Stevens Jr., the Misses Edith and Florence Gants, the Misses Barbara Ann and Peggy Jean Sargeant, F. A. Byrne, Miss Paula Paschek, Miss Elvira Da Prata, and Mrs. Celeste A. Joyce and her daughters, Mary and Frances.

Sailing Thursday on the Aquitania were Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Ott and daughter, Dorothy, who will visit England, France, and Switzerland. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, Miss Margery Manthe, Miss Alicia Plant, Frank West, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sullivan and their children, Helen, Roger, and B. H. Sullivan Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Hobson, and E. A. Allen. Mr. and Mrs. H. E. A. Doree, who have been visiting Mrs. Doree's mother, Mrs. W. A. Pope of River Forest, are returning to their home in England on the same ship.

Among the passengers on the Scythia, sailing Friday, were Charles Milne, Mrs. Edmund Burke Hall, Miss Janice Ball, the Rev. Arthur McGuinness, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Rougier, Mrs. Ada M. Clarke, Mrs. Ellen Warner, Mrs. William Maguire, and Mr. and Mrs. John J. McHugh.

Dean Franklyn B. Snyder of the graduate school of Northwestern university, accompanied by Mrs. Snyder and their sons, Peter and Franklin, left on the City of Baltimore on Thursday for a European tour. H. C. Treichel, Miss Louise Treichel, and Mrs. A. B. Jahn also were passengers.

Leave on Cruise to Points on the Baltic.

Mrs. Cora Fox, Mrs. Maude Nichols, and Donald McGibney, radio commentator, were aboard the American Merchant when it steamed out of New York harbor on Friday. The same day Dr. Emma Barchard, Mrs. O. Oberg, and Mrs. B. Larsen left on the Scanpenn for a cruise to Copenhagen, Stockholm, Gdynia, Helsingfors, and Leningrad.

Chicagoans on the passenger list of the Normandie, sailing last Wednesday, were Mrs. Joseph Rend and her daughter, Mary; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Colnon, Mr. and Mrs. John C. SWIMMING MOOSE IN THE NORTHLAND

Trips to Alaska are full of surprises. From the steamers the travelers often see seal, whale, and porpoises. Occasionally they come upon swimming moose, as in this picture, or a great herd of caribou crossing the channel.

What! No Taxis?

Norwegians living on remote fjords use their boats to go to the nearest store, to mail a letter, to go to church, to buy a newspaper, and to earn their livelihood by fishing.

Just a Short Trip from the Kitchen

FROM stove to table is a comparatively short hop, skip, and jump in the Queen Mary.

The waiters waste no shoe lether and the diners have no cause for impatience over the time that elapses between the moment they give their orders to the moment the food is placed before them.

That's because the kitchens are placed hard by the dining rooms. They are situated on the same deck and in between the first class and the tourist dining saloons, thus fulfilling the ideal of all hotel and big restaurant operators ashore to have as short a distance as possible separate preparation of the food from its consumption.

All the kitchens are electrically operated.

Scots Renounce Sword.

EDINBURGH.—(AP)— Renouncing all war, the United Free Presbyterian church of Scotland passed a resolution at their general assembly here declaring that nothing can bring them to take up the sword against fellow creatures. Only four members dissented. One asked what the church's attitude would be if Britain was invaded. He was told that the proposal "renounced all war." "Then it's sentimental humbug," he said.

Old Bermuda City Makes Bid for Travelers

Historic St. George's Would Regain Prestige It Lost to Hamilton.

ST. GEORGE'S, ancient capital of Bermuda, is making a bold bid to recapture its former prestige as the first port and harbor of that Atlantic British colony.

A new channel, the Town Cut, has been dredged deeper and wider so that, like a miniature Panama canal, it now permits passage of large ocean liners into the land encircled St. George's harbor. Heretofore, tenders have met steamships outside and taken passengers to the town by a circuitous route, passing a number of picturesque wrecks that make the harbor a graveyard of wooden and steel hulks.

As Hamilton, the capital city, has risen in importance, historic St. George's has become a pleasant, dreamy backwater haunt of vacationists, scientists, artists, and camera enthusiasts, says the National Geographic society.

Boomed During the Civil War.

St. George's is a colorful town, mellow in historical associations that link it to England and the United States. It was the only municipality in the Bermudas until the latter part of the 18th century, the capital until 1815—the year of Waterloo—and the seat of the first representative government in any British colony. Its first general assembly met on Aug. 1, 1620, nearly five months before the Pilgrims landed on the stormy Massachusetts coast.

The American civil war turned St. George's into a boom town. It was a center for English blockade runners carrying cargoes of war materials from England to the southern states in return for shipments of cotton. Spies and adventurers, secessionists, speculators, and sailors rubbed elbows along its winding streets and lanes. Money was so plentiful that merchants are said to have swept it on the floor behind their counters until the day's business was over, when banknotes, bills, and coins were shoveled into safes.

Modern civilization and progress have not disturbed the tranquility and old world atmosphere of St. George's. Palatial hotels and modern villas look down over narrow, curving walks and lanes bordered by white coral cottages of quaint architecture, smothered under bougainvillea and flaming hibiscus. At night it is a fairy book scene. So clear is the air that the moonlight, spilling over the oddly shaped roofs of the lower town, seems to cover them with white cake frosting. Then it is that one thinks of the old streets, running in all directions, whose names express an Alice in Wonderland charm: "Shinbone alley," "Featherbed alley," "Old Maid's Lane," and the wicked fairy sound of "South Prison road."

Railroad Stops at Town's Edge.

As in many European towns the railway stops short of St. George's proper. From the railroad station to the central Market Square one must take either a horse carriage or a bicycle, but never an automobile.

Except for a few trucks, motor cars have been prohibited in Bermuda since 1908, after a series of petitions from residents had brought about the ban. One of these, signed by 112 American hotel guests, bore the signatures of Woodrow Wilson, Samuel L. Clemens [Mark Twain], and Rear Admiral Upshur, U. S. N. Woodrow Wilson worded the petition.

A visitor to St. George's soon seeks out Old St. Peter's church, the oldest religious edifice in the new world. Built in 1619, the original altar table of red cedar is still in use, and the church has a beautiful christening bowl presented by Gov. Brown of Salem, Mass., who governed Bermuda from 1782 to 1788. Historic also is the home of the Scottish Masonic St. George lodge, No. 200, chartered in 1797. Originally the old state house, the building was erected in 1614 of hard limestone blocks, with walls two feet thick.

In St. George's, Tom Moore, the Irish bard, wrote some of his loveliest odes during a sojourn as registrar of the Court of Admiralty in Bermuda. The "Nea" of these odes is said to have been Hester Louisa Tucker, daughter of an old and influential island family. Her home is a crumbling ruin today and Tom Moore's place of residence is unknown, but his poetry has immortalized their idyl. Philip Freneau, "poet of the revolution," stayed at St. George's for six months in 1772 as the guest of the governor. His verses "To Amanda" were addressed to his host's charming daughter.

Named for Admiral Somers.

A white marble tablet in the beautiful Somers Gardens awakens memories of Bermuda's early colonial days. It stands in memory of the man after whom St. George's is named and reads: "Near this spot was interred in the year 1610 the heart of the heroic Admiral Sir George Somers, Ky., who nobly sacrificed his life to carry succour to the infant and suffering plantation, now the state of Virginia."

Somers Gardens are full of tropical trees and plants luxuriating in Bermuda's mean yearly temperature of 70 degrees. A curiosity in the gardens is a poinciana tree which, many years ago, had its trunk split, during a storm. To save the tree, chains were bound round the branches. The wounds healed and the tree continued to grow, so that little by little the chains have become embedded in the tree.

In 1932 a meteorological station was opened at Fort George, at the western entrance of the town. The meteorological services of the United States, Canada, and England coöperated in inaugurating this station, which occupies an unusually favorable position close to the borderline of two different types of air streams.

Off Nonsuch Island near St. George's, Dr. William Beebe conducted his remarkable deep sea dives in his bathysphere during 1930, 1932, and 1934.

To "Buy British" for Coronation

LONDON.—(AP)—Anticipating millions of dollars' worth of extra business during the coronation ceremonies for King Edward next year, British merchants already are getting ready for the rush.

Orders are being placed for pottery, pins, and similar souvenirs and for flags, pennants, and bunting.

Efforts are being made to insure that the merchandise be of British manufacture. For the King George jubilee of 1935, it is pointed out, large quantities of decorative material and knickknacks were shipped in from abroad.

Great Lakes Cruise

★ Beckoning is one of the world's most picturesque shore lines, studded with little harbors whose bustling activity vanished with the lumbering days. You can inspect the old stone fort at Mackinac which has seen action under three flags. You can travel the way of the birchbark canoes of the Jesuit missionaries, of the singing voyageurs of the fur trade, of the adventurous gentlemen of Old France who first charted the savage wilderness.

A Greek Poet's Pen Needed to Tell of This One

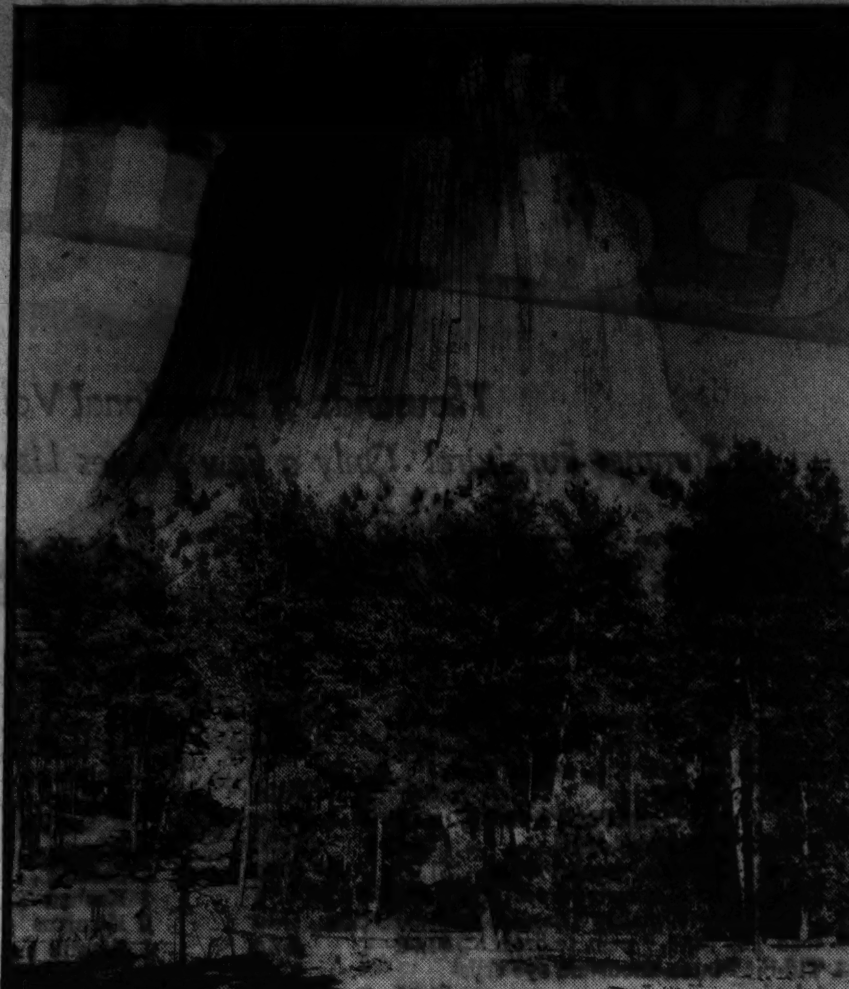
Midnight Sun Defies the Descriptive Powers of Modern's Typewriter.

By Gladys M. Petch.

I SHOULD like first to make a personal remark before I come to my story. I have lived some years in Norway and have become very fond of it. In these days of easy traveling, with such good connection as there is by sea, and with so many tourist ships in summer, the country is well known to many. I do not, therefore, intend to give you a description of it, such as you can so easily get from guidebooks, but shall try to give you a general idea of the country and its people as it appears to one who has moved so long among the inhabitants.

Those who come on the tourist ships see much and are delighted with the scenery and with their experiences generally. But they do not really get to know what lies behind all the display of nature in her most generous mood.

The fjords are wonderful, and so are the tumbling rivers and the majestic waterfalls and the sunlit, snow-covered mountains, and Norway in summer is charming, but there is much more of interest which the casual visitor cannot, of course, observe. Still, it seems to me, he might like to get this personal touch to add to his superficial impressions of the country.



A ROYAL MEMBER OF THE WORLD'S MARVELS

Looming 865 feet above the surrounding foothills, the Devil's Tower, in northeastern Wyoming, was set aside by President Theodore Roosevelt as a national monument in 1906. The obelisk is one of the outstanding attractions of its kind.

Like a Lion at Rest.

Norway's outline resembles a lion at rest, the southern part forming the majestic head, while the northernmost part of the country forms the tail. Its length, taken as a radius of a circle, would touch Rome and Moscow. But of all this only 4 per cent is capable of cultivation, and as much as 75 per cent is quite uninhabitable—just wild mountain plateau or thick forest. Two million eight hundred thousand people live there. It is a perpetual puzzle how all the girls find husbands, when there are so many Norwegians on ships at sea and so many young men go away to other countries, but they do, and the number of unmarried women over 30 years old is remarkably small.

Norway is a charming country for a tour, for the simple reason that its people do not set about making it a tourist place in the usual way. They try to advertise it and welcome anything which helps to bring visitors to their shores. They make excellent hotels all over the favorite parts of the country, the steamship and railway communications are good, and they have a system of motorcar service [1,000 route cars] to take the traveler into wild scenery, but you could never find Norway overrun or the tourist business made superior to ordinary forms of business. The tourist interests are considered as far as possible, but not as being an essential livelihood. You could never picture Norway as a country of hotel keepers and waiters. And that seems to be the beauty of the place. They give the traveler a hearty welcome, as if he were a guest of honor, and he enjoys such a sense of freedom and a feeling of being at home as he cannot possibly experience in any other world playground.

Not Much Interest in Strangers.

The people seem so loath to show any idle curiosity regarding strangers that to all appearance they have no interest in them. Even their own eminent persons pass quite unnoticed. When Amundsen came flying back from his first attempt to reach the pole, he and his companions got a splendid reception, but the next day he could go along the streets without attracting any attention. When occasion requires, the king and queen are treated with punctilious respect, but on ordinary days the queen walks down the street quite like any other passerby. The people are either clever or tactful in suiting their behavior or attitude to the necessities of the moment, in such things as this and in most other matters.

The coast climate in Norway offers a comparatively mild winter and a pleasantly cool summer. The journey by rail from Bergen to Oslo is intriguing. The line creeps along the fjord at first, where the bare rock rises sheer from the water's edge; then it climbs up towards the high central range. In summer you can see all the rushing streams without number, with slate-blue water coming from the melting snow. The highest point, Finse, is surrounded by ridges always covered with snow. You see plenty of glaciers and, as the climate is dry and the weather generally clear, the sight of these masses glittering in the sunshine is imposing.

The Land of the Midnight Sun.

From the highest point of the railway, the train passes down a gradual declivity, past the snowline to the forest region, and so onward through many, many miles of fir and pine woods to the level of the sea at Oslo.

The streets of Oslo are lively the year round. The one called Carl Johan is wide and well built, with its park on the one side and university buildings and shops on the other. And up the wide slope at the end you can see the king's castle crowning the slope. Dinner is at 3 o'clock, and the schools and university lectures are over at 2. So the time to see Carl Johan is when the military band comes marching up, just before 2 o'clock. It plays for an hour in the park opposite the university, but when the king and queen are in residence at the castle the band plays in front of it.

Without an allusion to the Midnight Sun a story about Norway, wonderful though it is with its majestic mountains, its deep blue, mysterious fjords, at the head of which villages nestle in idyllic settings, would be almost like the play of Hamlet without Hamlet. And so we will journey to that majestic rock, called North Cape, which marks the end of the old world.

The voyage up the coast is full of variation. One wonderful sight follows another so unendingly that there is scarcely time to find expression for the thoughts and to grasp the full meaning of it all before some new marvel comes in sight. Every time the boat turns leisurely inland through a narrow opening at the mouth of a fjord there is a new fairyland in prospect, a new spirit of adventure to be aroused.

Far from Being Bleak and Inhospitable.

At Tromsö the gaily dressed Lapps come down and are willing to do trade with you for any of the quaint articles of attire that may happen to take your fancy. It is from Tromsö that the whalers go, as well as the vessels that start on Arctic expeditions for exploration. The Arctic museum there has a fine collection of natural history and ethnological specimens. You have almost reached the 70th degree of latitude and there is in sight a magnificent range of snow and ice clad mountains, but the air is still and warm, and insects murmur in the grass far into the night, till you begin to wonder how you could possibly have imagined that you were bound for the icy north, where all would be bleak and inhospitable.

The next day you reach Hammerfest, in the far north, where the sun never sets from the middle of May to the end of July.

After leaving Hammerfest the vessel passes the Hjelmsöstauren Bird Rock, one of the most famous in the world. According to custom, a gun is fired and at once the sky is darkened with the clouds of birds that rise from the ledges. Yet even now, the cliffs seem still covered with birds. They say the old ones have become accustomed to this gun firing from tourist boats and that it is the younger ones only that rise from the nests.

Looking Out Into the Great Unknown.

Puffins and guillemots and gulls abound, and on the low rocky islets near the coast the eider duck has his haunt.

Having left the Bird Rock behind, it is not long before the northernmost point of the old world comes in sight. The North Cape looms high and imposing and naturally fitted for the end of the cruise and as a standpoint for the awed traveler to look out into the great unknown. The North Cape is not a part of the mainland, but is the precipitous northern headland of the island of Magerö. There is a bleak plateau into which the sea penetrates from all sides by means of cavernous fjords. The vessel lies at anchor in a little bay, sheltered by the cape. The travelers make their way up the steep path to the plateau in the dead of night, with, it is to be hoped for and expected, a bright sun riding low in the heavens. Like other famous capes of the world, it is more attractive as a geographic point, made immortal by tradition and history, than as a natural beauty. The plateau is windswept and cold, far colder than you have felt on board ship; you become aware that you are indeed within the Polar circle, and are looking over a waste of water, exposed to a wind that comes from the frozen wastes around the pole.

Greek Poet Could Have Described Scene.

You are more than a thousand feet above the sea. At midnight you gather on the edge of the steep cliff to gaze across the Arctic ocean at the Midnight Sun. The sun has had all the appearance of setting in the usual way: for some time the edges of the clouds have been touched with the ruddy fire of a sinking sun. There are clear bars of amber sky between dark lines of cloud. The sea is all aflame.

An officer of the ship explodes a bomb to indicate the time is 12 o'clock. A new day has begun. It needs the choice language of an ancient Greek poet to tell how the chariot of the sun has halted in its course and the horses' faces have been guided upwards. And of all the strange men from many lands that have steered into these seas, there was probably no Greek poet among them.

WRITER'S FAVORITE SIGHTS.

Clinton, Ia., July 5.—To the Travel Editor: I never fail to read your column in the Sunday paper. It is interesting to know where others have found their greatest thrills. Let me list ten of mine.

1. Canadian Rockies.
2. The Statue of Liberty and New York harbor at twilight from the deck of a sound steamer.
3. Big Thompson canyon, near Boulder, Colo.
4. Niagara Falls and whirlpool rapids.
5. The ocean at night from the piers at Atlantic City.
6. The Thousand Islands, as seen from a mail boat which winds in and out on a twenty mile trip.
7. Hudson river boat trip from New York City to Albany.
8. The nine mile beach walk around Mackinac Island.
9. The congressional library in Washington, D. C., at night.
10. Eagle Point park on the bluffs above the Mississippi at Clinton Ia., and the scenic drives along the upper Mississippi.

WOULD HELP SHUT-INS.

Chicago, Ill., July 13.—To the Travel Editor: I have been following with interest your travel column lately and have noticed the pleas for postcards, etc., for shut-ins. It has occurred to the writer that some means might be set up to furnish such people with travel literature. Steamship lines have tons of such material becoming obsolete at the end of each season that is thrown away. I am sure that if some plan could be worked out to see that this material reached worthy people they would be glad to turn it over to some source for its distribution. Possibly your readers would contribute the necessary postage to cover mailing if some means could be worked out for the distribution of it.

M. D. PARKER.

YEARNS TO TRAVEL.

Chicago, July 14.—To the Travel Editor: I have been reading your column and think it a splendid idea, for in this way people can pass on to others what they themselves have enjoyed. Ever since I can remember it has been my ambition to travel and enjoy the beautiful sights along the way. Perhaps there are some people reading this column who would be interested in some one willing to work in exchange for a chance to travel. I hope my letter finds its way into some one's heart.

MISS S. B. R.,
2342 North Latrobe avenue.

Anderson, Ind., July 8.—To the Travel Editor: Travel memories do not always consist of nature's beauties, such as stately mountains, picturesque bays, orange groves, and sparkling streams. Sometimes the traveler sees something that is more impressive than all these. Such an impression was carved deeply in this traveler's heart a few years ago on a trip to Alaska.

Our party journeyed by train from Skagway to Carcross, thence by boat across beautiful Lake Atlin to Ben My Cree, a modest but charming home built by a Welsh couple who had staked a claim some years ago. We had a delightful time inspecting this home and the garden outside, where pansies as large as teacups grew during the short summer.

In one corner of a room was an old fashioned melodeon, over which hung the Union Jack of Great Britain and the Stars and Stripes of our own beloved land. When time came to depart, the lovely Welsh lady seated herself at the melodeon and, inviting us near, played "Auld Lang Syne." At her request we joined her in singing it.

On the boat returning to Vancouver we had a meeting. We decided to do something for this couple. Remembering how she had spoken with enthusiasm of the voice of Alma Gluck, we voted to send her favorite song, "Lead Kindly Light," and other Gluck recordings for her little phonograph. This we attended to at Vancouver. Grateful acknowledgment was later received. I heard several times from the Partridges and was especially pleased when informed that she acknowledged more than four hundred letters. Some time later a local doctor, making this same trip, called upon me to bring me a message from them.

Last summer I met some tourists in San Francisco who were going to Alaska. I sent a message. I later heard from them that Mrs. Partridge had passed on. It is a memory now, but what a beautiful one!

Though then in health, they were really shut-ins, surrounded by a mountain paradise. I am happy to have had a small part in bringing them joy. I hope to be able to have a small part in bringing some happiness to other shut-ins through the medium of the Chicago Tribune's Lena B. Morse Travel club. May it grow and be successful always.

WILFORD B. BYRKETT.

Odd Uses for Churches.

The churches of Kilkenny, in Ireland, have been put to various uses in the past. The cathedral has been a stable, the Franciscan friary a tennis court, the Black abbey a courthouse, while the parish church has served both as a barracks and a hospital.

Art Institute Is Presenting a Diversified Group of Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Art institute has never put on a more diversified group of exhibits than that which was opened to the public last Thursday in the east wing galleries. The first large room is devoted to posters, chiefly foreign in origin, dating from 1890 to 1935. They are decorative and interesting, and extremely reminiscent of war days, when poster art flourished like the green bay tree.

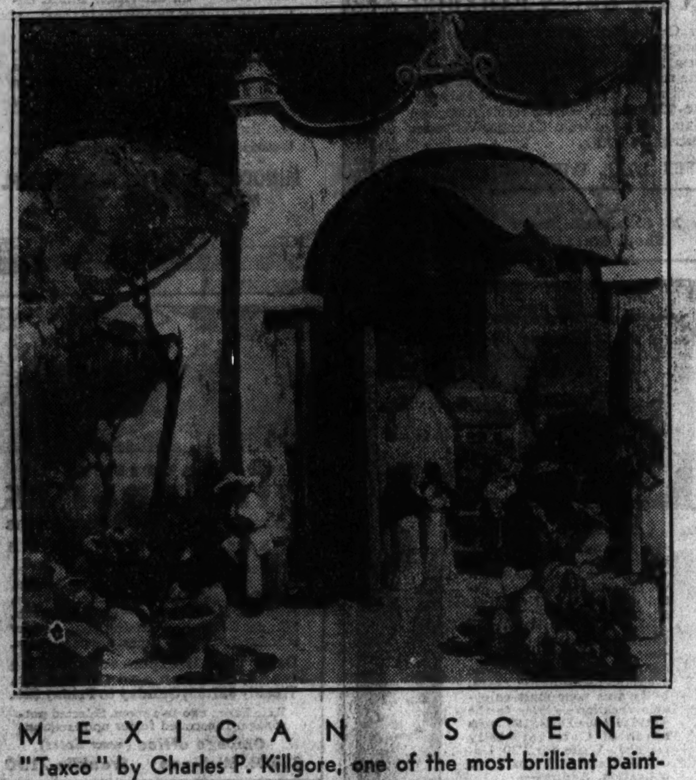
The appeal of the poster has not diminished in strength with the passing of time. The clarion call of bright blues, vivid reds, animated youth, and dashing objects—trains, cars, boats, birds, or what have you—is heard loud in the land, summoning one and all to drink, dance, travel, and buy. These foreign posters are more subdued than many we have seen, but each urges some one to do something.

From the first gallery two small rooms open. In one are the superb portraits by George P. A. Healy, one of the most distinguished American artists of the '90s. This is a room in which one lingers for many minutes. The portraits are as alive and vivid as though they were of today.

Portrait of Chicago's First Mayor Excellent.

They are the work of a master craftsman, a painter of genius. The magnificent seated Lincoln, life size, is a dominant note in the gallery. The portrait of Daniel Webster is a close second. It is superb. The portrait of William B. Ogden, first mayor of Chicago, is excellent.

Mr. Healy not only painted men successfully, his portraits of women are fascinating. One of the most alluring is that of Mme. Von Oberbeck. She is a Spanish type, with dark eyes and high color. Mr. Healy painted her in a black lace gown. The yellow rose at her throat and the beads about her neck contrast significantly with the black. The handling of materials is as masterly here as in any portrait by a Flemish painter. As great craftsmen as they were, this American portrait painter equals their best.



MEXICAN SCENE

"Taxco" by Charles P. Killgore, one of the most brilliant paintings in the current summer shows at the Art institute.

The portraits of the artist's wife and her charming daughters are each in turn delightful. The ardent, sparkling portrait of Miss Crawford, sister of the novelist, is another irresistible canvas. It seems a pity these portraits should not find a permanent home on the walls of one of the Art institute galleries, where they could be studied and admired the year around. G. P. A. Healy is an American artist whose reputation should grow, like that of Sargent and Whistler, with the years. Of such is the backbone of American art.

The second little gallery is devoted to the water colors of Winslow Homer, whose centennial is being celebrated this summer all over the country. The water colors are chiefly of scenes in the Adirondacks and Maine. One of them will prove enticing to anglers. It is the "Leaping Fish," and the artist has painted a large trout with a fly in its lip—a marvelous fish whose size one wouldn't need to exaggerate in winter tales.

"After the Rain" Gem of the Palmer Quartet.

The next large room is hung with the paintings of Karl Buehr, Oskar Gross, Pauline Palmer, Charles P. Killgore, Julius Moessel, Edgar Cameron, and Rudolph Ingerle. Each painter was allowed four pictures. "After the Rain," by Pauline Palmer, is a delicious little picture, probably the gem of her quartet. Charles Killgore gives us four sturdy Mexican pictures. He paints with broad strokes, has an eye to the whole, and a disregard for petty detail. Stand away from his canvases if you would get the best impression of them. They have color, drama, design, pattern, and form.

Karl Buehr has a delightful foursome. "The Green Hills" is typical of his alert, rhythmic manner. His paintings possess swing and motion. They sparkle. Note what an immensely important place is taken by one tiny spot of paint, as in "Washerwomen, Jueteic," where the little figure in bright pink brings the entire composition into focus.

Oskar Gross gives us a cross-section of his art. "Out Into the Sunshine" is an early picture, and shows a little girl on a pony trotting gayly forth with a white poodle bounding by her side. More demure and more charming is the old-fashioned figure on the hillside with a collie for companion, "Homeward Bound." His "Christmas Choral" will be remembered from a small picture exhibit at the Palette and Chisel Academy of Fine Arts, where it was purchased by Mr. Kenneth Merrick, who lends it now.

Ingerle Is a Brilliant Painter of Landscapes.

Rudolph Ingerle is one of Chicago's most brilliant landscape painters. His compositions are on a large scale, and invariably are beautifully composed. His use of color, yellows and browns particularly, is thrilling. He paints mountains so real one almost feels their presence. He paints landscapes like poems. His sunshine and shadows are magically complete. "From Freymont Hill" and "On the Road to Gatlinburg" are two of the important pictures in this category of shows.

Julius Moessel gives us four dramatic compositions, imaginative and a little difficult. He can paint marvelously decorative canvases, but in this instance he has contented himself with four story telling pictures. His "Father and Son" is the most curious composition, and "Don Quixote" the best.

The next smaller gallery is devoted to a definite segment of Chicago's modern artists. The pictures will bear a close inspection. Some of them lose with distance. Their humor is close range stuff. Of these the portrait of Ethel Spears by Elise Donaldson is one of the best. Her "Millinery Department" is another jewel. Fritzi Brod is represented by a number of small works, some of them have charm, many have pattern, most have color. They are oriental in their elaborate detail. The overly fat women of whom she makes heroines become monotonous, but if one can overlook her tendency to simulate Rivera [copying the stolidity and solidity of his peasants] one can do well with this part of the show.

Julia Thecla Pictures Show Mood Variations.

Julia Thecla gives us a number of little pictures, too. She is a painter with a black and a white side, a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde complex seems to control her conceptions. You will find "Four Roses," an interior with four roses in a milk bottle, and an intoxicated figure stretched on the bed, with an empty whisky bottle falling from a relaxed hand, a sordid piece of realism, but delicate, sensitive, exquisite work in "The White Hat."

In the following large gallery are hanging paintings by Dale Nichols, Boris Anisfeld, Hubert Ropp, Nicola Ziroli, Zsissly, Joseph Vavak, and Andrew J. Haugseth. Hubert Ropp is consciously coy in several of his compositions, "Spring" and "The Compact" are two of the occasions where his humor is so evident it hurts, but sincerely charming is his "Portrait of Mrs. Ropp."

Boris Anisfeld employs a great deal of color, and lets his brush wander freely over a large field without expressing anything of great purpose. His most beautiful piece of painting is found in "Wreath Between the Mountains," where he has chosen to depict Canadian thistles with a marvelous accuracy that transfigures their purple crests.

"Sledging" Is Winter Landscape with Charm.

Dale Nichols runs a straight course, as we are accustomed to his doing. His "Sledging" is a winter landscape with more beauty in it than we usually find in his work. The "Spring Plowing" and "January" are good, but something about the snow and sky in "Sledging" makes it more likable. Intangible charm! There is that in "Sledging."

Haugseth shows several Chicago beach scenes that are animated and pleasing. His "Mother and Children" is a lovely canvas. Vavac stands in direct contrast with his emphatic and sordid realism. His work is bitter and radical. His interpretation of Van Gogh's death is a horrible picture. Vavac shows only half of life in his paintings, according to him Jeremiah is high priest, and there is nothing but woe in the land. Nicola Ziroli and Zsissly cover nicely the melodramas of the stricken as recounted by Vavac, with a tale of gorgeous still lifes and elaborate interiors.

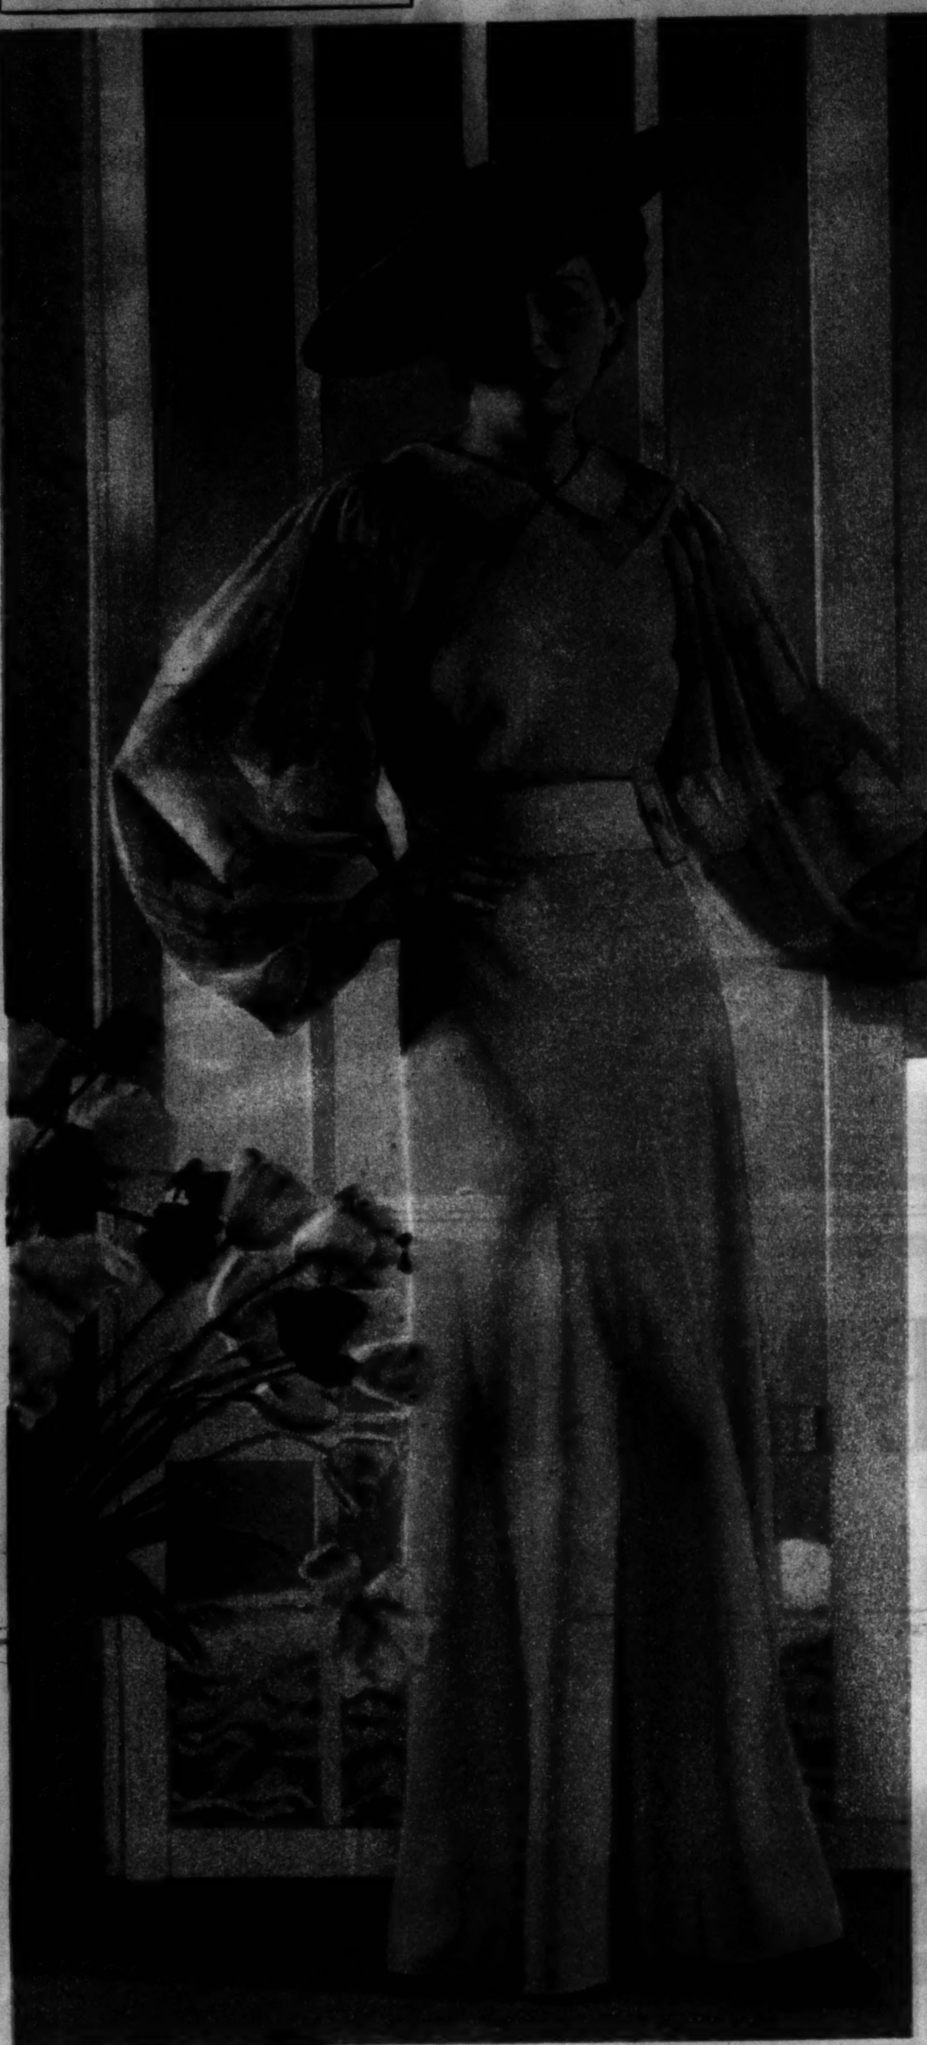
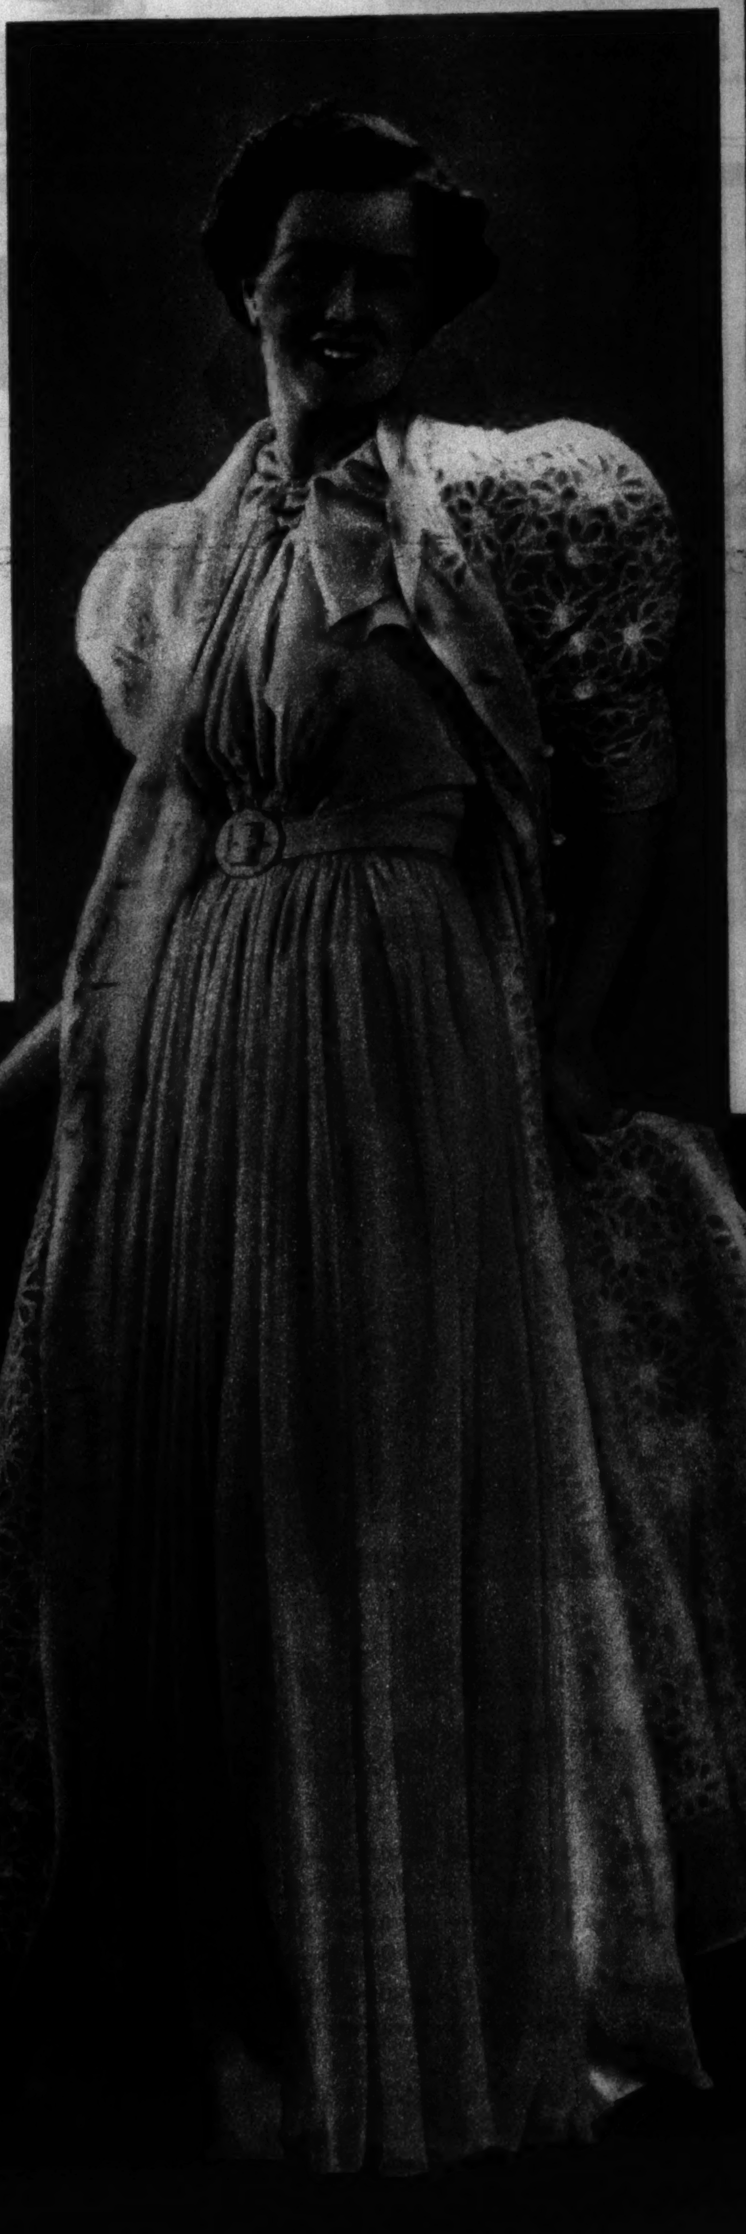
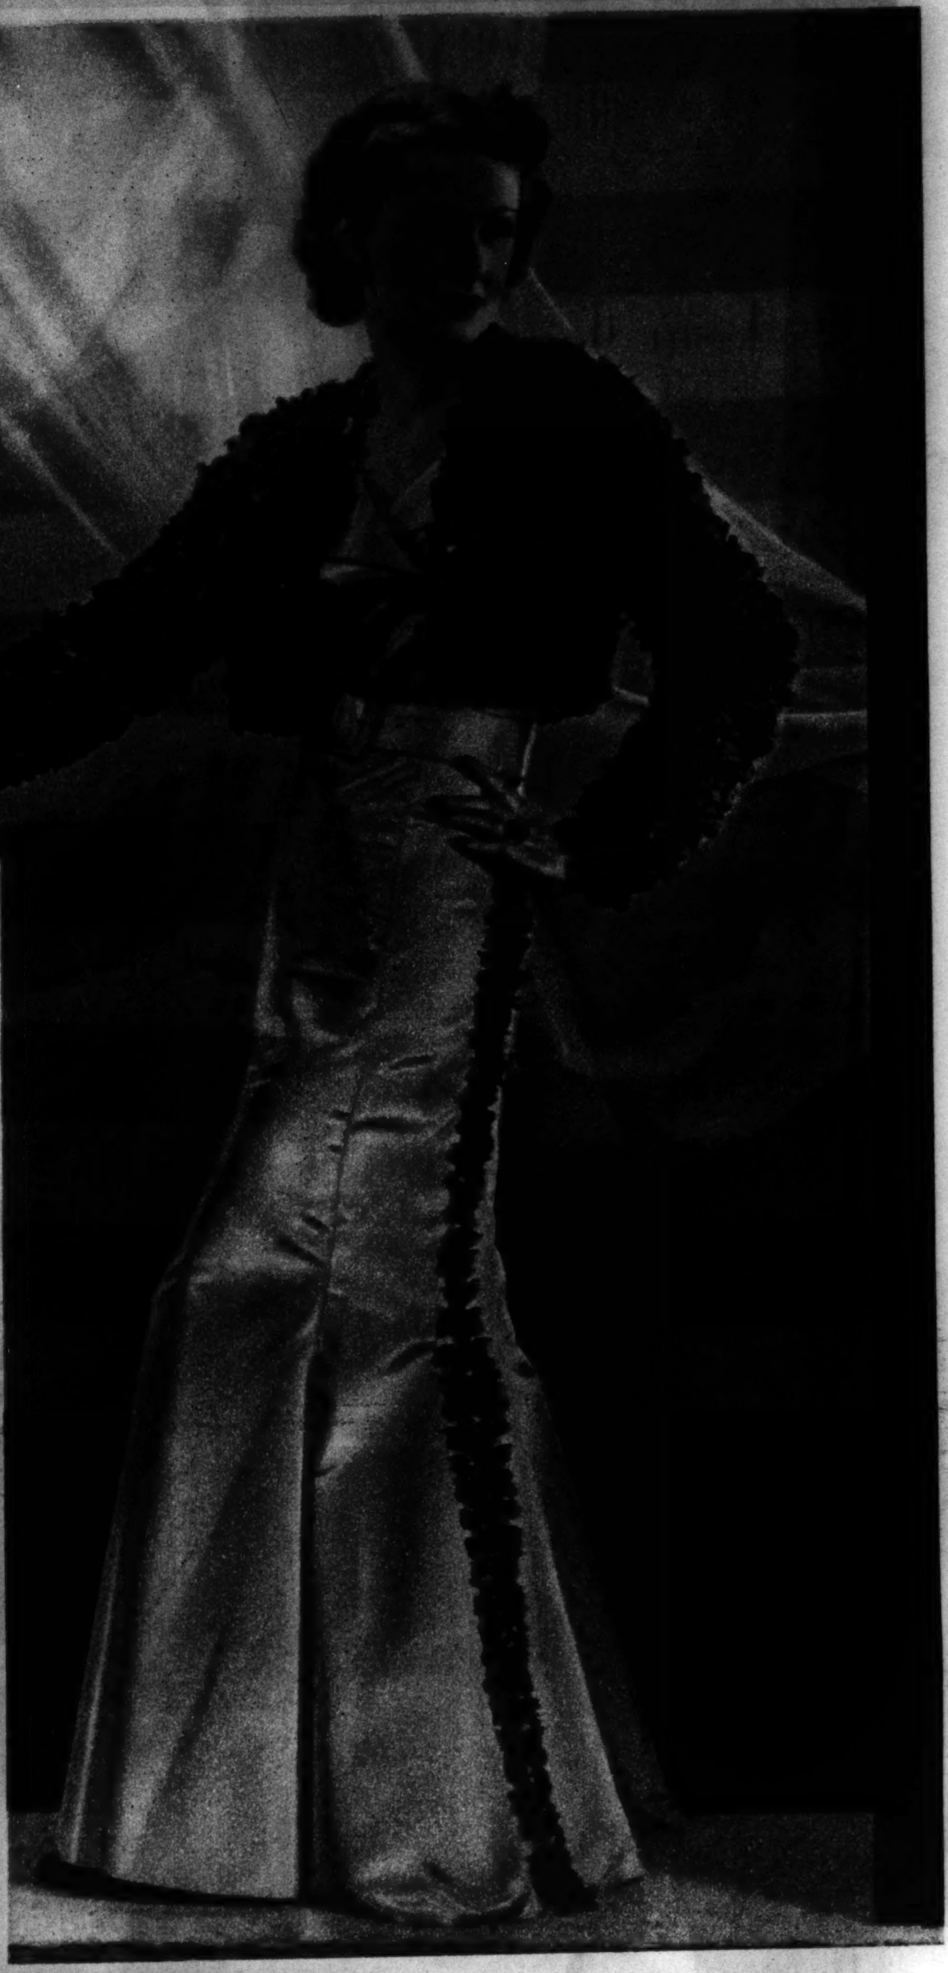
Midsummer Styles From Paris



SMART GARDEN parties and country clubs will be the background for this delightful afternoon frock from Jeanne Lanvin, made of shell pink crepe romaine. The peasant sleeves are barred with delicate pink lace, and there is a yoke of the lace around the shoulders. A cartwheel hat of purple straw is trimmed with feathers.





MARCEL ROCHAS SEWS VIOLETS all over the green taffeta jacket of this tailored dance ensemble, and puts stripes of violets down the sides of the crisp taffeta skirt of the dress to ape the braid on military trousers. The blouse buttons on four enameled violets, and there is a stitched taffeta belt at the waistline.

LUCIEN LELONG COMBINES the yellow of the tulip with mauve to make a tone poem of this ensemble for the hostess. The yellow organdie coat is embroidered with white flowers in all-over pattern. The frock of mauve chiffon has a very full skirt and soft blouse with a jabot held by a jeweled pin.

IT LOOKS INTO THE FUTURE . . . TO GIVE A NEW KIND OF VALUE TODAY!

THE Pulaski Skyway, a viaduct striding ten miles across New Jersey cities and countryside, anticipates the highways of the future. . . . So, too, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR anticipates the motor car of the future. Its modern looks and modern ways are a forecast of what all cars will come to. In power, comfort, safety, it is far ahead of its time.

Since this is so, an owner's present investment in the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR holds good year after year. He is not buying a new model; he is buying a new kind of car. It will still be a new kind of car long after it has covered thousands of miles in luxury and dispatch. It will still be setting the pattern for the future!

The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is the only car under $3000 with a V-12 cylinder engine. That is the first forward-reaching idea to set the car apart. The engine develops 110 horsepower. It is so efficient that owners report 14 to 18 miles per gallon!

But that remarkable record is due, also, to another new idea — the authentically streamlined body. Beneath the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR's flowing contours is a rigid framework of steel. Body and frame are a single unit. This structure, for all its strength, is light in weight; the engine wastes no energy pulling extra poundage. Every horsepower is put to good use.

Every ride in the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is a "front-seat" ride. Transverse springs take up disagreeable jounces of the road. Discover, today, this car of the years to come — already proved by more than 10,000 enthusiastic owners. The Lincoln Motor Company, builders of Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

V-12 engine — 110 horsepower. Wheelbase 122 inches. Springbase 133 inches. High power-to-weight ratio. Room for six passengers and luggage. Eight colors. Safety Glass throughout. Two sedan body types. Owners report 14 to 18 miles per gallon of gas. Convenient terms through your dealer on new low-cost Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.

WHY CORNS COME BACK BIGGER, UGLIER

unless removed ROOT* AND ALL

Small
Big BIGGER

● The root of a corn goes deep. When you cut it at home, you merely trim off the top with serious danger of infection, and soon the corn comes back bigger, uglier, more painful than ever. That's why millions of men and women are now using this new, quick, double-action Blue-Jay method. Pain stops instantly—then the entire corn lifts completely out Root and All in 3 short days.

Blue-Jay is a tiny, modern, scientifically medicated plaster. Easy to use, invisible, held snugly in place by special Wet-Pruf adhesive. Can't stick to stockings. Doesn't make shoes tight. Get Blue-Jay today and banish corns for good. 25¢ for a package of 6 at all druggists.

9 out of 10 girls should make this "Armhole Odor" Test—

Tonight, when you take off your dress, smell the fabric at the armhole—that is the way you smell to others!

THE most scrupulous care cannot protect you, charming as you are, from the unpleasantness of perspiration odor if you deodorize only. You can test this easily tonight. When you take off your dress, simply smell the fabric under the arm.

If you have been deodorizing only, the chances are 9 out of 10 that you'll discover a musty, stale "armhole odor" in your dress.

Unless you keep your underarm dry, as well as sweet, it is inevitable that some perspiration will collect and dry on the armhole of your dress. This need happen only once, yet every time you put that dress on, the warmth of your body will bring out the odor of stale perspiration. That odor is what other people notice when you are near them!

Protect yourself this SURE way... With Liquid Odorono, your underarm is not only odorless, but absolutely dry. Your dresses will never collect those little drops of moisture which can undo all the other measures you take for flawless loveliness.

Saves your expensive gowns... Liquid Odorono puts an end forever to those shocking perspiration stains which can fade and ruin a lovely frock or coat, in just one wearing. And of course, there is no grease to make your clothes messy.

Odorono is entirely safe. In two strengths—Regular and Instant, at all toilet-goods counters. Price 35¢. Send today for samples and leaflet.

"Can I possibly smell like that to others," she wondered.

RUTH MILLER, The Odorono Co., Inc.
Dept. CT, 191 Hudson St., New York City
(In Canada, address P. O. Box 2320, Montreal)

I enclose 8¢ for samples of Instant and Regular Odorono and leaflet on complete underarm dryness.

4 OIL BURNER "MUSTS" THAT CUT FUEL COSTS

Only Oil-O-Matic Has Them!

I REFUSE TO SHOVEL COAL NEXT WINTER! I'M INSTALLING OIL-O-MATIC NOW!

"Mutiny in the basement"

DON'T be content to buy an oil burner that burns oil in the ordinary, old fashioned wasteful way. Williams Oil-O-Matic offers you outstanding advantages that provide quietness, cleanliness, comfort, freedom from oily smell and soot . . . plus fuel savings up to 25%.

And remember, you get these advantages only in Oil-O-Matic. You get (1) Oil Control. Oil-O-Matic's famous Metering Pump measures oil drop by drop. You're free from the old slip-shod method that takes no account of the difference between thick and thin oil. (2) Air Control. Oil-O-Matic mixes exactly the right amount of air with the oil, thus preventing two great fuel wastes—heat-sent-up-the-chimney and half-burned oil with resulting soot and oily film. (3) Low Pressure Atomization. A basic improvement over other methods. It avoids the wear, tear and waste of high pressure operation. Does away with pin-point nozzle openings that dribble and clog. Allows you to burn the heavy, low cost fuel oil and wring every drop of heat from it.

Resolve to mutiny now against next winter's furnace tending. Order Oil-O-Matic before August 15th. You get FREE a handsome $35.00 value TEM-CLOCK, the newest, most efficient development in electric temperature control. You get too, full advantage of this Summer Easy Payment Plan—no down payment, no monthly payments till October 1st, low interest rates under F. H. A. and up to three years to pay. Oil-O-Matic can be easily installed in your present heating plant. Write or 'phone your nearest Oil-O-Matic dealer now for full information.

Today, most tooth decay can be prevented

TODAY, there is a new purpose in the care of teeth and gums. It is not merely to make teeth look well, and not merely to sweeten the breath. The new purpose is to prevent tooth decay.

Not so many years ago, a statement of this purpose would have been only an extravagant hope. Today, the House of Squibb offers a simple plan by which most tooth decay can be prevented. Already adopted by millions of men, women and children, it carries the weight of dental and medical authority. We urge you to use it.

An important part of the plan is the use of a scientific dentifrice, such as Squibb Dental Cream which costs no more and requires no more time to use than an ordinary dentifrice.

Squibb Dental Cream contains an ingredient which neutralizes the bacterial acids that cause decay, wherever it comes in contact with them. It works deep down into many tiny crevices where the toothbrush fails to reach.

After using Squibb Dental Cream, the mouth feels delightfully fresh, the teeth have a clean beauty and lustre.

And now the House of Squibb has developed a scientific tooth powder—containing the same essential elements as Squibb Dental Cream. This means that the same benefits may today be had by those who prefer a dentifrice in powder form.

Begin today. Follow the Squibb Plan—and every time you brush your teeth, remember this important fact: most tooth decay can be prevented.

THE SQUIBB PLAN
by which
MOST TOOTH DECAY
CAN BE PREVENTED

1. Go to your dentist and follow his advice. This will include the kind of toothbrush to use, and how to use it; what kind of dentifrice to use, and what kind not to use; and whether you should supplement your own home treatment with the use of dental floss and oral perborate.

2. Check your diet with your physician or dentist—to be sure your system is getting the elements essential to the health and strength of your teeth.

3. Brush your teeth thoroughly, at least twice a day, and be sure you use a dentifrice scientifically prepared to clean teeth effectively, and safely.

START TODAY

on the Squibb Plan for the care of the teeth and gums. It costs little and may prevent pain, ill health and expense later in life.
